MINNESOTA NEWS.

Hotel Burns.

For the eighth time in twenty-three years, the old St. James hotel at Duluth was swept by fire. Sixty-five guests were sleeping in the hotel at 3:30 in the morning, when the fire was discovered. The firemen and police saved many persons who otherwise would have been cremated.

Among the guests that had narrow escapes was J. A. Odell and wife of Philadelphia. He is a cousin of Gov. Odell of New York.

There were two theatrical companies in the house—"The Sign of the Cross" and "The Curse of Drink." The theatrical people made merry over the loss of clothing and other articles of value.

Everyone of the guests got down the fire escapes, with the aid of the police and firemen, but none of them had time to dress. Some of the actresses in the theatrical companies carried their outer clothing to the street before donning it, and using a plate store window for a mirror.

The wolves entered the yard late in the afternoon and the pack was composed of about twenty. After surrounding the deer they attacked it, forcing it to leave the yard and run to the woods, the beasts running after it at the top of their speed.

THE INSURANCE INSPECTOR.

His Duty to Find Out How Much Liquor Applicants Drink.

Not much is known by the general public, says the Brooklyn Eagle, nor indeed by the applicant for life insurance himself, about the inspector employed by all large companies. This man is charged with the duty of examining the application and determining the truth of the statements made therein concerning the style of life and personal habits of the applicant. As might be imagined, the inspector encounters many queer examples of inaccuracy, ranging from the statement carelessly made without due thought to that which is purposely intended to deceive. His work is entirely apart from that of the company's medical examiner and has largely to do with the question of drink, though it covers many other matters.

Insurance companies are not total abstinence societies, but theoretically the safe limit of risk is not over three ounces of whisky or its equivalent a day. Agents know this, or are supposed to, but in their enthusiasm to write as much insurance as possible they frequently accept any statement made by the applicant, who in answer to the question as to how many drinks he takes in a day is just as apt as not to reply, "Oh, about a dozen."

As an excuse for sending in such an application the agent says that it is understood that one man may safely drink more than another and that the size of the drink also makes a difference. Here comes in the work of the inspector. He must find out what the applicant's drink measures on the average, but it may be said that "a dozen drinks a day" of whatever size are far too many for the inspector, who indeed generally sends in an unfavorable report on a very much smaller number.

It is the practice of these inspectors to make the rounds of the saloons every little while to ask barkeepers how many drinks are contained in a bottle of whisky. This number varies curiously in different localities, but a fair average may be taken as from twelve to eighteen in each bottle. The bottle being a quart or near it, this means that the average drink is scarcely ever less than two ounces and sometimes more. The company's objection to take a man who drinks during the day is that, while his drinks may at first be very small and may not increase in number, the size of each is very likely to become greater, to a point which renders the risk unsafe in a few years.

MISSISSIPPI'S BANE.

Judge Miller Lays Her Awful Murder Record to Whisky.

Judge D. N. Miller's charge to the grand jury of Hinds county has aroused widespread interest in Mississippi. The eminent jurist made the plain charge that Mississippi leads all the states in the Union in the number of homicides committed this year.

"I took occasion to keep account of the murders committed in Mississippi in six months," said Judge Miller to the [illegible] men were killed. It is reasonable to suppose that the same ratio has been kept up since then.

"We lead the states regardless of population in the number of murders committed. No people can continue to enjoy prosperity with this carnival of crime going on.

"The cause for this terrible state of affairs is the fact that the people of Mississippi have too much money with which to gamble and to buy whisky.

"The value of negro labor has never been so high, and the negro feels, because he knows his boss will protect him, that he can kill another negro. As long as a negro feels that he can take the life of another negro and his boss will protect him, he will kill with impunity."

ANTITREATING LEAGUE.

Application For Leave to Incorporate Filed at Springfield, Ill.

An application for leave to incorporate a society to be known as the Antitreating League of America was recently filed with the secretary of state of Illinois at Springfield. The applicants for the license, who were also named as the first board of directors, were Reed M. Hindman, Albert K. Draper, Arthur B. McCold and W. H. Kinney of Chicago and H. L. Draper of Benton Harbor, Mich.

The application sets forth that the society has for its object the promoting of temperance "by agreeing to refrain from the pernicious general custom of treating one another or others to any intoxicating liquors in barrooms and to decline acceptance of all such so-called courtesies from others;" also that it "is formed for the mutual benefit of the members of the association by promoting sociability, advancement and brotherly love and protecting and assisting our comembers, by providing for relief in case of injury or death by accident to any member."

Alcoholism in German Schools.

Its author, Dr. Goldfield, is medical officer of the public schools of Schoeneberg, a suburb of Berlin, and his examination included 967 children, [illegible] of whom were in a boys' school and [illegible] in a girls' school. Of these [illegible], or [illegible] per cent, were accustomed to drink from one to two glasses of beer daily, while 283, or 30.9 per cent, took spirits more or less frequently. The favorite beverage was malt beer, but all kinds of beer and various kinds of spirits were taken, the sweeter liquors being preferred by the girls. Dr. Goldfield was informed by the teachers that the children addicted to the use of spirits were especially lazy, absentminded and inclined to lying.—Harper's Weekly.

A Dangerous Cargo.

Lime is one of the most dangerous of cargoes for a vessel to carry. When it catches fire, as it frequently does, in spite of the greatest precautions against the admission of water into the hold, it is almost impossible to extinguish it. The only remedy is that every air hole is [illegible] and sometimes this will stop the fire, but often these fires will burn for weeks till the vessel sinks beneath the water, a mass of charred embers holding together. When a vessel with a cargo of lime once catches fire it is sure death to go below. Not long ago a schooner with a cargo of this commodity caught fire and was sealed up as tightly as possible. The crew was composed of the captain and his two sons. One day the latter went to sleep on the deck, and their father imprudently entered his cabin, shutting the door behind him. When they awakened and found their father missing they, supposing that he had fallen overboard, sailed the ship for home, quite unconscious that they were bearing the body of their father with them.

Writing and Dictation.

The modern method of letter writing composition through the agency of the stenographer is having a peculiar effect upon the popular use of the language. It must be evident to even the noncritical observer that carelessness and diffuseness of expression have become a feature and a fault of correspondence, from the reproach of which it was quite free in the earlier days, when pen and ink were directly employed by the individual to the end of giving form and coherence to his idea. Probably when dictation under the present system becomes more of a fixed habit and institution the human mind will become so accustomed to it that it will operate more rapidly and as accurately with such assistance as under the old plan in which the writer only dictated to himself. Yet to him with whom pen and ink have always been potent solvents of thought the change involved in dictation must bring with it a serious embarrassement in the matter of adequately denoting one's thoughts.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Ingenious Printer.

It requires a great deal of ingenuity to become a successful printer. Boys with printing presses and ambitious to develop into great printers should remember this and exercise their inventive qualities at every opportunity.

A story is told of a Prague printer who got himself out of a very disagreeable dilemma by the use of his ingenious mind. He was once called upon to print a report of the board of trade of his native city in the two languages of the country, German and Czech, and the representatives of each nationality strenuously desired that their tongue should occupy the first of the parallel columns on each page. The wary printer got out of his dilemma by printing one column upside down throughout the book and arranging the titles accordingly, so that each language had a front column on every page.

"Recently he wanted to get a superintendent for a certain new department that he had established. He thought he knew the man for the superintendency, an assistant to one of his colleagues. He sent for the colleague and said:

"'I am setting up, you know, a certain new department. I shall want a new superintendent. I think Brown, in your office, would fill the place very well indeed.'

"'I am sure he would,' said the other. 'The only trouble is, Mr. Morgan, Brown can't be spared.'

The following [illegible] is told by a full blood who is well posted on Indian affairs: "Government safeguards have been the bane of the Indian. Instead of being taught to rely upon himself he has been encouraged to be dependent. The government should have pushed him off to his own resources long ago, as a cow does her calf when it is old enough to rustle for itself. The government should have given the Indian 160 acres, together with a mule and a plow, in the beginning and enjoined him to 'root, hog, or die.' Turn him loose. Let him go and work out his own salvation. Sentiment and misguided philanthropy will never save him. He must save himself."—Kansas City Journal.

Gondola Willie.

When Emperor William was younger he used to sound alarms at odd hours and turn up all available army corps to march past or maneuver when they least expected it. On one such occasion the garrison included a detachment of submarine crews, and the emperor came along accoutered as an admiral.

He was standing among a group of shivering officers when one veteran took him for some other worthy sailor. He slapped him on the back.

"I see that Gondola Willie has fished up the aquarium this morning," he observed pleasantly.

They attribute the cessation of sudden alarms to that incident.

Jupiter's Big Red Blotch.

In 1878 something happened on Jupiter which caused a red blotch to appear in his southern hemisphere near one of the great belts that cross his disk like huge bands of colored clouds. It was 30,000 miles long and 8,000 miles broad, yet, after all, only a little patch on the mighty disk! It has remained ever since, sometimes brightening to almost the crimson hue of fire and sometimes fading nearly to invisibility, yet always, even when faintest, certifying its presence and its power by keeping the area originally covered by it clear of all other objects.—Success.

Breeding Insects For Wax.

Among the queer industries of China is that of breeding wax producing insects in the Chienchang valley during May. But the insects will not work in their birthplace and have to be carried 400 miles in gourds by porters traveling only by night. There are thousands of insects in the gourds and wrapped in leaves picked from the wood oil tree. His journey ended, the porter immediately goes to his master and delivers his burden of gourds. At once the leafy bags are tied to the branches of the ash trees, which are only five or six feet high. By Sept. 1 the trees look as if covered with snow. It is a snow, however, not amenable to the temperatures which wipe out ordinary snow. The branches are then cut off, and their quarter of an inch of pure white coating is scraped off. The wax is heated, strained and turned into molds to be used for lighting, furniture polish and imparting gloss to silk.—St. James' Gazette.

The Lines on Sardine Boxes.

If you are fond of sardines, here is something that will be useful for you to know. On nearly every box containing these delicacies will be found two parallel lines cut in the top. The distance between the lines denotes the size of the fish, whether those in the tin are small, medium or large. Of course the smaller the sardines the better is their flavor, and therefore the boxes with the lines close together contain the finest fish. Some dishonest firms are very fond of selling pilchards to their customers and calling them sardines, but if you make up your mind never to buy a box unless it has the two closely drawn lines you may be certain of obtaining the article you asked for.—London Standard.

Her manner was always most gracious and dignified, perhaps rather languid, but this arose chiefly from lack of vitality or physical strength."

A Story of Sam Houston.

There is a story about General Sam Houston of Texas and a practicing physician who did not like the old general, being strenuously opposed to him politically. One day after a heated political discussion the physician said, "General, I like you well enough socially, but politically I would not believe you on earth." "I would believe you, doctor," was the quiet reply of the general. "Then, sir," vehemently exclaimed the doctor, "you have a much better opinion of me than I have of you." "Not a better opinion, doctor, but I simply have a little more politeness than you have."

Sage Advice.

"Now you're your own master," said the wise father, "you must begin to build up a reputation for yourself."

"All right, governor," replied the youth.

"And remember," continued the old gentleman, "you can't build up a reputation with the bricks you bring home in your hat."—Exchange.

Iced Apples With Cream.

Pare and core six large apples and [illegible] in a sirup made of one cup of sugar and two of water. When they are tender lift them out and cover with a thin layer of meringue. Sift a little sugar over this and let it brown slightly. Reduce by boiling the sirup until there is one and a half gills left. When this is cold it will be a firm jelly. Cut into squares and place on and about the apples. Serve cold with sugar and cream.

To Remove Scorch From Linen.

The following is an excellent mixture for taking scorching out:

One-half ounce of white soap, two ounces of fuller's earth, the juice of two onions and half a pint of vinegar.

Boil these things together for a few minutes. Spread on the scorched parts with a knife and allow it to dry on, when the stain will disappear. Keep covered in a jar for future use.

To Remove Paint.

While fresh, paint may be removed by repeated applications of spirits of turpentine or spirits of wine, rubbed on with a rag. Another method is to rub the spots with paraffin oil. Boil quickly till the stains disappear. They require to be well rinsed in several waters to get rid of the smell of the oil.

Toast Coffee For Invalids.

A Bird Friendship.

The rector of Woolstone, Mr. Gilbert Coventry, told me of a wild rock dove which one of his stable boys had reared from the nest. It slept in the open however, and had full liberty. Soon the good things on the rector's table attracted it, and it would appear through the open window at mealtimes, take hot soup with much zest and even sip sherry from a wineglass. At night it often slipped in and slept in the rector's bed on its back under the coverlet. One Sunday morning during the reading of the lesson the dove flew swiftly through an open window into the church and settled on the rector's head. Broad smiles spread over the faces of the elders, and audible titters came from the youngsters. A gentle touch sent the bird down to the edge of the clerk's desk below, where it sat until service ended.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Translated Into Vernacular.

"Cap'n" Jotham Slow had strong objections to what he called "the new minister's high talk." Since his settlement over the Clamtown parish Cap'n Jotham had been heard to say that "church was for them that needed it," and his conduct seemed to imply that he was not of that number.

Cap'n Jotham's own language was of a primitive and unadorned variety, and nothing pleased him more than a chance to translate the minister's remarks to Cap'n Wilson Pegg, the best Clamtown story teller. Cap'n Pegg was deaf, and the minister's voice often failed to reach him.

One night at a neighborhood gathering Cap'n Pegg in the course of a vivid narrative had referred to "the big fire."

"Was it the consensus of opinion," said the minister in a mild and ineffectual tone, "that the conflagration was the result of some accident or the work of an incendiary?"

"Hey?" said Cap'n Pegg, staring dully at the minister and then turning to his faithful friend for light.

"What he wants to know," called Cap'n Slow in his shrillest tone, "is whether the big fire was sot or ketched!"—Youth's Companion.

Nerve Fag.

If You Waste Your Nerve Energy, After Awhile You Will Suffer For It.

You can waste nerve force by excess, over-work, worry, anxiety, etc.

You can weaken yourself by not eating proper food or securing sufficient rest to renew the nerve energy you use up.

The proper treatment, in addition to good phosphatic food, such as whole meal bread, prepared cereals, etc., is Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

This is as truly a brain and nerve food as any food you could eat, and besides, furnishes strength and tone of its own, which goes to the weakened nerve system, and sets it to rights.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a refreshing, revitalizing tonic food-medicine for the brain and nerves. It reconstructs worn-out nerve tissue, and fills your languid brain with new life and vigor.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has made so many marvelous cures, of people so sick the doctors thought they were incurable, that it is today the standard medicine in many thousands of American homes.

The first bottle is guaranteed to help you, or druggist returns your money.

"The extreme heat, close confinement and intense mental strain incident to the banking business, has caused me to suffer with nervousness and insomnia. It gives me pleasure to say that I have used Dr. Miles' Nervine with very satisfactory results in the treatment of these affections. They were on a golf course not far from Glasgow. "A splendid stroke! Caddie, did you follow that ball?" said the player who had just driven. "Naw, sir," replied the caddie, "but I think that gentleman wi' the red coat can tell you where it struck. I see him feelin' his head."

It is told that while John Sharp Williams was speaking in Mississippi a man in the audience cried: "I've been robbed by pickpockets!" "I did not suspect there were any republicans present," said Mr. Williams, amid great laughter. "There ain't," cried the victim. "I'm the only one!"

Lord Erskine, when chief justice of England, presided once at the Chelmsford assizes, when a case of breach of promise of marriage was tried before him in which a Miss Tickell was plaintiff. The counsel was a pompous young man named Stanton, who opened the case with solemn emphasis thus: "Tickell, the plaintiff, my lord." Erskine dryly interrupted him with: "Oh, tickle her yourself, Mr. Stanton. It would be unbecoming to my position."

Senator Stockbridge, of Michigan, often told a story of a very rich lumberman who came to congress from the lake region and rented the furnished house which belonged to a senator whose term had recently expired. The house was a palace and was completely furnished, all except the library, for the senator had taken his books with him. True to the instincts of a lifetime of carefulness, the lumberman-congressman surveyed the library, then accurately measured the empty shelves and telegraphed a prominent house in Chicago: "Send me at once 216 running feet of books." That was his idea of furnishing a library.

HABIT'S CHAIN.

Certain Habits Unconsciously Formed and Hard to Break.

An ingenious philosopher estimates that the amount of will power necessary to break a life-long habit would, if it could be transformed, lift a weight of many tons.

It sometimes requires a higher degree of heroism to break the chains of a pernicious habit than to lead a forlorn hope in a bloody battle. A lady writes from an Indiana town:

"From my earliest childhood I was a lover of coffee. Before I was out of my teens I was a miserable dyspeptic, suffering terribly at times with my stomach.

"I was convinced that it was coffee that was causing the trouble and yet I could not deny myself a cup for breakfast. At the age of 36 I was in very poor health, indeed. My Sister told me I was in danger of becoming a coffee drunkard.

"But I never could give up drinking coffee for breakfast although it kept me constantly ill, until I tried Postum. I learned to make it properly according to directions, and now we can hardly do without Postum for breakfast, and care nothing at all for coffee.

"I am no longer troubled with dyspepsia, do not have spells of suffering with my stomach that used to trouble me so when I drank coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

WASHINGTON LETTER

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NAMING THE NEW CABINET

Names of the Men Are Coming Out One at a Time—Inadequate Government Salaries — Other Washington Gossip.

WASHINGTON.—One by one the members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet after the 4th of March is being announced. The president is unique in this as he is in most of his actions. When he makes up his mind on any subject he at once takes the public into his confidence. Just as soon as he received assurances from Secretary Hay and Attorney General Moody that they would serve in his cabinet after the 4th of March, he gave the fact to the press and the appointment of these officials was settled as definitely as though their names had gone into the senate for confirmation.

The last announcement is that Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, will continue at the head of that department for some time at least. This policy of the president to pick the members of his present cabinet and announce their continuance in office is rather tantalizing to those who have not yet received the presidential invitation. Secretary Shaw, of the treasury department, seems likely to stay, but he does not know. Mr. Roosevelt has not tendered him a formal invitation to remain at the head of the treasury department, and Mr. Shaw is on the anxious seat. With his customary frankness the president has informed Mr. Shaw that he may ask him to remain, but contingencies may arise that would make it advisable to select somebody else for the place. Secretaries Wilson and Hitchcock are in the same predicament.

Mr. Morton is making a big sacrifice financially by staying in the cabinet. His salary as vice president of the Santa Fe system was $36,000 a year, while as secretary of the navy he receives but $8,000. His official salary merely pays the rent of the house he occupies, which is that of the late Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, and one of the most commodious in Washington.

Official Salaries.

THERE has been no end of talk about the inadequate salaries paid officials and various measures have been introduced in congress at this session to increase the pay all along the line. The spirit of economy, however, that has originated with the president and has extended to leaders in congress will hardly permit of any material advance being made in the way of public officials, although it is often charged that congressmen are very willing to practice economy in every line of expenditure except that which affects themselves.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who leaves the senate next March, feels that he cannot be charged with any personal interest in salary increases; so he is pressing a bill to raise the salary of the president to $100,000 a year; that of the vice president and speaker of the house to $20,000, and that of each senator, representative and delegate to $10,000; these salaries to go into effect after March 4, 1909. This measure doubles the president's salary and those of the members of congress, while it adds $12,000 a year to the salaries of the vice president and speaker of the house.

The demands of society on officials in Washington are responsible for this agitation for increased compensation. It is maintained that a member of congress cannot live here in proper style on their present salaries of $5,000 a year. This argument does not appeal very strongly in the majority of congressional districts, where $5,000 a year is regarded as a pretty fair income. It all depends on the members themselves whether that amount of money can meet their expenses in Washington. If the congressman so desires he can live quietly and not use more than half of his salary for domestic expenses in this city. President Pro Tem Frye, of the senate, Senator Cockrell, the late Senator Hoar and others have given proof for many years that it is possible for men to maintain high positions in public life on a very limited income.

Incidents in the House.

THERE are some odd experiences met with in the house. That body is a sort of clearing-house for strange incidents, as frequently there occur reunions of old friends who are boyhood companions and then drift apart for a generation to meet again in the national legislature. This is true of many members from western states who were born in the east and drifted to the west while young men and boys. Pennsylvania has furnished a large number of national legislators in other states who can meet and exchange reminiscences and experiences of their early days in the keystone state. Senator Clarke, of Montana; Senator Burrows, of Michigan; Senator Bard, of California; Senator Long, of Kansas, and a half dozen members of the house were all born in Pennsylvania, and they sometimes get together and discuss the state of their birth.

Representative Wadsworth, of New York, had an interesting experience the other day when Representative Dwight, of the same state, presented him with some highly cherished mementoes of his father. Mr. Wadsworth is a son of Gen. James S. Wadsworth, who was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. The general had sent his orderly back from the front to get some dinner for him and it was brought, together a silver fork, spoon and a silver handled knife marked with the Wadsworth monogram. Thirty minutes after the general had eaten his dinner he was shot and killed. The orderly kept the knife, fork and spoon, but at the close of the war he deposited them with the clerk of his home county, as he did not know any Wadsworths, but did not feel like keeping silver that did not belong to him.

The county clerk tied the silver up in a piece of paper, tagged it and put it into the safe. There it had remained since the war until last fall when Representative Dwight, of that district, was told about it. Mr. Dwight got the silver and brought it with him to Washington a few weeks ago and presented it to Representative Wadsworth, who was greatly delighted to receive this memento of his distinguished father.

Addition to the Zoo.

THE national zoo has just received a missing link in the shape of four lemurs. Members of three rare species, and the only specimens of their kind in the United States. As the apes are said to be the connecting link between man and the monkeys, so, in like manner, the lemurs bridge over the gap between the monkeys and lower mammals. These little animals have come from far distant Madagascar. They were purchased by the zoo of a leading importer in New York. They are an interesting collection and attract great attention at the zoo. They resemble a monkey with the head of a raccoon. Like their cousins, the monkeys, they are night prowlers, fruit eaters and jungle dwellers. They are reddish brown in color and have a hairy ruff or collar about their necks.

The national zoo is rapidly accumulating a collection of animals equal to that of any zoological institution in the world. It is not generally known that at present there are on exhibition in the zoo [illegible] 30 distinct species of animals and [illegible] that are the only specimens of their kind in the two Americas. Among the curiosities are several animals [illegible] Menelik, of Abyssinia, [illegible] sent Roosevelt. One of these is a zeb[illegible] which was a pet about Emperor Menelik's palace in Addis Abeba, the capital city of Abyssinia. He shows his training and is quite tame and gentle, and is easily led about by a halter. Buffalo Bill last summer contributed a herd of 15 buffaloes to the zoo and all of them are in excellent condition. The herd has been increased to 16 by the birth of a calf.

Cockrell in Favor.

FOR a man whose congressional career was cut short by the recent republican landslide, Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, is finding a most rosy pathway. He is still honored by his democratic colleagues and finds deep sympathy and substantial recognition from his old opponents, the republicans. The senator's conduct during the recent campaign was such as to raise him in the estimation of President Roosevelt, and may have had something to do with the latter's generous treatment in offering him the choice of two desirable government positions, that of a Panama canal commissioner, or a member of the interstate commerce commission. At the beginning of the last campaign a friend asked Senator Cockrell what his plans were.

"I shall make a few speeches," said he, "but I am not going ouside this state. They have been urging me to pitch into President Roosevelt in the course of my speeches. I will not do it. We had a judge out here in Missouri who gained great fame by his virulent attacks upon Garfield during the campaign of 1880. When Garfield was assassinated that judge delivered an address in eulogy of the dead president that was said to be the finest thing of the kind uttered. Well, I am not going to attack the personality of President Roosevelt. I won't do it."

Some of the senator's democratic friends in Missouri are inclined to attribute the capture of the state by the republicans to the fact that Senator Cockrell and men like him would not descend to the personal abuse campaign. The senator is content to accept his defeat if it resulted from following such an honorable course. He has not finally decided whether he will accept the canal commissionership or a seat on the interstate commerce commission. There has recently been a good deal of talk about reducing the canal commission to a membership of three on the grounds that it is at present an unwieldy body and only one or two of its members spend any considerable time on the isthmus. There is a disposition in the present period of economy and reform to have men drawing $12,000 a year salary perform the work that congress intended for them.

HE DID THE TALKING.

And His Self-Importance Blinded Him to the Possibility of a Mistake.

A lively-looking porter stood on the rear platform of a sleeping car in the Pennsylvania station, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, when a fussy and choleric old man clambered up the steps. He stopped at the door, puffed for a moment and then turned to the young man in uniform.

"Porter," he said, "I'm going to St. Louis, to the fair. I want to be well taken care of. I pay for it. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir, but—"

"Never mind any 'buts.' You listen to what I say. Keep the train boys away from me. Dust me off whenever I want you to. Give me an extra blanket, and if there is anyone in the berth over me, slide him into another. I want you to—"

"But, say, boss, I—"

"Young man, when I'm giving instructions I prefer to do the talking myself. You do as I say. Here is a two-dollar bill. I want to get the good of it. Not a word, sir."

The train was starting. The porter pocketed the bill with a grin and swung himself to the ground.

"All right, boss!" he shouted. "You can do the talking if you want to. I'm powerful sorry you wouldn't let me tell you—but I ain't going out on that train."

GAVE HIS MAN MUCH TIME

He Could Take Sixteen Hours a Day to Do His Work If He Required It.

Judge Saunderson, who is practicing law in Everett, Wash., formerly lived in Kentland, Ind., the boyhood home of George Ade, the humorist, relates Success Magazine.

"Ade was a peculiar character, in his younger years," says the judge. "He made my office a sort of a loafing place during the little time he spent in loafing. He was employed on a farm owned by a banker. One day he walked into the office and said to me:

"'That man is the best I ever worked for.'

"'Why?' I asked, for I knew that something funny was coming from Ade.

"'Well,' he replied, 'he doesn't ask a man to do a day's work in ten hours—he gives him 16.'

"As a boy we didn't suppose that Ade would amount to much," continued the judge, "though his drollery was always amusing."

Dyspepsia Was Thriving.

Now and then Marshall P. Wilder will have a touch of indigestion; but the trouble in nowise dampens his spirits.

One day when the humorist was suffering in a mild degree a friend, meeting him for the second time in the afternoon, asked:

"Well, Marshall, how's the dyspepsia now?"

"Very nicely, thank you," was the reply; "but I am not so well myself."—Sunday Magazine.

The Louisiana (Mo.) Press-Journal tells of a negro bootblack who was being "joshed" in a barber shop the other day. "If the grand jury had got at you," said a man, "it would have made you tell all about your crap shooting." "No dey wouldn't," replied the bootblack, "'cause de court done held dat a man doan' hab to tell nothin' dat cremates hisself."—Kansas City Journal.

Shouting Their Praises.

Kirkland, Ill., Jan. 2nd.—(Special)—Cured of the terrible Rheumatic pains that made him a cripple for years, Mr. Richard R. Greenhon, an old and respected resident of this place, is shouting the praises of the remedy that cured him, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had the rheumatism in my left limb so that I could not walk over ten to fifteen rods at a time, and that by the use of two canes," Mr. Greenhon says. "I would have to sit or lie down on the ground when I was out trying to walk, and the sweat would run down my face, with so much pain. I could not sleep at night for about five or six weeks.

"I tried different doctors' medicines, but they were all no good. Then I sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills and almost from the first they brought relief. By the time I had taken fourteen boxes of them my rheumatism was all gone and I can truly say I feel better than I have in the last twenty-five years."

Noiseless.

"I see it's claimed that the backbone of the Panama rebellion has been broken."

"Backbone? Say, that must have been a soft snap."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ULCERS FOR THIRTY YEARS.

Painful Eruptions from Knees to Feet Seemed Incurable Until He Used Cuticura.

Another of those remarkable cures by Cuticura, after doctors and all else had failed, is testified to by Mr. M. C. Moss, of Gainesville, Texas, in the following letter: "For over thirty years I suffered from painful ulcers and an eruption from my knees to feet, and could find neither doctors nor medicine to help me, until I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, which cured me in six months. They helped me the very first time I used them, and I am glad to write this so that others suffering as I did may be saved from misery."

SISTERS OF CHARITY

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

In every country of the civilized world Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir: "The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured." —Sisters of Charity.

The young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat with good results as the above letter testifies.

The following letter is from Congressman Meekison, of Napoleon, Ohio:

Gentlemen: "I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first man to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

VOL. 4. GULLY, POLK COUNTY, MINN., FRIDAY, JAN. 13, 1905. NO. 44.

HAPPENINGS OF A WEEK IN BRIEF

SUMMARY OF MOST INTERESTING EVENTS OF PAST SEVEN DAYS.

WHAT CONGRESS IS DOING

Progress of the Russo-Japanese War in the Far East—News from All Parts of the Union and the Latest Foreign Intelligence.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Both houses of congress reconvened after the holiday recess. In the senate a resolution was introduced reciting some of the assertions of Thomas W. Lawson and Judge Alton B. Parker concerning campaign contributions and asking the judiciary committee to inquire into the allegations. The house session was brief, adjournment being taken out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Mahoney, of Illinois.

Congressman Mann, of Illinois, introduced a bill in the house to abolish the Panama canal commission.

The joint statehood bill occupied the major portion of the attention of the senate. Bills for the reorganization of the medical corps of the army and regulating promotions of army officers in the ordnance department were passed. The house tabled a resolution requiring the secretary of agriculture to furnish certain information regarding cotton statistics.

The house committee on appropriations has reported the fortifications bill, carrying $6,747,893, which is $770,290 less than appropriated at the last session. The estimates aggregated $10,458,570.

Senator Bard occupied the entire time of the United States senate in discussion of the joint statehood bill. Several bills of minor importance were passed. The house passed the fortifications appropriation bill.

The nomination of W. D. Crum, a negro, to be collector of customs for the port of Charleston, S. C., was confirmed Crum has been nominated by the president three times and in addition has received three recess appointments.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

T[illegible] surrender of Port Arthur provide that the officers may return to Russia under parole, bearing their side arms, but the privates and noncommissioned officers will be taken to Japan as prisoners of war. Japan is to possess everything left in the citadel.

The capture of Port Arthur cost Russians 11,000 slain and Japanese 50,000 killed and wounded.

Gen. Nogi finds he has 35,000 prisoners at Port Arthur, of whom 21,000 are sick and are being succored by Japanese.

The weight of opinion in Japanese official circles seems to be against a belief in the early conclusion of peace, and doubt is expressed that the fall of Port Arthur will materially affect the situation.

Japan has made no overtures for peace to Russia, directly or indirectly, through the United States or any other power and contemplates no such action, and now that Port Arthur has fallen proposes to press the war in the north all the more vigorously.

Only 80 Russian officers, captured at Port Arthur, have accepted parole. All the regular Russian troops have marched out of Port Arthur and left for Port Dalny. Japanese troops entered the city to keep order.

News of the fall of Port Arthur causes all Russians to resent the talk of peace which comes from outside sources.

The loss of Port Arthur is causing much muttering against the government in Russia, and it is intimated that a crisis may be approaching. In Moscow a crowd stoned the palace of Grand Duke Sergius.

Gen. Stoessel will have to stand trial by court-martial for surrendering the fortress of Port Arthur.

The Japs have begun to refortify Port Arthur to make it impregnable against Russians.

The czar, after a council with his ministers, decided that the war must be carried on with renewed energy and that Russia will send 200,000 fresh men to Kuropatkin's aid as soon as possible.

THE KOCH TRIAL.

State is Harassed at Every Point in an Endeavor to Introduce Evidence.

New Ulm, Jan. 9.—The most sensational feature of the case which the lime light of investigation has shown up was given in evidence Saturday. It hinges on the bottle of poison which Dr. Gebhardt received by mail only a week before the murder.

According to the testimony of Lydia Schapekamp, some two or three weeks before his death Dr. Gebhardt received from the Park-Davis company of Minneapolis a small sample bottle of dentifoam tooth paste, largely used by dentists, and according to the books of that company, a similar bottle was sent contemporaneously to Dr. Koch.

Later, and only a few days before the murder, Dr. Gebhardt received some poisonous headache powder in a bottle, identically the same in appearance as the one which he received two weeks previously.

The state will show, it is believed, that Dr. Koch actually received a complimentary sample from the Minneapolis drug house, and they will call upon him to produce his bottle. If he is able to do that, he will be a free man, the stigma of the murder charge will be wiped out and the case may be dropped. If, however, on the contrary, he cannot do this, it will mean another link in the chain of circumstantial evidence which has already partly been made up.

The allegation made by the prosecution is that Dr. Koch sent the poison in the bottle which he had received from Minneapolis at the same time as did the victim.

Can Dr. Koch produce this bottle? Nothing is as yet known. Nothing will be learned until the climax arrives and then if he can, there is no hesitation in saying that he will be acquitted.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Street Car Panic.

A panic was created in a Seventh street car at Seventh and Franklin streets, St. Paul, by the burning of the motor underneath the car. About ninety persons were in the car at the time and several were badly bruised and cut about the arms and hands.

Jacob Pinger, aged seventeen years, was taken to the city hospital suffering from loss of blood from cuts on the hands. Later he went to his home, 681 Randolph street. Mrs. Geo. Dupree was also cut about the arms and hands while climbing through a window. She was not seriously injured and was taken to her home on Danforth street. The names of the other injured persons could not be learned as they hurried from the scene shortly after the occurrence.

The panic started when flames burst from underneath the car at Seventh and Franklin streets. Immediately after this there was a rumbling noise beneath the car and all the wires about spurted thousands of sparks.

A Close Call.

The family of Leon Lillie, who resides near Chatfield, had a narrow escape from being burned in their home. Mr. Lillie was awakened about four o'clock by the cracking of flames and rushing up stairs found the entire second story on fire. His wife and two little daughters already were unconscious from the smoke. He succeeded in carrying them outside but the were unable to save anything except the clothes in which they had retired for the night. Mr. and Mrs. Lillie both had their feet badly frozen before they were able to reach the house of the nearest neigbor. The Lillie home was a total loss, amounting to about $1,500. There was some insurance.

As he uttered the words he said to Mr. McNulty, "I feel a pain in my side," and then he fell to the sidewalk.

The Legislature, is begining to talk of an extra session, but three Months is enough to satisfy the people.

The prospect is good for a large appropiation for drainage at this session of the legislature, and then it will be. All pitch in and get your share.

The recent change in the management of the Crookston Daily Journal, has had the affect to improve instead of detract from it's previous high standard, of being one of the best dailys published in Northern Minnesota here's success to the new proprietors, Crawford & Berklund,

It would be a pretty difficult matter to convince the people of the Northern part of the state that a change in the office of state surveyor would be to their interest as they are well satisfied with the work done by Mr. Ralph. We are of the opinion that some of those who voted for the presant Governor, would make a wry face should he be removed and a stranger appointed in his place.

Offical's of Clearwater county who quarantined the residence of Charles Lambert last week, and left the quarantined residents in the house with a dead body, for over a week have laid themselves liable to prosecution. It is certainly a case that needs investigation, when a Doctor orders a place quarantined and the offical's goes there and forbids any one leaving the premises and never pay any further attention to it and leave the people, who are ignorant of the law, with one of the family a corpse, and afraid to bury them for fear of violating the law. That kind of a quarantine [illegible] out by civilised people and a man went to McIntosh, for a coffin and the remains of Mrs. Lambert will receive proper burial to-day.

COUNTY DIVISION. NIT.

Senator A. D. Stephens has promised to pass a law for the division of counties, in this legislature. We wonder if A D, has forgotten the remarks that he made in the last legislature, when some of the senators raised the question, that his present law might be unconstitutional, and he said, "he diden't care if it was if it answered the purpose to repeal the present law and stop county division". Senator Stephens is on his last term of office holding until he is reelected by the people, and he is beginning to look up a "scheme" to get the divisionest into line for him two years hence. Of his tinkering the McIntosh Times says. "We have had one or two experiences with Crockston's tinkering of division laws, and the last but not least of them was the nullifying by the supreme court, after the establishment of Columbia county the present law, and this because of a Crookston amendment thereto. Not knowing the purpose or contemplated provisions of senator Stephen's proposed change we are not prepared to comment upon them, but hope that this community will be given an opportunity to be heard in the matter and that the necessity maintaining a lobby at the state capitol to protect our interests may in some way be avoided."

Senator Stephen is in no doubt aware, that the members of the legislature, from St.Louis Co. are going to introduce and pass a law for the division of Counties during this Session of the legislature and that a strong lobby will be put in from that county for the purpose, which is the reason he is so anxious to get on the committee on towns and of Counties. Should they succeed in passing a just law, in spite of his opposition, he will be prepared to say to the people in eastern Polk County, who favor division. "Just see what a big bear. My wife and I killed."

OHIO MARRIAGE LAW

DRUNKENNESS AN INSURMOUNTABLE BAR TO MARITAL UNION.

Buckeye State Purposes to See That Evolution of the Race in That Part of the World Is in the Right Direction—An Upright Judge.

If a man who drinks has a sweetheart in Ohio he should sober up thoroughly before applying to the state courts for a marriage license. If he is in the class known as "habitual drunkards" he should avoid the state entirely when he seeks to wed.

The action of Probate Judge Miller of Lima, O., in refusing a marriage license to an applicant because the applicant is a habitual drunkard brings knowledge to the rest of the world that Ohio has a new marriage license law, passed by the last legislature, which is far more stringent than any previous law on the subject.

In making application for a license in Ohio it is now necessary for the prospective bride and groom to appear before the probate court and swear to their answers to a long list of questions bearing on relationship extending back two generations and to certify to their own moral standing. They must be free from the whisky or drug habit, and this law especially prohibits the marriage of drunkards.

When asked his opinion of the new law the judge stated that in his opinion [illegible] passed by any state legislature. If rigidly enforced by probate courts much future misery will be avoided, many women will be saved from the humiliation and shame, poverty and woe incident to marital relations with inebriates, and the streets and bawdy houses of the land will have far fewer recruits.

Not only all this, but the poorhouses, insane asylums, epileptic asylums, prisons and reformatories will have fewer inmates.

More than all this, the judge believes the new law will, when its workings are fully understood by the youth of the state, have a very great tendency to elevate the morals, cause less indulgence in drink and the many vices prevalent, the young knowing that if the law is properly enforced they must be clean morally, mentally and physically in order to enter into that state looked forward to by the great majority of the youth as the climax of happiness.

"It has been my observation," Judge Miller says, "that men seldom change their habits radically, at least for the better, after arriving at maturity, and for the influence of the new law upon the youth of the state I have the greatest anticipations."

Judge A. D. Miller is fifty years of age and has a large family of children, a daughter, Miss Freda, occupying the position of marriage license clerk in his office. He is serving his second term in the office and is one of the most popular officials in northwestern Ohio.

DRINK AND LONGEVITY.

What the Books of the Life Insurance Companies Show.

At the recent convention in Philadelphia of the actuaries of all the recognized life insurance companies of the United States and Canada J. G. Van Cise of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York read a paper on "Effects of Total Abstinence on the Death Rate." He said that there was no doubt that total abstainers lived longer than persons who imbibed even moderately.

An address, entitled "A Graduation of Specialized Mortality Experience," by Arthur Hunter of the New York Life Insurance company contained some interesting statistics.

Mr. Hunter showed that persons who have slow pulses, say in the neighborhood of sixty beats to the minute, live longer than the average period, and in persons who have high or fast pulses the mortality is above the normal.

"Liquor dealers," he said, "even though they be total abstainers, are much above the normal in mortality, showing that their environment is unhealthful. Among those who have taken a cure for the liquor or drug habit the mortality is high."

A Caustic Tongue.

Years ago a prominent citizen of Chicago, who at that time was president of one of its leading clubs, in introducing another prominent citizen as a speaker at a club banquet dwelt in highly complimentary terms on the latter's efforts to bring about political reforms. "Gentlemen," he said, [illegible] influence for good than does Mr. Blank when he is sober." Then in great confusion and amid an awed silence he hastened to explain that Mr. Blank exerted, as he had intended to say, a powerful influence when he was in earnest.

At the banquet given at the opening of the present Board of Trade building the elder Carter Harrison made a flamboyant speech congratulating himself on having been born in the same year that the steam locomotive was invented. He was followed by the late Emery Storrs, who said that, most appropriately, Carter Harrison and the locomotive were born in the same year since both of them had been blowing off steam ever since.

It was Emery Storrs who said that a fellow lawyer reminded him of a beautiful house with massive portals and impressive cornices, which, when you opened the front door, landed you immediately in the back yard.

Women's Work In Iowa.

The members of the Women's Christian Temperance union of the Seventeenth Iowa district have decided to boycott soda fountains from which are sold alcoholic drinks and are going to work among the physicians and urge them to advise against the use of alcoholic patent medicines and pledge themselves not to prescribe alcohol in any of their prescriptions. The ladies expect to get farmers to refuse the use of their barns for the purpose of advertising medicines containing alcohol. They also talk of refusing to subscribe for newspapers and periodicals which contain patent medicine or liquor advertisements in their columns.

Paris France's Soberest City.

According to a statistician, the people of Paris are among the most sober of France. Each one of them only drinks annually on an average 217 liters of wine, and the same quantity is consumed by the inhabitants of Bordeaux and of Angouleme. Nice is the thirstiest place, for the consumption there is 270 liters per head. Next to Nice comes St. Etienne, in the Loire, with 265 liters. In the matter of spirits only eight liters represent Paris in the statistics as against 17 for Havre, 16 for Nantes, 14 for Boulogne-sur-Mer, 10 for Calais, and so on.

Alcohol Always Injurious.

Theater Audiences.

A theater audience is fickle and not infrequently cruel, but it must be won. Augustin Daly had several ways of testing it. One was to station men in his employ at convenient points where they could hear the comments and judge whether the play was making an impression. But that upon which he depended more was to [illegible] himself [illegible] the moment when the [illegible] he saw people turning to one another eagerly and making quick comments he knew that they were being moved, whether for praise or blame. But if the talk began slowly after the curtain fell he was perfectly sure that the play had excited no interest—a worse fate than blame.

It is a favorite way of players to pick out some one person in the audience—one with a sympathetic countenance—and to play to him or her, and to judge by success from the expression seen there. The trouble is that the people in the front rows are often the regulars, who feel little emotion and show less, and who may be still unmoved when the rest of the audience is in ecstasy. If they could know the distress and the woe they cause—well, then they would not be the regulars.—New York Mail.

Hamlet at Singapore.

I saw "Hamlet" played and adapted for Malays at Singapore. It was sung instead of spoken, and mostly to English tunes. Hamlet addressed the ghost to the tune of "Her Golden Hair" and killed Polonius to "Listen to the Band." Polonius addressed his son to "That's English, You Know," and, with the king and queen, sang "Mary Was a Housemaid" to other words. The ghost scene included three ghosts, two clowns and a bottle of whisky.

The Cataleptic Trance.

It cannot be doubted that in numerous cases of cataleptic trance the apparently lifeless patient has been acquainted with all the arrangements being made for his interment. "A merchant in a neighboring town states that his advertising last year cost him forty cents on every hundred dollars worth of merchandise sold. He used a half page together with a good showing of local liners and was represented in every issue of his local paper. This year he has contracted for a full page and declares that he shall continue to advertise as long as people continue to read newspapers.

No Fool.

"At least I am not a fool," he said; "for you know 'a fool and his money are soon parted,' a fact which leads naturally to the inference that the fool must have money, and I never had any."—Chicago Post.

Gilding Without Gold.

One more proof that all is not gold that glitters is found in the fact that much of the gold lettering seen on signs, and also much of the gilding of picture frames, has no gold whatever about it. Among laymen the opinion prevails that all such decoration requires the actual use of gold leaf, but the reality is different, and a substitute that defies detection has been widely used for some time. The exact effect of gold is secured by using a leaf of either silver or aluminium under yellow paint. The metal backing gives the required luster, and the paint gives the required color. This method cannot be used in all cases, because the paint is of peculiar quality and requires putting on with an even thickness. For this reason it is generally applicable only to flat surfaces. Parts of a gilded picture frame which are molded into waving surfaces generally require genuine golf leaf to cover them.—Philadelphia Record.

Plant a Tree.

When eating a good pear or apple save the seeds and plant them either in a flower pot, where they will germinate before long, or else directly in the garden; when they will come up next spring. To prevent their loss the place must be covered as a mark. It takes a number of years before they bear fruit, but to see the progress of growth from year to year is always interesting. People often think it is not worth while for them to plant trees. They will not live to have fruit of them and so neglect it entirely. But some one will enjoy the harvest. It is just the individual egotism which causes so much unhappiness and affects all classes of society in many ways.—Hartford Times.

Great Heads and Little Wit.

Great men are usually said to have great memories, but it does not follow that all who have great memories are great men. I remember an idiot in Ohio who was a great curiosity many years ago. He knew the whole Bible by heart from beginning to end; and if any verse was read or repeated to him he could tell exactly in what book and chapter it was to be found and its verse number in the chapter. He was considered a great marvel in this particular, but in every other he was a mental imbecile and could not be trusted even to feed himself.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

For a Shave de Luxe.

"Let me give you a tip for which I think you will be grateful," said a local barber in one of the downtown shops the other day. "Always maintain a pleasant feeling and a slight smile if possible when in a barber's chair for the purpose of being shaved. When the face is in a smile and the muscles are relaxed it is very much easier for the barber to run over it with a razor. This is especially applicable to persons who have a tough and wiry beard."—Washington Star.

A Huntsville man has a book on the cover of which is a picture of a man yawning. Whenever his wife begins to lecture him he gets out the book and reads it in front of her. She sees the picture and has to stop talking to yawn. Finally she becomes too tired to talk.—Kansas City Star.

The Poor Artist's Provider.

It is related of the late Mr. Whistler that he went one day with an artist in Paris who was not overburdened with this world's goods and was surprised at the sumptuous lunch provided. On asking him how he managed to live so well his host replied: "I have a pet monkey, which I let down from my window by a rope into that of my landlady and trust to Providence. Sometimes Jacko returns with a loaf, sometimes with a ham. His visits are full of surprises—one never knows what may appear."—Leslie's Weekly.

Emerson's Story of Alcott.

I asked Alcott what he would do when he came to the gate and St. Peter demanded his ticket. "What have you to show to justify your right to live?" I said. "Where is your book, your picture. You have done nothing in the world." "No," he said, "but somewhere on a hill up there will be Plato and Paul and Socrates talking, and they will say, 'Send Alcott over here; we want him with us.'"—Rebecca Harding Davis' "Bits of Gossip."

How to Walk.

There is no virtue in a dawdling saunter. The slow and languid dragging one foot after the other, which some people call walking, would tire an athlete. It utterly exhausts a weak person, and that is the reason why many delicate persons think they cannot walk. To derive any benefit from the exercise it is necessary to walk with a light, elastic step, which swings the weight of the body so easily from one leg to the other that its weight is not felt and which produces a healthy glow, showing that the sluggish blood is stirred to action in the most remote veins.—Family Doctor.

Marriage Agreed With Him.

Those who hold that the married state is apt to age a man were refuted by the case of Edwin Garton in London. He was married three times. When the registers were compared in court recently his age at his third marriage was found to be less than that entered in the register of the second ceremony. "The more the man married," said Justice Bigham, bathing his temples with eau de cologne, "the younger he seemed to get."

Cheerful and Hopeful.

The men whom I have seen succeed best in life, says Charles Kingsley, have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces and took the changes and chances of their normal life like men, facing rough and smooth alike as it came, and so found the truth of the old proverb that "good times and bad times and all times pass over."

Legal Eloquence.

A young lawyer concluded his argument in a case with the following sublime burst of eloquence: "If, gentlemen of the jury, the defendant's hogs are permitted to roam at large over the fair fields of my client with impunity, then—yes, then, indeed, have our forefathers fought and bled and died in vain!"

A Story of Brahms.

A rather celebrated composer asked to be allowed to play his very latest composition to Brahms, and did so with tremendous vigor, the perspiration streaming down his face as he pounded the piano. Brahms at the end of the performance picked up a sheet of the manuscript and, feeling it between his finger and thumb, enthusiastically exclaimed: "I say, where do you get your music paper? It's first rate."

"Friday" [illegible]

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who, way back in the early years of the republic, determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and, thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill conditioned craft have been received.

Feast of Fools.

The best authorities agree that the origin of the ancient custom of celebrating a feast of fools is unknown. Some identify it with the Roman feast of fools on March 31. But why did the Romans institute the feast of fools? In India March 31 is "the huli festival," when all manner of pranks are played upon the heedless. But, again, where did the Hindoos get it? The French call the April fool "un poisson d'Avril" (April fish). To the Scotch he is a "gawk" (a cuckoo).

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the United States Treasury Recommends Pe-ru-na.

Another Prominent Physician Uses and Endorses Pe-ru-na.

DR. LLEWELLYN JORDAN, Medical Examiner of the U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

A constantly increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their practice. It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so-called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession to-day. Catarrh, as everyone will admit, is the cause of one-half the diseases which afflict mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of United States.

Robert R. Roberts, M. D., Washington, D. C., writes:

"Through my own experience as well as that of many of my friends and acquaintances who have been cured or relieved of catarrh by the use of Hartman's Peruna, I can confidently recommend it to those suffering from such disorders, and have no hesitation in prescribing it to my patients."—Robert R. Roberts.

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systemic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does.

Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve-centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Mark Twain tells a story that while traveling in Germany a man sitting next to him at a dinner in a hotel ordered a bottle of Johannesburg wine. Many years of hard work on the farm had made the old man round-shouldered and his coat fitted badly. His son in the city sent him a coat stretcher on which to hang the coat at night. "It was real good of you to send it. Your mother fastened it to my coat with tape, but I wasn't comfortable in it and I had to take it off."

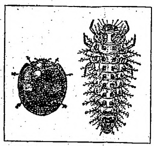
HORTICULTURE

CHINESE LADY BEETLE.

What Mother Nature Is Doing in the Warfare Against Scale Pests.

Scientific experts for many years have been studying annually reducing agencies, including both fungous diseases and insects. The artificial cultivation and distribution of certain fungi for the destruction of chinch bugs, grasshoppers, etc., have not been as successful as was predicted and anticipated. In a recent editorial, we stated that the same might be said of the introduction of the Chinese lady beetle which feeds upon the San Jose scale. While it is true that time enough has not yet elapsed in this particular instance to warrant a deduction and general conclusions relative to the economic value of this little friend, farmers cannot be too careful and should not fold their arms and content themselves with the let-alone policy, thinking that nature with an army of besiegers will come to their relief. Fruit growers should do everything in their power to demonstrate the practical utility of colonizing these friendly little beetles from China, says Orange Judd Farmer, but at the same time they should leave nothing undone to care for their orchards and protect them from the ravages of these pests, while the little beetle is becoming acclimated and thoroughly established.



CHINESE LADY BEETLE AND ITS LARVAE.

In a recent report, Dr. John B. Smith, state entomologist of New Jersey, says: "It would almost seem as if New Brunswick was really beyond the northern limit to which this beetle can be expected to do good work." Mr. Marlatt, however, has shown that in Asia its range north is much greater and that our climatic conditions can scarcely be said to be beyond the experience of the species. Dr. Smith met with another discouragement which [illegible] observed in [illegible] other southern states. A small, blackish wasp appeared in the cages at New Brunswick, as well as those at Washington, which destroyed fully one-third or more of the larvae or pupae of the friendly little beetles. Dr. Smith estimated that as many as 20 of these little wasps were developed within the body of a single full-grown larvae or pupae. With the San Jose scale feeding on the trees and the scale being devoured by the lady bettles, while the latter in turn is destroyed by the little wasp, we are reminded of the old adage: "The little fleas that do us tease, have other fleas to bite them; these in turn have other fleas, and so on ad infinitum." This warfare in nature is an exceedingly interesting one, and we do not in any way wish to underestimate the value of scientific investigations along these lines. There are several instances on record where factors of this sort have been of great practical value.

At Washington, the beetle begins laying its eggs in April and continues throughout May. At New Brunswick, Dr. Smith is of the opinion that the eggs are not laid before the latter part of May. The larvae that hatch from these eggs are spiney creatures, such as is shown in the picture. When fully developed, it is of a rather dull, flesh color. They feed by preference on the young scale. The early specimens, coming out in April or May depend on the old scale almost entirely, since in New Jersey and further north, no young scales appear until June. It is really this early brood of larvae which should be of the greatest benefit, because the scale eaten during May are mostly females, which means an immense decrease in the breeding possibilities. The beetles in New Jersey have failed thus far along this line, because they have not gotten to work early enough to reduce the first scale mothers.

The Chinese beetle resembles very much our native species of lady beetle, which is jet black with two bright-red spots on its back. To the average fruit grower, these two insects in the adult stages are indistiguishable, but to the trained eye can be separated, owing to a little difference in size, outline and color. On the other hand, the young of the two species are quite different. The larvae of the native form is blackish, with whitish transverse bands, while the branch spines are very much longer and more prominent. The young of the Chinese species is a spiney-covered, flesh-colored grub, as shown in the picture.

WENT TOO MUCH BY NAME

Lady Hotel Guest Receives Some Enlightenment from Colored Waiter.

A woman lives at one of the Kansas City hotels who has the reputation of being rather finicky and hard to please in the manner of food. A day or two ago at lunch, relates the Kansas City Journal, after looking over the dessert list, she decided on some ice cream pudding. The meal had been one with which she had considerable difficulty in finding fault, but when she had about half finished the dessert she called the waiter over and said:

"George, what do you mean by calling this ice cream pudding? There isn't any ice cream about it, and you know it."

"Yes'm," said the waiter. "I know dere ain't no ice cream in it. Dat's jes' a name they give it. I do' know why."

"Well," she continued. "I think that if they give a dish such a name they ought to make it conform to the name, and if you call this ice cream pudding, you ought to bring some ice cream with it."

"Yes'm," answered the servitor, "but you know we can't allus do it that way. You know we doesn't bring a cottage in with cottage pudding."

The waiter's reply brought a burst of laughter from the people who heerd the conversation, and since then the woman's criticisms of the menu have been few and infrequent.

SAN FRANCISCO'S CLIMATE.

Responsible for Some Marvelous Features, Including the Humorists.

In San Francisco they are telling a story that is worth repetition, and will be appreciated by those who have encountered the climate of the Golden Gate City, says the Philadelphia Press Sunday Magazine. An Irishman came to America to visit. He was a true son of Erin, with an Irish appreciation of all things beautiful.

He went to San Francisco for a sightseeing trip, and while strolling through the city with a friend, exclaimed: "What foine trees! So green! What makes it?"

"Climate," answered the friend, briefly.

A little later he cried out: "Arrah! the complexions of your ladies. So beautiful! What—"

"Climate," interrupted the friend.

The Irishman subsided for awhile.

Now, San Francisco isn't exactly a prairie, and not many moments passed until the two encountered one of the small mountains they call knolls out there.

"Begorra," said the visitor, "and how d'ye think Oi'm going to get up that?"

"Climb it," said the friend.

The Irishman stopped and looked at his companion. "The divil ye say? Seems to me iverything is climate out here."

Especially for Women.

Champion, Mich., Jan. 9th.—(Special)—A case of especial interest to women is that of Mrs. A. Wellatt, wife of a well-known photographer here. It is best given in her own words.

"I could not sleep, my feet were cold and my limbs cramped," Mrs. Wellatt states. "I had an awful hard pain across my kidneys. I had to get up three or four times in the night. I was very nervous and fearfully despondent.

"I had been troubled in this way for five years when I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, and what they caused to come from my kidneys will hardly stand description.

"By the time I had finished one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I was cured. Now I can sleep well, my limbs never cramp, I do not get up in the night, and I feel better than I have in years." [illegible]

Women's ills are caused by Diseased Kidneys; that's why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure them.

Miss Whittaker, a prominent club woman of Savannah, Ga., tells how she was entirely cured of ovarian troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, MISS EASY WHITTAKER, 604 39th St., W. Savannah, Ga."

No physician in the world has had such a training or such an amount of information at hand to assist in the treatment of all kinds of female ills as Mrs. Pinkham. In her office at Lynn, Mass., she is able to do more for the ailing women of America than the family physician. Any woman, therefore, is responsible for her own trouble who will not take the pains to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I am so grateful to you for the help Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me that I deem it but a small return to write you an expression of my experience.

"Many years suffering with weakness, [illegible] made me more anxious to die than live. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound soon restored my lost strength. Taking the medicine only two weeks produced a radical change, and two months restored me to perfect health. I am now a changed woman, and my friends wonder at the change, it is so marvellous. THE INAUGURAL BALL

WASHINGTON SOCIETY UNCERTAIN WHERE TO HOLD IT.

"ARISTOCRACY" IN HOUSE

Rooster That Invaded the Capitol—The Swayne Impeachment Trial—President's Buckwheat and 'Lasses.

WASHINGTON. — In view of the controversy that has arisen over a place in which to hold the inaugural ball some good people are advocating that this part of the inauguration festivities be abandoned. This would be a striking innovation, as the induction into office of a president has been celebrated by dancing from time immemorial. In fact, the records show that only at Washington's first inaugural and at those of Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and R. B. Hayes, a ball has always been given. Just prior to the celebration of Washington's second inauguration in Philadelphia the following card was issued which serves as authority for this form of inaugural functions:

"The members of the senate and of the house of representatives of the United States are respectfully invited to a ball on the 4th of March, to be given by the dancing assembly in honor of the unanimous reelection of George Washington, the president of the United States; the anniversary of the present form of government of the United States and a parting leave with the members of the present congress."

The first inaugural ball in Washington was held on March 4, 1809, in honor of President Madison. It was given at Long's hotel and was a grand affair, attended by ex-President Jefferson and the foreign ministers. Some 400 took part in the ball, although Mrs. Madison did not dance. For many years the inaugural ball was held in prominent hotels or public halls. Sometimes two or three balls were given on the night of the inauguration. Temporary buildings were used for balls on the inagural days of President Taylor, President Pierce, President Buchanan and on the second inaugural of President Grant. Grant's first inaugural dance was held in the north wing of the treasury department. This was a very crowded place, and it is recorded that Horace Greely had to wait two hours before he secured his old white overcoat, and he "swore a good deal in the oddest and most miscellaneous style." The custom of holding the ball in the pension office building began with Cleveland's first inauguration. It is likely that the coming ball will be held in the same building, but its use will be granted only after a pledge that in the future another building will be provided by the citizens of Washington.

Aristocracy in the House.

THERE is an aristocracy in the house of representatives despite the democratic character of that body. It is composed of members who have been fortunate enough by long service, experience and ability to secure appointments to the more important committees. These committees are those on rules, appropriations, ways and means, and judiciary. When a member is assigned to any one of these desirable committees he is looked upon as a house aristocrat and is an object of both admiration and envy. The honor of these positions is felt more in Washington than anywhere else, as a congressman's constituents do not, as a rule, appreciate the fine distinctions that obtain in the house organization. In fact, a member who has been made chairman of an obscure committee, one that has nothing to do and never meets, would be regarded by his folks at home as a much more important personage than if he were to be given a position on the committee on appropriations.

There are 62 committees in the house, and the majority of them are only known by their names. A great many of them never hold a session, but a comfortable committee room is provided for them, and there the chairman is located, virtually enjoying a well-furnished private office and reception room where he can meet and entertain friends.

To become a member of the house aristocracy means that the congressman must be a man of force and ability. The committee on rules is probably the highest, as in this small body under the present system is lodged the real power of legislation. When anything is to be put through the house that does not have the right of way under the regular rules, a special rule is reported from this committee. It consists of but five members, the chairman being the speaker of the house. Besides the chairman there are two majority and two minority members. It can be easily guessed that the speaker and the two majority members dominate the committee. The late Speaker Reed used to call in the minority members and declare to them: "We have decided to perpetrate another outrage, and here it is." Next to the committee on rules comes the appropriations and the ways and means, made up of old and distinguished men.

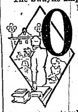
Rooster Invades Capitol.

SHORTLY after congress adjourned for the holidays a bit of excitement was created at the capitol by the performance of a big raucous voiced Plymouth Rock rooster which had been sent to the sergeant-at-arms of the house by a republican friend in Iowa as a token of his appreciation of the big republican victory. The bird was sent here to crow over this victory, and he did it in fine style. Mr. Casson, the sergeant-at-arms, placed the fowl in a barrel and secreted it in one of the corridors of the basement of the capitol. His roostership did not fancy confinement, managed to escape from the barrel and started on a tour of discovery through the historical capitol building.

After leaving the barrel he gave vent to an ear-splitting crow, and the capitol police started after him. The rooster ran upstairs and took refuge in the house interstate commerce committee room, where he made his presence known to Chairman Hepburn, of Iowa by a series of tremendous roars. Col Hepburn ordered the bird caught and dispatched, but some one told him that it was an Iowa bird, sent here to celebrate the republican victory. "If that is so," said Hepburn, "just kick him gently; don't wring his neck, and then drive him down to the committee on merchant marine and fisheries and let Gen. Grosvenor hear him crow."

The bird on being driven out of his refuge, scuttled downstairs to Speaker Cannon's room, but found that statesman had gone to his home in Illinois. He then darted into the house lobby and finally into the house itself, where he perched himself on the desk of Gen. Bingham, the father of the house, and emitted another patriotic shriek. From that point of vantage he flew to the speaker's chair, and was just preparing to give a sample of his vocal ability when he was captured by an active page, and now confines his songs of triumph to Sergeant-at-Arms Casson's back yard.

The Swayne Impeachment Trial



ONE of the big attractions in the congressional show during the remaining two months of the session will be the impeachment trial of Judge Swayne, of the eastern district of Florida. In some ways this will be the most spectacular performance that has been witnessed in the halls of congress for many years. There has been no impeachment trial since that of Secretary of War Belknap, in President Grant's last administration. There has been no impeachment of a federal judge since that of Judge Peck in the famous trial of 1830. The matter-of-fact business methods of the present day congress will rob this trial of its most sensational features, as was shown when the committee of the house notified the senate the other day that the house impeached Judge Swayne. This notification required about three minutes and created scarcely a ripple in the senate proceedings.

Those who have in their mind the most noted of impeachment trials—that of Warren Hastings by the English parliament, will be disappointed in the coming trial of Judge Swayne; but there will still be enough of the unusual to attract much interest and attention. In former trials, in the early days of the government, the senate chamber was appropriately draped and the old ceremonials adhered to. To-day the senate will handle the case more as a matter of routine business. Judge Swayne will be present either personally, or by counsel, and there will be a committee of managers on the part of the house, who will conduct the trial, much as a case is tried in court.

Noted men were engaged in former impeachment trials. James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, afterwards president of the United States, was one of the managers on the part of the house in the case against Judge Peck. In the impeachment proceedings against President Andrew Johnson, James F. Wilson, of Iowa; Henry L. Dawes, of Massachusetts; Charles Sumner, Senators Conkling, Morton, Ben Wade, of Ohio; Benjamin F. Butler, and other statesmen of great fame were engaged.

Some of the range pappers are agitating the modification of the law relating to the division of counties. This is a matter that deeply interests the residents of Beltrami Itasca and St. Louis counties and there is likely to be something doing in the present session of the legislature.—McIntosh Times.

Some of our Polk County residents, who have bought land in Red Lake County are anxious to get moved upon their claims, so as to take part in the County seat scrap, that is coming on between Thief River and Red Lake Falls.

The judges of probate have asked the state to provide asylum for non-competents, men who have lost the power to resist their appetites for drink, drugs, etc. That is a human moment, and an institution much needed. The legislature would do well to grand this petition. There are hundreds of men who should not be permitted to commit suicide by slow poison.

It is claimed that the millers are behind the movement to have the farmers get seed wheat from Canada free of duty, and if the farmers succeed the millers will force their little scheme of getting a rebate from flour shipments. It would be a good thing for the farmers to get seed in free but they cannot afford to destroy the wheat tariff by so doing.

TO MOVE COUNTY SEAT.

Red Lake county from present indicatations will be the scene of much turmoil and strife during the next few weeks or months, says The Crookston Daily Journal. Thief River Falls people have aspirations in regard to the county seat now located at Red Lake Falls and the action of the county board in recently authorizing the purchase of the court house at that place, the upper Falls people propose to bring the matter to a focus and stop the purchase of the Red Lake Falls property secure a special election for the selection of a county seat. Several meetings have been held for the purpose of devising plans and means wherewith the county seat is expected to be captured. The county commissioners of Red Lake county having decided to bag the building and lots which is now used as a court house in Red Lake Falls. The people of Thief River Falls have decided to put in a protest against such a purchase and also demand a special election which shall decide if the county seat shall be at Red Lake Falls or Thief River Falls.

Worshipers of Strange Gods.

Snake worshipers are more numerous than river worshipers in the Punjab. They have always been a large denomination in heathen countries. Why they worship snakes is a problem that has been frequently discussed to no particular purpose. But people who worship owls, bats, lobsters, rats and mice will worship anything, and perhaps snake worshipers are so common merely because snakes are so widely distributed and so far from exclusive in their habits. If a man worships an opossum or an ornithorynycus, he must go to Australia to do so, but serpents are everywhere. So is the earth (Prithi), and the earth, as Hertha, Demeter and under many other names, has never wanted adorers.

Even the untutored Pawnees are earth worshipers and bury articles by way of sacrifice, which is more economical than burning them, as they can be dug up again. The ancestral mound is a good deal adored in the Punjab. In Scotland it became the fairy hill, as at Aberfoyle, and was treated with conspicuous respect in times comparatively modern. The church was usually built as near it as possible, perhaps to counteract the influence of the ancestral mound or to acquire any local sacredness that might be going.—London News.

GLASSES FOR DRUNKARDS.

Chicago Physician Thinks Eye Strain Causes Craving For Alcohol.

That drunkenness can be cured by wearing the proper kind of eyeglasses is the newest theory of students of the disease, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Dr. Chalmers Prentice of Chicago is responsible for the theory. The physician says that the nerve centers controlling the mechanical movements of the eye comprise fully one-third of the brain structure and that the natural position of the eye in a state of rest is that of distant vision.

Any work, he contends, that increases the use of the eye indoors or for near vision and close application makes the labor of focusing so great that the brain centers rob the other portions of the body of their just proportion of energy and induce a condition of nervous irritability which is especially evidenced by a craving for alcohol. It is easily observable that horsemen, automobilists and outdoor workers whose employment requires constant effort in distant vision are delightfully free from the blight, the physician contends. On the other hand, it is saddening to note, he says, the number of college professors, lawyers and newspaper men who are bound hand and foot in the service of the drink demon.

Dr. Prentice goes further than this—than saying that the nervous irritability is evidenced by a craving for alcohol. He says that this condition actually has much to do with creating the drink appetite. He says that persons who earn their daily bread by callings requiring close range of vision and who find but little time for open air tasks should wear [illegible] and prisms adjusted to the visions required by their employment.

A JUVENILE DRUNKARD.

Distressing Case Before the Children's Court In St. Louis.

James Welsh, fourteen years old, who, according to the statement of his father, Edward Welsh, is a habitual drunkard and incorrigible, was a short time ago before the juvenile court in St. Louis on a charge of intoxication.

The testimony of the father and the admissions of the boy revealed one of the most astounding instances of youthful depravity that have been brought out in the juvenile court, says the Republic. The boy said he drank all the whisky and beer he could get. The father said he had manifested the alcoholic appetite for a long while and was entirely uncontrollable.

It was said that he was frequently drunk and that no arguments or punishment had been effective in breaking him of the habit.

The boy was sent to the house of refuge, and Judge Taylor declared that the saloon keeper who gave the child liquor would be punished to the full extent of the law.

Decrease In Court Martials.

The annual report of General George B. Davis, judge advocate general of the United States army, to the secretary of war shows the total number of trials by general court martial during the year to have been 4,249, being 1,025 less than in the preceding year. General Davis says:

"The marked dimunition in the number of trials by general court martial is very gratifying, as indicating that the conditions of the military service are now such as to require less frequent resort to court martial procedure in order to maintain discipline in the military establishment." This improvement in the morale of the army is attributed by the New Voice to the abolition of the canteen.

The Kansas City World says the churches have let the devil get a good start at Sugar Creek. After six saloons have been established the town site company offers to donate land for a church building.

Flirting in Japan.

A Japanese woman flirts—as far as she knows the meaning of the word—with her sleeves and fan and not with her eyes and smiles. By the different movements of the ends of her kimono sleeves she manages to convey to her admirers all sorts of unspoken messages, and by the opening and shutting of her fan to the right or to the left she can reject or accept the most weighty offers. Her code signaling with her sleeves and fan is quite an item of her social education.

A Caustic Tongue.

Years ago a prominent citizen of Chicago, who at that time was president of one of its leading clubs, in introducing another prominent citizen as a speaker at a club banquet dwelt in highly complimentary terms on the latter's efforts to bring about political reforms. "Gentlemen," he said, "no one in this city exerts a more powerful influence for good than does Mr. Blank when he is sober." Then in great confusion and amid an awed silence he hastened to explain that Mr. Blank exerted, as he had intended to say, a powerful influence when he was in earnest.

At the banquet given at the opening of the present Board of Trade building the elder Carter Harrison made a flamboyant speech congratulating himself on having been born in the same year that the steam locomotive was invented. He was followed by the late Emery Storrs, who said that, most appropriately, Carter Harrison and the locomotive were born in the same year since both of them had been blowing off steam ever since.

It was Emery Storrs who said that a fellow lawyer reminded him of a beautiful house with massive portals and impressive cornices, which, when you opened the front door, landed you immediately in the back yard.

Women's Work In Iowa.

The members of the Women's Christian Temperance union of the Seventeenth Iowa district have decided to boycott soda fountains from which are sold alcoholic drinks and are going to work among the physicians and urge them to advise against the use of alcoholic patent medicines and pledge themselves not to prescribe alcohol in any of their prescriptions. The ladies expect to get farmers to refuse the use of their barns for the purpose of advertising medicines containing alcohol. They also talk of refusing to subscribe for newspapers and periodicals which contain patent medicine or liquor advertisements in their columns

Paris France's Soberest City.

According to a statistician, the people of Paris are among the most sober of France. Each one of them only drinks annually on an average 217 liters of wine, and the same quantity is consumed by the inhabitants of Bordeaux and of Angouleme. Nice is the thirstiest place, for the consumption there is 276 liters per head. Next to Nice comes St. Etienne, in the Loire, with 265 liters. In the matter of spirits only eight liters represent Paris in the statistics as against 17 for Havre, 16 for Nantes, 14 for Boulogne-sur-Mer, 10 for Calais, and so on.

Theater Audiences.

A theater audience is fickle and not infrequently cruel, but it must be won. Augustin Daly had several ways of testing it. One was to station men in his employ at convenient points where they could hear the comments and judge whether the play was making an impression. But a test upon which he depended more was to listen himself at the moment when the curtain went down upon an act. If he saw people turning to one another eagerly and making quick comments he knew that they were being moved, whether for praise or blame. But if the talk began slowly after the curtain fell he was perfectly sure that the play had excited no interest—a worse fate than blame.

It is a favorite way of players to pick out some one person in the audience—one with a sympathetic countenance—and to play to him or her, and to judge by success from the expression seen there. The trouble is that the people in the front rows are often the regulars, who feel little emotion and show less, and who may be [illegible] annoyed when the rest of the [illegible] is in ecstasy. If they could know the distress and the woe they cause—well, then they would not be the regulars.—New York Mail.

Hamlet at Singapore.

I saw "Hamlet" played and adapted for Malays at Singapore. It was sung instead of spoken, and mostly to English tunes. Hamlet addressed the ghost to the tune of "Her Golden Hair" and killed Polonius to "Listen to the Band." Polonius addressed his son to "That's English, You Know," and, with the king and queen, sang "Mary Was a Housemaid" to other words. The ghost scene included three ghosts, two clowns and a bottle of whisky.

It cannot be doubted that in numerous cases of cataleptic trance the apparently lifeless patient has been acquainted with all the arrangements being made for his interment. Poor Browning.

Browning, sitting down daily after breakfast to write so many lines, believing that be was bound to do so and it was worth doing! That is a pitiful spectacle. What a grotesque illusion duty can become! Browning is a proper target for criticism, for the wickedest criticism. He was not writing for a livelihood. Think of it! He had an independent income, and yet be wrote, wrote, wrote—what? "Sordello," "Fifine at the Fair," "Prince Hohenstiel Schwangau." And he hypnotized a portion of the British public into the idea that there was something in it until in despair they formed a society with apparatus for cracking these nuts—to find them all empty.—John Davidson in Author.

Easily Explained.

Disgraceful.

Indians Want Liquor Barred if Their Territory Is Made a State.

The liquor problem in Indian Territory, especially the proposed clauses in the act admitting the territory to the Union and forever excluding the sale of intoxicating drink, was one of the important subjects discussed at the recent Indian conference at Lake Mohonk, N. Y.

A. S. McKennon of South McAlester, an associate of the late Senator Dawes in the original five tribes commission, said in part:

"During the last session of congress a bill was introduced in the house passed, is now pending before the senate and will probably pass that body at its coming session, for an enabling act to organize a state of Oklahoma and Indian Territory.

"The Indians realize the utter degradation and ruin which will come to them from the introduction of intoxicating liquors, and they now plead piteously for the government to keep its oft repeated pledges to them by inserting a provision in said enabling act requiring that the state constitution shall prohibit the manufacture, introduction, sale, barter or giving away of intoxicants of any kind for any purpose within the state.

"This in brief is the situation which is the matter of the greatest concern to the people of the Indian Territory, Indians and whites alike."

Dr. A. Grant Evans, president of a Presbyterian seminary at Muskogee, I. T. indorsed and emphasized the views expressed by Mr. McKennon. The question was a vital one for the future state, the speaker said, for with the mixed population of the region, which includes a large number of colored people, the introduction of the saloon would be an unmitigated curse.

The Preacher's Error.

In the early days of Springfield a preacher bought some sausage for lunch one Sunday and took it to church with him. He carried the sausage in the back pocket of his coat, and a dog, catching the scent, followed him. Every few feet the preacher would kick backward at the dog without looking around. Arriving at church, the preacher began the services, and the dog lay down behind the altar.

A few minutes later one of the deacons stole quietly up behind the preacher, intending to hand him a sheet of paper, and pulled his coat tail. Without glancing back the preacher gave one vicious kick and sent the deacon rolling down the altar steps on to the dog, which set up a terrible howling. The preacher, still looking straight ahead, said:

"My friends, this thieving scoundrel has been trying to rob me ever since I made a purchase at the butcher shop before coming here."

When the preacher discovered what he had done he dismissed the congregation and went outside to kick the dog.—Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat.

Of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

Yours for Health
Lydia E. Pinkham

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends as has

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It will entirely cure the worst forms of Female Complaints, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life.

It has cured more cases of Backache and Leucorrhœa than any other remedy the world has ever known. It is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the Uterus in an early stage of development.

Irregular, Suppressed or Painful Menstruation, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Flooding, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility quickly yield to it. Womb troubles, causing pain, weight and backache, instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it invigorates the female system, and is as harmless as water.

It quickly removes that Bearing-down Feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, Dizziness, Faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues" and headache. These are sure indications of Female Weakness, or some derangement of the Uterus, which this medicine always cures. Kidney Complaints and Backache, of either sex, the Vegetable Compound always cures.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want — a cure. Sold by Druggists [illegible]. Refuse all substitutes.

Shown by Numerous Cures Made by Dodd's Kidney Pills—They Cure the Kidneys and the Rheumatism Cures Itself—Remarkable Case of Maggie E. Deckert.

Eagle River, Wis., Jan. 16th.—(Special)—That rheumatism is caused by disordered kidneys is proved by the cures Dodd's Kidney Pills are making in every state in the Union. They cure the Kidneys and the Rheumatism cures itself. A cure that has caused deep interest in this neighborhood is that of Maggie E. Deckert. In speaking of it she says:

"I had kidney trouble and rheumatism, and was so lame I could not walk. I could not sleep, for I ached all over. I was in a terrible state and firmly believe that if I had not used Dodd's Kidney Pills I would be dead. I took nine boxes of them and they have done me more good than all the other medicines I ever took. Now my aches are all gone, I can eat and sleep and I am feeling good. I want all the world to know that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture gives to Salzer's Oats its heartiest endorsement. Salzer's New National Oats yielded in 1904 from 150 to 300 bu. per acre in 30 different States, and you, Mr. Farmer, can beat this in 1905, if you will.

Speltz or Emmer, above illustrated, gives 80 bushels grain and four tons hay besides per acre. It's wonderful. Salzer's seeds are pedigree seeds, bred up through careful selection to big yields.

	Per Acre.
Salzer's Beardless Barley yielded	121 bu.
Salzer's Home Builder Corn...	300 bu.
Speltz and Macaroni Wheat....	80 bu.

Salzer's Teosinte Fodder.......	160,000 lbs.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Concrete Industry.

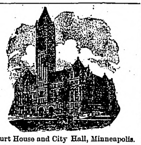
The first annual meeting of the Northwest Concrete Manufacturers' Aossociation, is to be held at Minneapolis, January 24th, 25th and 26th, 1905.

The object of the meeting is to bring together in a convention the manufacturers of cement products, contractors, engineers, architects and all persons interested in the progress and development of the concrete industry.

So many people have already signified their intention to be present at the meeting that the management has deemed it necessary to engage the entire fourth floor of the county side of the new court house and city hall.

There will be papers and discussions touching upon the various uses of Portland and native cements, covering the field of building blocks, fireproofing, sidewalks, sewer pipe, cement brick, etc., read by prominent prominent authorities on each specific issue.

It has been arranged to have a large exhibit in connection with the covention of concrete machinery of all descriptions, samples of finished products, Portland and native cements, etc., that will prove especially interesting and instructive to those engaged in the industry.



Court House and City Hall, Minneapolis.

Arrangements have been made with all the railway companies for a reduced rate to persons attending this convention.

Farm School Growing.

During the fifteen years the state school of agriculture has been in existence it has grown from a small institution one to the greatest in the state. Its sphere of influence extends to every corner of the commonwealth. So varied are the courses and so great is the demand for admission that the present equipment is entirely inadequate to accomodate all that seek to enroll in the college.

Two years ago the authorities asked the state to levy a tax sufficient to yield $250,000 in two years. This tax amounts to about a fifth mill and the last half of it will be due the first of next August. The present legislation will be asked to continue that tax two years longer.

Found.

After fifty years of a mildewed and hidden existence, the original draft of the constitution of Minnesota was inadvertently exumed from a dusty pile of miscellaneous documents by George B. Brown, an assistant in the secretary of state's office. For the past thirty years every secretary of the state has had had nearly every year calls from persons who desired to see the original draft of the constitution.

Search after search has been instituted in the office and the records have been overhauled more times than could be counted on the fingers and toes, but still the historic document eluded and defied every search made.

Big Business.

The yearly report of the St. Paul Union Stock Yards company for 1904 shows that 389,300 cattle, 881,635 hogs, 772,766 sheep and 6,438 horses were received during the twelve months just closed. This live stock was shipped in 28,835 cars. Of these, 275,493 cattle, 71,654 hogs, 622,269 sheep and 6,205 horses were shipped out. There were slaughtered at South St. Paul during the last year 94,250 cattle, 17,573 calves, 810,151 hogs and 174,600 sheep. The comparative table shows a decided increase in every item during 1904 over the preceeding year, with the exception of horses, which fell off 1,305 head.

Agents Not Liable.

According to a ruling handed down by the supreme court, agents of wild cat fire insurance companies cannot be sued for loss under these worthless policies in the event the company itself refused to make settlement. The specific was that of M. Webster & Sons of Houston county, who brought suit against the agent, P. Ferguson, under the law of 1895. The majority of the justices held that collection could be made from the agent, but Justice Douglas presented a dissenting opinion on the ground that the assured was deceived and believed the policies valid.

News Notes.

William Goodman, living nine miles southeast of Winthrop, while driving, was killed by a Minneapolis & St. Louis passenger train.

Judge W. L. Windom, of Duluth, fined John Knutson, a wife beater, $50 and costs, with alternative of sixty days in jail.

W. A. Avery, of Detroit, has sold 7,000,000 feet of his pine tributary to the Duluth & Iron Range road, and gave an option to a prospective purchaser for 80,000,000 feet.

George Norman, an employe at the Great Northern shops, St. Paul, fell into a cinder pit in the shops and sustained several severe cuts and bruises about the head.

Somewhere in St. Paul or Minneapolis there lives a girl, Nellie Kerburn by name, to whom $2,000 has been left by C. C. Maxson, the young Frenchman who was killed at Kerkhoven.

SUFFERED FROM CATARRH OF LUNGS SO COMMON IN WINTER. CURED BY PE-RU-NA.

MRS FRANCIS WILSON
MRS. H.E. ADAMS

A PLAIN TALK

On a Plain Subject in Plain Language.

The coming winter will cause at least one-half of the women to have catarrh, colds, coughs, pneumonia or consumption. Thousands of women will lose their lives and tens of thousands will acquire some chronic ailment from which they will never recover.

KEEP PERUNA IN THE HOUSE

Unless you take the necessary precautions, the chances are that you (who read this) will be one of the unfortunate ones. Little or no risk need be run if Peruna is kept in the house and at the first appearance of any symptom of catarrh taken as directed on the bottle.

Peruna is a safeguard, a preventative, a specific, a cure for all cases of catarrh, acute and chronic, coughs, colds, consumption, etc.

For free medical advice, address Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A COLD ON THE LUNGS THREATENS TO BECOME SERIOUS.

Pe-ru-na Brings Speedy Relief.

Mrs. H. E. Adams, Ex-President Palmetto Club, of New Orleans, La., writes from 110 Garfield Court, South Bend, Ind., as follows:

"I am pleased to endorse Peruna, as I took it about a year ago and it soon brought me relief from a cold on my lungs which threatened to be serious.

"The lungs were sore and inflamed, I coughed a couple of hours every night, and I felt that something must be done before my lungs became affected.

"Peruna was suggested by some of my friends who had used it, and acting upon their advice I tried it and found that it was able to bring about a speedy cure. You have my highest endorsement and thanks for the good it did me."

Sounding the Praises of Peruna.

Mrs. Frances Wilson, 32 Nelson St., Clinton, Mass., writes:

"Had you seen me at the time of my illness and now, you would not wonder that I take delight in sounding the praises of Peruna.

"My ailment was a severe cold which attacked the bronchial tubes and lungs.

"I followed your special directions and after using six bottles of Peruna, I was on my feet again. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine."

Made Him Look So.

"Are you a married man?"

FIFTEEN YEARS OF TORTURE.

Itching and Painful Sores Covered Head and Body—Cured in a Week by Cuticura.

"For fifteen years my scalp and forehead was one mass of scabs, and my body was covered with sores. Words cannot express how I suffered from the itching and pain. I tried many doctors and treatments, but could get no help, and had given up hope when a friend told me to get Cuticura. After bathing with Cuticura Soap and applying Cuticura Ointment for three days, my head was as clear as ever, and to my surprise and joy, one cake of soap and one box of ointment made a complete cure in one week. (Signed) H. B. Franklin, 717 Washington St., Allegheny, Pa."

The whipping post has lately been suggested as a cure for about everything except frenzied finance. Why not try it on that?—N. Y. Mail.

LASTING RELIEF.

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Ky., says:

"My nightly rest was broken, owing to irregular action of the kidneys. I was suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition. I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and I experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney Pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

The czar of Russia and his family had a narrow escape from death at the Winter palace in St. Petersburg. A REVOLUTION STIRS RUSSIA.

A QUIET SUNDAY MORNING IS TURNED INTO A SCENE OF CARNAGE.

Workmen Trying to Present Petition to the Czar are Mowed Down by Troops. Men, Women and Children Fall in Heaps.

St. Petersburg, January 23.—Yesterday was a day of unspeakable horror in St. Petersburg.

The strikers, goaded to desperation by a day of violence, fury and bloodshed, are in a state of open insurrection against the government.

A condition almost bordering on civil war exists in the terror-stricken capital of Russia.

The city is under martial law, with Prince Vasilchikoff as commander of over 50,000 of the emperor's crack guards.

Troops are bivouacking in streets and at various points on the Nevesky Prospect, the main thoroughout of the city.

On the island of Nassili Ostrov and in the industral districts infuriated men have thrown up baricades which they are holding.

The empress dowager has sought safety at Tsarskoe Selo, where Emperor Nicholas II. is staying.

An invitation to meet the workingmen was presented to the czar but he refused to meet them in front of the palace.

The priest, Gopon, the leader and idol of the men, in his golden vestments, holding aloft the cross, was marching at the head of thousands of workmen through the Narva gate, miraculously escaped a volley which laid low a hundred persons.

The figures of the total number killed or wounded here, at the Moscow gate, at various bridges and at the winter palace vary.

The lowest estimate is 500, although [illegible] exaggerated figures placing the number as high as 5,000.

Many men were accompanied by their wives and children and in the confusion which left no time for discrimination, the latter shared the fate of the men.

The troops, with the exception of a single regiment, which is reported to have thrown down its arms, remained loyal and obeyed orders.

But the blood which crimsoned the snow has fired the brains and passions of the strikers and turned women as well as men into wild beasts and the cry of the infuriated populace is for vengeance.

The sympathy of the middle classes is with the workmen.

Father Gopon, the master mind of the movement, aimed at open revolution. He managed the affair like a genius to break the faith of the people in "the little father," who, they were convinced, and whom Father Gopen had taught them to believe, would right their wrongs and redress their grievances.

The little chapel at the Narva gate was wrecked.

On the Kaminostov island all the lights were extinguished.

Every officer wearing the uniform of the emperor who was found alone was mobbed. A general was killed on the Nicholas bridge and a dozen officers were seized, stripped of their epaulets and deprived of their swords.

It is rumored that M. Witte will be appointed dictator today, but the report is not confirmed.

Barred from bridges and gates, men women and children crossed the frozen river and canals on the ice by twos and threes hurrying to the palace square where they were sure the emperor would meet them.

But the street approaches to the square were cleared by volleys and the Cossack charges.

Men and women, infuriated to frenzy by the loss of loved ones, cursed the soldiers while they retreated.

Men harangued the crowds, telling them that the emperor had failed them and that the time had come to act.

Men began to build barricades in the Nevsky Prospect and at other points, using any material that came to hand, and even chopping down telegraph poles.

Fighting meantime continued at various places, soldiers volleying and charging the mob. The whole city was in a state of panic. Women were running through the streets seeking lost members of their families. Several barricades were carried by the troops.

Towards eight o'clock in the evening the crowds, exhausted, began to disperse, leaving the military in possession. As they retreated up the Nevsky Prospect the workmen put out all the lights.

It is rumored that the workmen there have seized a dynamite factory and also that thirty or forty thousand armed strikers from Kolpine, sixteen miles distant, are marching on St. Petersburg.

A thorough investigation is to be conducted, and a report made to the house within ten days. The matter was referred to the grain and warehouse committee.

The adoption of the revision of the general laws of Minnesota without amendment was urged in the house by Representative J. R. Morley of Owatonna, who moved that the rules be suspended and the bill be given its second and third readings and placed upon its final passage. The motion failed to receive a second, and the revision was referred to the judiciary committee, according to the program arranged on Wednesday.

Two bills regulating the use of public highways by automobiles were introduced in the house yesterday. Representative O. N. Thundale of Harmony offered a duplicate of the measure introduced on Wednesday in the senate by Senator R. E. Thompson of Preston, providing general state regulation and allowing counties and towns and villages to impose additional restrictions.

Representative Murray Kelly of Lewiston introduced a bill which requires automobiles and motor cycles to reduce their speed to five miles an hour when passing horses ridden or driven, and to post license numbers on both sides of cars.

Senator Ward of Alexandria again brought up the matter of confirming a Van Sant appointment, made since the adjournment of the 1903 session. Senator Mausten again formally objected to the confirmation of the appointment of George W. Knox of Aitkin to the board of equalization. All other Van Sant appointments, as well as those of Gov. Johnson, with the exception of J. E. King of Red Lake Falls, have passed through the senate without any difficulty.

In the house twenty-three bills were introduced.

JURY DISAGREES.

After Many Hours of Balloting the Jury in the Koch Trial Makes a Report to that Effect.

New Ulm, Minn., Jan. 21.—The Koch jury has agreed to disagree.

After being closeted for over forty hours they filed into the court room at 9:50 yesterday morning and announced to Judge Webber that they were absolutely unable to arrive at an agreement.

It was about 9:30 when the jury sent out word that they were reday to report. The news flushed about the city like wild-fire and a great crowd assembled in the court room and just outside the main door to the jail.

A deputy sheriff first brought the news to Koch, who was sitting in his cell, apparently well contented.

He arose quickly upon the approach of the officer and when told that the jury would report in a few minutes remarked:

"If the jury agreed, I'm all right."

He quickly prepared to go to the court room and as he passed along the corridor and out through the vestibule and sheriff's office he laughed and joked with his attendants as though he might be going on a fishing excursion rather than to a court room where he might hear himself convicted of murder in the first degree.

His self control was marvelous and the nerve he has exhibited throughout the entire ordeal did not desire him for a moment, not even when he entered the court room and hundreds of eyes were riveted upon him, noting his every look and movement.

The disagreement did not come as much of a surprise to many. Even the prisoner was calm and composed when the announcement was made.

Judge Webber discharged the jurymen and they immediately shook hands with the prisoner, the attorneys who have interested themselves in the case and expressed themselves as well pleased that they were through with their labors.

The last ballot was taken Thursday night and stood 9 to [illegible] for acquittal. It was apparent at once that an agreement was an impossibility and the jury retired with [illegible] that they would n[illegible]

The first ballot taken [illegible] after their retirement [illegible] to 5 for acquittal.

Judge Webber decided that another jury must pass upon the remarkable chain of circumstantial evidence which connects Dr. Koch with the murder of Louis A. Gebhardt, and the immediate disposition of the case was set for Jan. 28.

The judge overruled a motion made by Attorney L. L. Brown for the defense that a new trial be ordered immediately. Mr. Brown then petitioned for a new trial not later than Feb. 1, but this also was denied.

Gen. Childs announced that the state would move for a change of venue, on the ground that it would be impossible to secure a fair and impartial trial in Brown county.

Kidnapped.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 18.—Edith Schilb, 9 years old, was kidnapped at the Lincoln school yesterday morning.

A tall, slender woman, attractive of face, and dressed in black, called at the school house shortly after 9 o'clock and asked to see the child. When the little one came to the woman, the latter seized her and, placing her in a buggy, drove away. The vehicle was traced to Crow Wing, where it was learned the woman and child had taken a train for the east.

From her appearance, it is believed the woman was the mother of the child, which was deserted when six months old. The child was taken by John Schilb. He and his wife reared the little one, and always led her to believe they were her parents.

A Reign of Terror.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 21.—With the Russian capital seemingly on the verge of an incipient revolution, thousands of workmen parading the streets, agitators and fanatics sowing the seeds of disorder, half the city in darkness and without fire protection owing to walkouts, the situation was hourly growing more tense when the authorities decided last night to adopt energetic measures to preserve order, prevent rioting and overawe the violent minded, at the same time seeking to placate the striking workmen by satisfaction of their demands in so far as they are just and reasonable, thus acting with combined firmness and moderation.

Two Brothers Murdered.

Rapid City, S. D., Jan. 21.—News has just reached here of the murder of the Cain brothers, two bachelors, who lived at the Tamarack mine, fifteen miles west of this city.

The murder is the greatest mystery. It is known that the brothers had trouble with certain friends, and they are suspected of the crime. The message states that the bodies have the appearance of having been clubbed to death. One theory is that they were murdered for the wagonload of merchandise recently purchased in this city.

RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.

The refusal of the Czar of all the Russians to listen to the petition of his people except with bayonet and rifles, has brought on a revolution in that country that is liable to exceed the great French revolution.

Should the rullers of Russia succeed in quelling the presant uprising which has more the apperance of a revolution, then a labor strike. They should take warning from their experience and consider a little more of the law of god and of America, that all men are created equal.

One of the features that makes the uprising have the appearance of a revolution is the refusal of the editors of four of the leading newspaper, to be governed in the publication of the facts, by the press centor, and as soon as they do that, there will be something doing in Russia.

Duplicates.

Smythe—Remember when Chatto was married last year how he kicked about the duplicate wedding presents? Browne—Yes. Smythe—Well, that sort of luck seems to follow him. He had a somewhat similar complaint yesterday. Browne—What was it? Smythe—Duplicate birthday presents. That is to say, twins.

Woes of Wealth.

"Wealth has its penalties," said the philosopher.

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "It's pretty hard for a man to have to go guessing through a French menu when he would rather have pork and beans." —Washington Star.

The Poor Printer.

One of Browning's remarks is characteristic. He once said to Dr. Knight that "all the unintelligibility of 'Sordello' is due to the printers. They would change my punctuation and not print my commas, semicolons, dashes and brackets."

The Ballot and Office.

In 1777 it was written into the constitution of Vermont that "the house of freemen of this state shall consist of persons most noted for wisdom and virtue to be chosen by ballot, by the freemen of every town in this state."

Time and conditions have lowered our standard. We are content with average wisdom and average virtue, and in years of apathy virtue and wisdom are quite forgotten, and we elect whom the machine nominates. Rotation in office, party control of nominating machinery, the ambitions of corporations and of party leaders—these are the forces that move the pawns on the legislative chessboard. Under the political conditions which the majority of the voters tolerate can we expect the legislature of a state to be composed of the best men of the community? And we know that the real danger of the democracy is the withdrawal of intelligent and humble men from public duties.—S. P. Orth in Atlantic.

Druid Money.

Druid money expresses one of the many plausible ways of refusing to pay at all, so common to all peoples. It is the exact equivalent of the Roman phrase to pay on the Greek calends, which meant never, as the Greeks had no calends. Patricius says of the Druids that they constantly received money which they promised to return in another life. Butler in "Hudibras" refers to this:

> Like money by the Druids borrowed,
> In t'other world to be restored.

The same tricks are played in the eastern as in the western world, for Purchas in his "Pilgrims" tells us of certain priests of Peking who barter with the people upon bills of exchange, to be paid in heaven a hundredfold.—London Express.

Avoiding a Quarrel.

On one occasion when interposing in a quarrel Lord North observed that there was often far too much readiness to take offense. "That is not my case," he added. "This very evening one member who spoke of me described me as 'that thing called a minister.' Well, to be sure," continued Lord North, here patting his ample sides, "I am an unwieldy thing. The honorable member therefore when he called me 'a thing' said what was true, and I could not be angry with him. But when he added 'that thing called a minister' he called me that thing which of all things be himself wished most to be, and therefore I took it as a compliment."

Old Time Naval Methods.

Fancy sending a gunboat to the China seas without a surgeon on board! But such things used to happen. The admiralty provided a well stocked medicine chest. But the captain knew nothing of medicine, so he had all the medicine bottles emptied into a big tub and then assembled the company. "All the stuff is there," said he, "and if any one goes sick he shall have a dose of the mixture, for there's bound to be something in it that will suit you!"—London Mail.

Advancement in Russia.

In Moscow, the good example of St Petersburg has been followed and a school with a commercial course for girls has been opened by Princess Viasemski. The girls who have finished the seven classes can either follow university courses or enter upon a commercial career. The course of study and the method of education are quite modern.

THE WIND'S MYSTERY.

Mountain and Valley Breezes and How They Originate.

The meteorologist is gradually divesting the wind of its mystery and is able to explain convincingly how and when it originates. The study of a great number of observations taken simultaneously all over the country and, in fact, all over two continents has enabled the expert to foresee just when wind and storm will arrive at certain sections of the country.

Of course the physical topography of any neighborhood has its influence on the local storms, fogs and prevailing winds. The "mountain" and "valley breezes" that are so eagerly sought during the summer recreation or sojourn is an instance of the effect of mountains on local climate and weather conditions. As explained by a professor of meteorology, because of active radiation at night the upper [illegible] air [illegible], the earth [illegible] cooled, and as cool air is heavier than warm air [illegible] theoretically, but [illegible] overlooked practically, this heavy air tends to move down the [illegible] the tendency becomes after a time sufficiently pronounced to produce a general downhill movement, eventually resulting in a perceptible breeze.

That is what is commonly designated locally as "the mountain breeze" and which, from its origin, is practically in one constant direction, though the intervention of powerful storms may temporarily reverse the customary movement. Vice versa, during the day the presence of warmer and therefore lighter air near the earth causes a movement of the atmosphere with an upward tendency, creating the so-called valley breezes. In certain favorably situated localities the appearance of the mountain or the valley breeze is as regular as clockwork, the transitional period being marked by a calm. —Philadelphia Record.

A Sarcastic Definition.

George Reno, an American newspaper man who went to Havana and obtained work on a daily paper there, did not get on well with the managing editor, a former Chicago physician. They disliked each other extremely, and the editor took particular pleasure in mangling Reno's copy beyond all recognition. One night Reno protested at some blue penciling that was done. "I recognize your right to edit my stuff, doctor," said he, "but I must beg you to do so in such manner that you will not split all of the infinitives. In this instance you have made my copy over into a bundle of phraseological kindling wood." In reply, from the erudite managing editor: "You seem to be worrying yourself over a mere trifle, Mr. Reno. What is a split infinitive anyway?" "A split infinitive," replied Reno after a moment of thought, "is an attachment used on farms. It is a small implement that we fasten to the nose of a calf when we wish to wean it from its mother."

How Eggs Are Hatched In China.

A curious method of hatching eggs has been adopted in China. The eggs are placed in tiers in a large basket twice the size of an ordinary barrel, which is thickly lined with hay and carefully closed from the air by a tight fitting cover of twisted straw. In three days' time the eggs are taken out and replaced in a different order, those at the surface being put in the lower tier. This is repeated every third day for a fortnight, when the eggs are removed from the basket and placed on a shelf in another room, being carefully covered with bran. In a day or two the chickens chip the shells and make their appearance in the world. The success of this method is attributed to the fact that the animal heat of the egg, being retained by the basket, which is formed of material not conducting caloric, is sufficient to support animal life and develop it.

Women in Our Hospitals

Appalling Increase in the Number of Operations Performed Each Year—How Women May Avoid Them.

Miss Ruby Mushrush
Mrs Fred Seydel

Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a large proportion of the patients lying on those snow-white beds women and girls, who are either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Ovarian and womb troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but every one of those patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, leucorrhœa, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the womb or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb, and if not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from surgical operations

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy.

The following letters cannot fail to bring hope to despairing women.

Mrs. Fred Seydel, 412 N. 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was in a very serious condition when I wrote to you for advice. I had a serious womb and ovarian trouble and I could not carry a child to maturity, and was advised that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I could not bear to think of going to the hospital, so wrote you for advice. I did as you instructed me and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and I am not only a well woman to-day, but have a beautiful baby girl six months old. I advise all sick and suffering women to write you for advice, as you have done so much for me."

Miss Ruby Mushrush, of East Chicago, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been a great sufferer with irregular menstruation and ovarian trouble, and about three months ago the doctor, after using the X-Ray on me, said I had an abcess on the ovaries and would have to have an operation. My mother wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and it not only saved me from an operation but made me entirely well."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice and medicine have restored thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Will Cure Bright's Disease—Remarkable Case of George J. Barber—Quick Recovery After Years of Suffering.

Estherville, Iowa, Jan. 23d.—(Special)—The experience of Mr. George J. Barber, a well known citizen of this place, justifies his friends in making the announcement to the world "Bright's Disease can be cured." Mr. Barber had kidney trouble, and it developed into Bright's Disease. He treated it with Dodd's Kidney Pills, and to-day he is a well man. In an interview he says:

"I can't say too much for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I had Kidney Disease for fifteen years and though I doctored for it with the best doctors here and in Chicago, it developed into Bright's Disease. Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and two boxes cured me completely. I think Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best in the world."

A remedy that will cure Bright's Disease will cure any other form of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure Bright's Disease.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State Fair Officers.

The three-day meeting of the state agricultural society closed with a business session, during which the election of officers took place. President C. N. Cosgrove of Le Sueur and First Vice President B. F. Nelson of Minneapolis were re-elected by acclamation and C. M. Griggs of St. Paul was elected second vice president.

The office of second vice president is the St. Paul office of the society, and has been filled during the past six years by Chester R. Smith. Mr. Smith was a candidate for another term and Mr. Griggs was presented as the representative of the jobbers and the manufacturers. Mr. Griggs was elected by a vote of 122 to 74.

Two new members of the board of managers were elected. G. W. Patterson of Worthington was chosen in place of J. C. Curryer of St. Paul, and D. S. Hall of Buffalo Lake was chosen to succeed N. S. Gordon of Crookston. Both will hold office for three years.

Pensions.

Excellent work has been done by the adjutant general's department in securing pensions for soldiers, their widows and families, according to the report on pensions for the last two years issued by the department. The work has been under the supervision of Maj. Oscar Seebach, assistant adjutant general.

During the last two years there were filed 1,382 new claims, of which 982 were granted and 294 rejected. A comparison with the reports of other years shows that this is the greatest number of pensions ever granted through the agency of the adjutant general's office in the history of the state.

The report shows an increase of 300 per cent over the work done in this division during the previous year. The claims granted during the last two years represent an aggregate annual income to the pensioners of $31,530.

Thieves at the Capitol.

Vandals and thieves are already getting in their work at the new capitol building. Among the crowds of people who have visited the structure in the past two weeks there have been some whose instinct for curios was stronger than conscience. The capitol commission employees have already missed several of the ornamental brass doorknobs with which the building is fitted.

Some bold persons seem to have actually walked away with handsome chairs. The new capitol is full of workmen and men are carrying furniture in and out every day, so almost any one can pick up a chair and walk out with it and not attract attention. Either some furniture has gone astray in delivery, or else some thief has taken chances by carrying chairs away in plain sight of hundreds of people.

His Face For a Label.

Gov. Johnson has been asked repeatedly since election that he allow his name and picture to be used upon cigar boxes as a label for a new brand of smokes.

More than one dozen applications of of this nature have been received by Frank A. Day, private secretary, and like applications for office, they have been placed on file until the governor gets leisure to decide whether he wants to go down to posterity as the champion of the weed.

Gov. Johnson has been too busy to give them a thought, but it is intimated that the manufacturs will have to cast around for a new name for their products.

To Aid Reserves.

Two bills will be introduced to the present legislature relating to the Minnesota naval reserves. One will be a code bill for the government of the naval militia. It realy will be an amendment to the naval reserve bill of 1899, except that it will provide for an appriation of about $10,000 a year for maintenance. The reserves will have the United Sates ship Fern for a training ship on Lake Superior next season, and will have her or some other government vessel permanently. The naval reserves have spent $400 themseves, in addition to what the city of Duluth and the government has done and are doing.

Beet Sugar.

Eight and one-half million pounds of sugar is the estimated output of sugar at the Minnesota Beet Sugar company mill, St. Louis Park, for the season of 1904. The crushing period, which usually lasts about 100 days and ends about Jan. 1, will this year continue about ten days longer, marking the season as the most successful in the history of the industry. The per cent of sugar in last year's beets averaged 12.5, varying from 14 to 17.75. The quality of the sugar is "chemically pure," and has been pronounced by New York experts as the finest on the market.

News Notes.

New rules for the pardon board are made in a house bill.

State employment bureaus are provided for in a house bill.

Duluth citizens are engaged in a court house site war. The contention is between those who would like to have the new half-million-dollar court house built on the old court house site, and those who would have it on a site nearer the business center.

It has been definitely decided by the Standard Lumber company, of Bemidji, not to erect a saw mill on the reservation, as originally planned. All logs will be shipped by rail to Grand Rapids and floated down the Mississippi to the company's mills at Dubuque.

RACIAL CUSTOMS.

In Spain a bride has no girl attendants to stand at the altar with her, but instead a "madrina," or grandmother. Neither does she have a wedding cake or any festive departure after the ceremony. The wedded pair go quietly to their new home, where they remain until the following day, when they start on their honeymoon. Before leaving they pay a formal visit to their respective relatives.

Eight days after a baby is born in Russia, its hair is shaved by a priest. This is snipped off in four places on the top of the head, to form a cross. The baby's godfather collects the morsels of down, pinching it up with wax from the tapers. It is then thrown into the baptismal font. If the little pellet sinks there is great sadness in the baby's home, for the Russians believe that the child will die before a year has passed.

"When a Japanese servant is rebuked or scolded," says a traveler, "he must smile like a Cheshire cat. The etiquette in smiles is very misleading at first. I often used to think that Taki, my riksha 'boy,' meant to be impertinent when he insisted on smiling when I was angry at him. But when he told me of the death of his little child with a burst of laughter I knew that this was only one of the curious details of etiquette in this topsy-turvy land."

In some parts of Siam a girl who reaches a certain age without marrying is labeled and placed in a privileged class under the special care of the king, who binds himself to find a husband for them all. His method is delightfully simple. A prisoner in any one of the Siamese jails may gain his pardon and release by marrying one of the ineligible class. Whether he is already married or not is of no great consequence, for in Siam a man is not restricted to one wife.

Spain produced 175,109 tons of lead in 1903, exceeding the output of all other countries except the United States. Mexico is the third largest producer, and Australia comes fourth in order.

Cigars exported from Cuba numbered 205,244,298, valued at $12,302,969, of which 45,769,422, valued at $2,888,111, went to the United States; 28,388,074, valued at $1,968,395, to Germany, and 92,559,817, valued at $5,197,785, to England, last year.

A GREAT SUFFERER

LAY HELPLESS AND SPEECHLESS FOR HOURS AT A TIME.

Sinking Spells, Headaches, Rheumatism, All Caused by Poor Blood—Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

When Mrs. Williams was asked for some details of the fearful illness from which she had so long suffered, she spoke as follows:

"Ever since I had nervous prostration, about thirteen years ago, I have had periodical spells of complete exhaustion. Any excitement or unusual activity would throw me into a state of lifelessness. At the beginning my strength would come back in a moderate time, but the period of weakness kept lengthening until at last I would lie helpless as many as three hours at a stretch."

"You were under medical treatment, of course?"

"Yes, when I became so bad that I had to give up my housework, in May of 1903, I was being treated for kidney trouble, and later the doctor thought my difficulties came from change of life. I was not only weak, but I had dizzy feelings, palpitation of the heart, misery after eating, hot flashes, nervous headaches, rheumatic pains in the back and hips. The doctor did me so little good that I gave up his treatment, and really feared that my case was incurable."

"What saved you from your state of hopelessness?"

"In July of 1903 I had a very bad spell, and my husband came in one day with a little book which told of remarkable cures effected by a remedy for the blood and the nerves, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He bought a box for me, and that was the beginning of my return to health. My appetite grew keen, my food no longer distressed me, my nerves were quieted, and my strength began to revive."

"How long did you take this remedy?"

"For two months only. At the end of that time I had regained my health and cheerfulness, and my friends say that I am looking better than I have done for the past fifteen years."

Mrs. Lizzie Williams is now living at No. 416 Cedar street, Quincy, Illinois. The pills which she praises so highly, cure all diseases that come from impoverished blood. If your system is all run down, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the very best remedy to take. Any druggist can supply them.

"The World of Medicine Recognizes Grip as Epidemic Catarrh."—Medical Talk.

La Grippe is Epidemic Catarrh.

IT spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip."

Without intending to do so, a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful grip had clutched us in its fatal clasp.

Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? If so, read the following letters.

These testimonials speak for themselves, as to the efficacy of Peruna in cases of la grippe or its after-effects:

A Southern Judge Cured

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes:

"Some five or six years ago I had a very severe spell of grip which left me with systemic catarrh.

"A friend advised me to try your Peruna, which I did, and was immediately benefited and cured. The third bottle completed the cure."—H. J. Goss.

Cured in a Few Weeks.

Miss Jean Cowgill, Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., is the leading lady with the Aubrey Stock Co. She writes the following:

"During the past winter of 1901, I suffered for several weeks from a severe attack of grip, which left a serious catarrhal condition of the throat and head

"Some one suggested Peruna. As a last resort, after wasting much time and money on physicians, I tried the remedy faithfully, and in a few weeks was as well as ever."—Jean Cowgill.

Saved by Pe-ru-na.

Hon. James R. Guill is one of the oldest and most esteemed men of Omaha, Neb. He has done much to make it what it is, serving on public boards a number of times. He endorses Peruna in the following words:

"I am 68 years old, am hale and hearty and Peruna has helped me attain it. Two years ago I had la grippe—my life was despaired of. Peruna saved me."—J. R. Guill.

A LESSON IN MANNERS.

The Way a Clever American Woman Managed a Duke.

A story which belongs to a time several years ago when an English duke was a much sought after personage in New York society is told by Mr. James L. Ford in "The Brazen Calf."

This duke, contemptuously noting the eagerness with which New Yorkers fawned upon him, had formed the habit of going out to dinner without troubling himself to put on evening dress. A lady had invited him to dinner without knowing of this peculiarity and was awaiting his arrival when her butler opened the door and cast a glance at her over the heads of interesting guests which said plainly that something was wrong.

She hastened into the hall to find the duke standing there clad in the checked sack suit and flaming red tie which had seemed to him "good enough" for a dinner party of American calf worshipers. This woman, however, had presence of mind, and she advanced upon him radiant and smiling.

"No," she said decisively as she took him by the hand; "I won't accept any excuses. You've come round to tell me why it is that you can't dine here to night, and it's ever so much nicer of you to do that than just to send a note. The dinner's a little late, and you've just time to go home and dress and be back here before we begin."

The nobleman opened his mouth to reply, but his hostess shut him off in a second: "No; you needn't make any explanations or excuses. Remember, you've only twenty minutes, so you must hurry."

A moment later the astonished duke found himself stepping toward his [illegible] in a perhaps wondering what new social force it was that was impelling him in that direction.

A WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW.

The Things That Most Impressed a Feminine Tourist Abroad.

"What impressed you most?" said the gushing girl to the woman who had just returned from a trip abroad. "You must have seen such wonderful things."

The woman who had traveled thought deeply a few minutes; then she said slowly: "I think it was the lack of napkins in Scotland. Yes, that was it. My dear, there isn't a sign of a napkin on the tables in Scotland. If you ask for one, you may get it, and then again you may not. I was entertained in the homes of some of the finest people in Scotland, and never a napkin did I get.

"The next most impressive thing was the size of the coins in England. I used up a great deal of good, nervous energy trying ways and means to stuff those cart wheels into my little purse. One day, when my pocketbook had become unusually clumsy, I became almost hysterical, and that night I dreamed that I was using belt buckles for the coin of the realm.

"There's one queer thing, though. You know I never could get it through my head how one made double change. You know what I mean—some one gives you too much change, and then you give them some money, and it's all right or something of that sort. Well, I never could understand that process in good United States money, with which I'm more or less familiar, but over there in England I accomplished that feat again and again without a tremor. Don't ask me how I did it. I don't know. It just came to me. Can I do it now in United States money? No, I can't. I left that special ability behind in England."—New York Tribune.

The Effect of Punctuation.

The following lines, found in an old book, improbable as they may seem on first reading, lose all their improbability by inserting semicolons after the words in italics:

I saw a cloud begirt with ivy round
I saw a sturdy oak creep on the ground
I saw an ant swallow up a whale
I saw the boiling sea brimful of ale
I saw a vial glass fifteen yards deep
I saw a well full of man's tears that weep
I saw a man's eyes all in a flame of fire
I saw a house high as the moon or higher
I saw the radiant sun even at midnight
I saw a man who saw this wondrous sight.

SPORTING RIGHTS.

Only Source of Income of Many Titled English Families.

Were it not for the enormous sums paid for fishing and shooting rights many people of ancient names and goodly title would, in the most literal sense, have no means of livelihood whatever, and only the other day one of the best known property agents of the west end of London drew up for the writer a list of a dozen people mixing in society of an exclusive kind, every penny of whose income is derived from the letting of sporting rights.

Nearly all the money thus expended has been made in commerce, and the agent referred to above showed documentary evidence proving that there are lots of men who do not mind paying as much as £100 for every deer, £3 for every trout and £20 every salmon they kill, plus the sport of killing them. One of the most remarkable features of this letting is the fact that only about one in every hundred of the owners of ancient sporting rights ever enjoys his privileges as a sportsman. He either prefers or is compelled to part with such privileges, and those who take advantage of them are nearly all people in business.

This renting of fishing and sporting has even extended down to comparatively humble people in the provinces. Many a small Yorkshire farmer is being kept, and well kept, not by his farming, but by the letting of some comparatively insignificant sporting right.—London Tit-Bits.

Breeding Insects For Wax.

Among the queer industries of China is that of breeding wax producing insects in the Chienchang valley during May. But the insects will not work in their birthplace and have to be carried 400 miles in gourds by porters traveling only by night. There are thousands of insects in the gourds and wrapped in leaves picked from the wood oil tree. His journey ended, the porter immediately goes to his master and delivers his burden of gourds. At once the leafy bags are tied to the branches of the ash trees, which are only five or six feet high. By Sept. 1 the trees look as if covered with snow. It is a snow, however, not amenable to the temperatures which wipe out ordinary snow. The branches are then cut off, and their quarter of an inch of pure white coating is scraped off. The wax is heated, strained and turned into molds to be used for lighting, furniture polish and imparting gloss to silk.—St. James' Gazette.

The Lines on Sardine Boxes.

If you are fond of sardines, here is something that will be useful for you to know. On nearly every box containing these delicacies will be found two parallel lines cut in the top. The distance between the lines denotes the size of the fish, whether they are small, medium or large. Of course the smaller the sardines the better is their flavor, and therefore the boxes with the lines close together contain the finest fish. Some dishonest firms are very fond of selling pilchards to their customers and calling them sardines, but if you make up your mind never to buy a box unless it has the two closely drawn lines you may be certain of obtaining the article you asked for.—London Standard.

Lady Tennyson.

Shortly after Lady Tennyson's marriage one of her women friends wrote the following: "We would find Mrs. Tennyson alone in the large drawing room, always writing, arrayed in a dress of soft gray merino trimmed with velvet or fur and with a long train, a piece of rich old lace, worn instead of a cap, drooping over her hair behind and coming to a point in front. She was extremely kind in lending us books. Among these I particularly remember Fichte's philosophical works, which she admired greatly. Her manner was always most gracious and dignified, perhaps rather languid, but this arose chiefly from lack of vitality or physical strength."

A Story of Sam Houston.

There is a story about General Sam Houston of Texas and a practicing physician who did not like the old general, being strenuously opposed to him politically. One day after a heated political discussion the physician said, "General, I like you well enough socially, but politically I would not believe you on earth." "I would believe you, doctor," was the quiet reply of the general. "Then, sir," vehemently exclaimed the doctor, "you have a much better opinion of me than I have of you." "Not a better opinion, doctor, but I simply have a little more politeness than you have."

Sage Advice.

"Now you're your own master," said the wise father, "you must begin to build up a reputation for yourself."

"All right, governor," replied the youth.

"And remember," continued the old gentleman, "you can't build up a reputation with the bricks you bring home in your hat."—Exchange.

Tommy—I can count up to five on me fingers, can't I, ma? Ma—Yes, Tommy, but don't brag. I saw a little boy no older than you today who could count up to fifty. Tommy—Gee whiz! Where did he get all them fingers?—Philadelphia Press.

Hogarth's Lament.

Take my advice and never draw caricature. By the long practice of it I have lost the enjoyment of beauty. I never see a face but it is distorted and never have the satisfaction to behold the human face divine.—Hogarth.

OLD TIME BASEBALL.

IT WAS NOT SCIENTIFIC AND FEW RULES WERE OBSERVED.

The Batter Was Known as the Paddleman, and the Pitcher's Object Was to Throw a Ball That Could Be Hit—Bringing In the Side.

Time will not turn back in its flight, but the mind can travel back to the days before baseball or at least to the days before baseball was so well known and before it had become so scientific. There were ball games in those days in town and country, and the country ball game was an event. There were no clubs. The country boy of those days was not gregarious. He preferred flocking by himself and remaining independent. On Sunday afternoons the neighborhood boys met on some well-crossed pasture, and, whether ten or forty, every one was to take part in the game. Self appointed leaders divided the boys into two companies by alternately picking one until the supply was exhausted. The bat, which was no round stick, such as is now used, but a stout paddle with a blade two inches thick and four inches wide with a convenient handle dressed on to it, was the chosen arbiter. One of the leaders spat on the side of this bat, which was honestly called "the paddle," and asked the leader of the opposition forces, "Wet or dry?" The paddle was then sent whirling up in the air, and when it came down whichever side won went to the bat, while the others scattered over the field.

The ball was not what would be called a "National league ball" nowadays, but it served every purpose. It was usually made on the spot by some boy offering up his woolen socks as an oblation, and these were raveled and wound round a bullet, a handful of strips cut from a rubber overshoe, a piece of cork or almost anything or nothing, when anything was not available. The winding of this ball was an art, and whoever could excel in this art was looked upon as a superior being. The ball must be a perfect sphere and the threads as regularly laid as the wire on the helix of a magnetic armature. When the winding was complete the surface of the ball was thoroughly sewed with a large needle and thread to prevent it from unwinding when a thread was cut. The diamond was not arbitrarily marked off as now. Sometimes there were four bases and sometimes six or seven. They were not equidistant, but were marked by any fortuitous rock or shrub or depression in the ground where the steers were wont to bellow and paw up the earth. One of these tellurial cavities was almost sure to be selected as "the den," now called the home plate. There were no masks or mitts or protectors. There was no science or chicanery, now called "headwork." The strapping young fellows, embryonic teachers, presidents [illegible] were too honest for this. The pitcher was the one who could throw a ball over the "den" and few could do this. His object was to throw a ball that could be hit.

The paddleman's object was to hit the ball, and if he struck at it—which he need not do unless he chose—and missed it the catcher, standing well back, tried to catch it after it had lost its momentum by striking the earth once and bounding in the air—"on the first bounce" it was called—and if he succeeded the paddleman was "dead," and another took his place. If he struck it and it was not caught in the field or elsewhere in the air or "on the bounce," he could strike twice more, but the third time he was compelled to run. There was no umpire and very little wrangling. There was no effort to pounce upon a base runner and touch him with the ball. Any one having it could throw it at him, and if it hit him he was "dead"—almost literally sometimes. If he dodged the ball, he kept on running until the "den" was reached. Some of the players became proficient in "ducking, dodging and side stepping, and others learned to throw the ball with the accuracy of a rifle bullet.

No matter how many players were on a side, each and every one had to be put out, and if the last one made three successive home runs he "brought in the side," and the outfielders, pitchers and catcher had to do all their work over again. The boy who could "bring in his side" was a hero. No victorious general was ever prouder or more lauded. Horatius at the bridge was small potatoes in comparison. He was the uncrowned king. There were no foul hits. If a ball touched the paddle ever so lightly, it was a tick, and three ticks made a compulsory run. The score was kept by some one cutting notches in a stick, and the runs during an afternoon ran into the hundreds. If the ball was lost in the grass or rolled under a Scotch thistle, the cry "Lost ball!" was raised and the game stopped until it was found.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

What a Lie Did.

The madness of suicide as a relief from mental anguish was vividly illustrated years ago by an incident which occurred in an Italian town. Moretti, a tailor, was sent to prison on a charge of fraud. His sweetheart called upon the police officer to ask how long Moretti was likely to be confined and was told that it would be probably for many years. The policeman had been instigated to say this by the girl's mother, who disliked the match. Overwhelmed with grief and thereby driven to despair, the poor girl put an end to her life by poison. A few days later Moretti was released from custody, the accusation against him having been proved false. He returned home to find his affianced bride a corpse. Frenzied at the sight, he, too, destroyed himself. The lie wrought a double tragedy.

Queen Bess' Wardrobe.

Royal annals have never recorded a more varied and extensive wardrobe than that which belonged to the "virgin queen." Even at the age of sixty-eight, when she might be supposed to have outlived her youthful vanity, she possessed 99 complete official costumes, 102 French gowns, 100 robes with trains and 67 without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 tunics, not to mention such trifles as 96 mantles, 85 dressing gowns and 27 fans.

It is possible that she had an ugly foot, for she possessed only nine pairs of shoes, which, considering her extravagances in other articles of apparel, must have some meaning. At her death 3,000 articles were found duly catalogued in her wardrobe which had adorned her proud person.

How He Viewed It.

There was a carriage accident in a town in Scotland. A brougham containing two ladies was run away with down a steep hill. The noise and clatter of the horses' hoofs on the flags with which the town was paved were terrific. A Scotch farmer who was walking on the footpath turned to watch the carriage disappearing in the distance and said to his companion, "For us who see it, it is indeed a fearsome sight, but for those who are inside it must be a rich spiritual experience!"—London Gentlewoman.

The reputation of Mr. George Washington Jones for honesty had been slighly tarnished for some years, but his son Erastus was not supposed to know it.

"Cu's how cold contracts t'ings," Mr. Jones remarked thoughtfully one evening. "Now dere's Max'milian Smith's wood pile for a case. 'Pears like dat wood pile is shrinking steady since dis las' col' spell set in."

"Seems as if our pile behind de stove was getting bigger, paw," hazarded Erastus, gazing at his parent for explanation of this phenomenon.

"Course it am, chile," said Mr. Jones calmly. "'cause de room is hot an' heat expands t'ings. 'Pears like yo' gwine to school don' put much wisdom into dat head of yours."

A Chinese Dog Story.

The following dog story is a favorite one in China:

"There was a Chinaman who had three dogs. When he came home one evening he found them asleep on his couch of teakwood and marble, whipped them and drove them forth.

"The next night when he came home the dogs were lying on the floor. But he placed his hand on the couch and found it warm from their bodies; therefore he gave them another whipping.

"The third night, returning earlier than usual, he found the dogs sitting before the couch, blowing on it to cool it."

Almost Impossible.

Jack—Why wouldn't she marry you? She loves you to distraction. I know it because she told me so. George—She insisted on my proving that I am not already married, because she says there is a great deal of bigamy nowadays. Well, it is easy enough to prove that one is married, but how the dickens am I going to prove that I am not?

Painless Spanking.

Blessings of the Railroad.

"The new railroad has been a great blessing to us," says a rural exchange. "In less than six weeks we got enough damages out of it to build a town hall and grade the cemetery. A few more enterprises of this kind, and our town will rise to heights undreamed of in the history of new settlements!"—Atlanta Constitution.

WOMEN'S NEGLECT

SUFFERING THE SURE PENALTY

Health Thus Lost Is Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong? We hear every day the same story over and over again. "I do not feel well; I am so tired all the time!"

Miss Kate McDonald

More than likely you speak the same words yourself, and no doubt you feel far from well. The cause may be easily traced to some derangement of the female organs which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, bearing-down pains, flatulency, nervousness, sleeplessness, leucorrhœa.

These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless heeded a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result.

The never-failing remedy for all these symptoms is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Kate McDonald, of Woodbridge, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"I think that a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I cannot help from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women.

"For a long time I suffered untold agony with a uterine trouble and irregularities, which made me a physical wreck, and no one thought I would recover, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me, and made me well and strong, and I feel it my duty to tell other suffering women what a splendid medicine it is."

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

Elegant Through Sleeper Service St. Louis to St. Augustine.

Beginning January 9, 1905, the Southern Railway—only St. Louis line with its own rails to Jacksonville—put into service fine observation sleeper line from St. Louis to St. Augustine, Fla. ONLY ONE NIGHT ON THE ROAD. This sleeper will leave St. Louis every day except Sunday at 10:00 a. m., arrive at Jacksonville the next evening at 9:35 p. m. and arrive at St. Augustine at 10:35 p. m. The trip is directly through the beautiful Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, thence via Chattanooga, Atlanta and Macon, Ga. At Lexington, Ky., this sleeper is taken on to the famous "Chicago & Florida Special"—the finest winter train in the World, carrying every variety of perfectly constructed equipment.

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John La Rue, of 115 Paterson Avenue, Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the back ache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head and other symptoms disappeared."

WHY HE NEEDED A SPADE.

Drummer Wanted a Bath and Would Have to Dam the Creek to Get It.

Congressman Brownlow is from one of the mountainous regions of Tennessee. He comes from that part of the world where the crests of rock are so high that Gov. "Bob" Taylor once said of them that small children could stand on tiptoe and tickle the feet of angels with very short straws. He is interested greatly, Mr. Brownlow is, says a Washington letter to the New York American, in the good roads movement.

In some parts of Tennessee it is difficult for a stranger traveling from New York, for instance, to imagine that the light of civilization ever has penetrated them. The houses are crudely built; the roadways mere blazes, the post offices sometimes 50 miles apart. Mr. Brownlow tells a story of a Philadelphia drummer having reached one of the villages late at night, and on being awakened early in the morning rubbed his eyes and then asked for a bath. In a few minutes the landlord returned with a spade, a hickory towel and a gourd of soft soap.

"What do I want with the spade?" asked the drummer.

"Well, you'll need it when you try to dam the creek," the hotel man said.

GOUNOD'S "AMBER EAR."

Lady Wanted It Played and Was Accommodated, But Under Different Title.

"Play the 'Amber Ear,'" said the waiter to the leader of the restaurant orchestra, while the people at near-by tables chuckled, relates the New York Press.

"You mean 'The Gondolier,'" corrected the leader, leaning over the edge of the little music balcony.

"No," persisted the waiter. "I asked her was that it, and she said: 'No.' She wants you to play 'Amber Ear.'"

"You go back and ask her again," said the leader with a laugh, and he watched the waiter make his way across the room. In a moment he was back.

"I asked the lady, and she said she wanted you to play the 'Amber Ear,'" he said, with a touch of vexation. "She says you ought to know it if you're a musician."

"Wait a minute," the leader said. A moment later he was at the table where sat the lady of the request, and he came back smiling. He climbed into the little balcony, and presently there mingled with the fragrance of rarebits and Newburgs the strains of Gounod's "Ave Maria."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Best Kernals.

Experiments conducted at the Minnesota agricultural school have proved that seed corn taken from the middle of the ear is better than that taken from the tip or the butt of the same ear, because the former germinates faster, grows more rapidly and is likely to give a heavier yield.

So as to give uniform results twenty-five seeds were taken from the three parts of each ear and were planted at uniform depth in sterilized sand which contained no plant food. They were allowed to grow twenty days. Of the seed selected, 68 per cent from the tips and 88 per cent from the middles and butts germinated. The total growth of the tips was 377.5 centimeters and the average growth per plant was 22.2 centimeters; butts, total growth, 442.5 centimeters, average growth per plant, 26 centimeters; middles, total growth, 491 centimeters, average growth per plant, 28.9 centimeters, showing a gain of 30 per cent for seeds from the middle of cobs over the tips and eleven per cent over the butts.

Iron in Crow Wing.

There is a strong evidence that an important iron range may exist in Crow Wing county. This is not based on the fact that explorations have been in progress a couple of years, or that the explorers claim to have discovered important deposits of ore, but the significant fact that some of the big iron mining operators are beginning to give the district their attention.

The firm of Pickands, Mather & Co., one of the large independent mining and furnace concerns of the United States, has taken options on properties on the Cuyuna range in Crow Wing county and will drill the ground. The firm has taken options on three tracts. Cuyler Adams of Dulth, who has been at the head of a company to explore that territory, the last two years and conducts the negotiations with the prospective lesees. His company has spent a large sum of money and they claim to have discovered iron of merchantable qualities and in commercial quantities.

Saved the Children.

The small children of Mr. and Mrs. Deverey of St. Paul were saved from being burned to death by the timely arrival of Frederick Zabel, uncle of the children.

The children, three and four years old, were left at the home alone, their father having gone to work, and their mother shopping. A woodbox standing close to the stove, which had been overheated, caught fire, and the flames soon filled the room.

The children, panic stricken, wrapped themselves in bed clothing and hid under the bed. Mr. Zabel, who lives in the next flat smelled smoke and investigated. He broke in the door of the Deverey flat and rescued the children, who had been rendered unconscious by the smoke. The fire was extinguished with a loss of $[illegible].

To Improve Barley.

With a view of improving the barley of the northwest, samples of several varieties of foreign barleys have been brought here by J. J. B. Orth, a Minneapolis bareley dealer. These barleys, under the derection of D. G. Fairchild, agricultural explorer for the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, having been successfully grown in Wisconsin as a test of their adaptability to this soil. Up to this time Wisconsin barley has had a better standing in the trade. It is planned to introduce the new samples in Minnesota and the Dakotas this spring.

A New Bird to Hunt.

The state game and fish commission decided to introduce a new fowl into the reserves of the state—the ring-neck pheasant. This bird is a cross between the Chinese and English pheasant, and is found in the states east of Minnesota. It was voted not to expend exceeding $200 in bringing the bird to the state.

The commission at the new state capitol re-elected it officers, as follows: President, Uri L. Lamprey of St. Paul; first vice president, H. G. Smith of Winono; second vice president, William Bird of Fairmont; secretary, D. W. Meeker of Moorhead; executive agent, S. F. Fullerton of St. Paul.

Turned Burglar.

The village of Mountain Iron on the Mesaba range furnished the unique news of a guardian of the peace and property of the community turning burglar while on duty.

James Welsh, the night watchman is now in the county jail in Duluth, awaiting the action of the grand jury on a charge of having broken into Andrew Anderson's saloon and helping himself to $100 in cash and $50 worth of jewelry. Under the statue relating to such cases Welsh cannot obtain bail. An officer of the law charged with a crime cannot be admitted to liberty under bond.

COL. BECKWITH SAYS:

"I Take Pleasure in Commending Pe-ru-na For Coughs and Colds."

COL. PAUL E. BECKWITH.

Colonel Paul E. Beckwith, Lt. Col., retired, 1st Reg. Minute Men, in a letter from 1503 Vermont avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"From the unqualified endorsement of many of my friends, I take pleasure in commending your remedies for coughs and colds."—Paul E. Beckwith.

IN FIELD OR BARRACKS PE-RU-NA IS EFFICACIOUS.

The constant exposure to the elements experienced in an out-door life is not so apt to cause coughs and colds as sedentary habits.

Those who are brought face to face with the weather every day in active life are much less liable to catarrhal diseases than those who are housed up in illy ventilated rooms. And yet both of these classes are more or less subject to catarrh and catarrhal diseases. The soldier as well as the civilian finds it frequently necessary to use Peruna on account of coughs and colds.

ALL CLASSES ARE SUBJECT TO CATARRH.

No one is exempt. The strong and healthy are less liable than the weak and ill, but none entirely escape.

Peruna has always been a great favorite with the military men, both in the army and navy.

The strongest kind of testimonials are received from officers of high rank concerning the virtues of Peruna for all catarrhal ailments.

Only a small per cent. of these can be used for publication for want of space.

Mr. Harrison L. Deam, Burnside Post No. 8, Department of the Potomac, Colonel Encampment No. 69, Union Veterans Legion, Colonel Green Clay Smith Regiment No. 17, U. V. U., Department of the Potomac, Military Order Loyal Legion, Department of Columbia, Major 34th Indiana Veteran Volunteer Infantry, writes:

"There is no longer any question as to the curative qualities of Peruna in all catarrhal troubles. Its successful use by many of my friends entitles it to confidence and endorsement."

The present leagislature, seems to be anxious to make a record for twisting the tails of the railway companys, but weather they are sincere in their doings, or are simply intruducing "leg pullers" time will tell.

It must have been amusing to a Minnesotian to have been in Sunney Tennessee, the first of this week, and watch them fellows who always have so much to say about the Northern winter's ice bound, with all traffic stopped, while Minnesota was enjoying her usal pleasant winter's weather.

Notwithstanding the campaign is over the public examiner threw a bumb shell into the State Auditor Iversen office by his report, that the State was $75,000 short through the misconduct of that office since the advent of S. C. Iverson, on Jan. 1st. 1903. An investagation is to be made by the legislature, which will be fully explained in the next campaign.

The man who is the possessor of a piece of land has the game in his own hands. There is no promoter or stock gambler who can jepardize his investment. Where it is purchased with judgement, land is always worth the money paid for it and is bound to increase in value. It cannot be destroyed or carried away. It requires only industry to make it profitable and productive. It constitutes a source of independence in any condition of the money market and amid all of the [illegible] of speculative enterprising.

There is probably no place on earth [illegible] than a countrynews [illegible] kinds of people there are. Some get [illegible] if a statement is not sent, others will not pay until they receive a statement. Some will pay without a statement and others won't pay whether a statement is sent or not. Some thought they didn't owe so much. Some say they could'nt get along without the paper, and others say it doesn't amount to much. But the meanest, scrubbiest, in the list is the man who takes it until he is shut off for nonpayment and then spends all his time explaing how he used to take" the thing" but stopped because it was "no count."—Fertile Journal.

THE JUSTICE OF IT

Thief River Falls seems to be ready to profit by the labor done by Red Lake Falls, to get the county of Red Lake established, although they were knifeing the proposition to set off Red Lake county from Polk in 1898. At the time the bill was passed, by the legislature in 1893, for the division of countie's, we put in the best part of that winter, in company with J. T. Knight, of Red Lake Falls, lobbing for the passage of the bill. At that time, when the citizens of the present County seat were putting up their good hard cash to pay the expenses of making the fight for County division, the citizen of Thief River Falls were sulking in their tents and doing what they could to assist Crookston to defeat the measure. Now after Red Lake Falls won the fight they are ready to step in and recieve the benifit of anothers labor. The voters of Red Lake County had ought to consider the justice of the claim of the claim of the two rivals for the county seat of that county, and give credit for the establisment of the county to Red Lake Falls and allow them to keep the county seat thereof.

Waiter Couldn't Help Them Out.

A well known Baltimore society man was once spending a few days with his wife at Atlantic City, and in connection with his visit he told the following story: When he seated himself in the dining room on the evening of his arrival he discovered that he could not read the menu, as he had left his glasses in his room; and his eyes were useless without them. When he passed it to his wife she exclaimed that she was in the same predicament. At a loss to know what to do, the gentleman called the waiter to him and, pointing to the menu, said:

"Read that to me and I will give you a dollar."

Quick as a flash the waiter replied:

"Scuse me, boss, but I ain't had much ejication maself!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Webster on Debt

Once when Daniel Webster was riding along a New England road in a stagecoach, so the story runs, he was annoyed by the jolting and poked his head out of the window to yell at the driver. "Hey! Can't you drive a little slower?" "No," responded the coachman; "the horses are running away, sir." "Run 'em into a fence corner," advised Daniel. "Can't, sir," said the driver reluctantly and despairingly. "They've got the bit between their teeth, sir!" "Well, run them into debt then!" thundered Daniel. "That'll stop anything."

A Poacher's Ruse.

A poacher, writing in the Country Gentleman of London, says: "When I left home at night to go poaching I always left an end of a candle burning in a saucer of water in my bedroom. This was arranged so that it would splutter out about 10 o'clock, just as if I had extinguished it and retired for the night. This I did because I discovered that the keepers were given to watching my house for signs of my leaving, and it was a long time before they found that a candle could go out without human agency."

The Yorkshireman's Coat of Arms.

Allow me to submit to you the Yorkshireman's coat of arms as it was given to me many years ago by a Yorkshireman. It runs thus: A flea, a fly, a magpie and a flitch of bacon—a flea, because he will bite his best friend; a fly, because he will drink from anybody's cup; a magpie, because he will chatter with anybody; a flitch of bacon, because he is no good until he is hung.—London Spectator.

She Knew.

A certain old lady always knew everything before anybody else. One day her niece saw her passing the house and ran out to meet her. "Do come in, aunty," she begged, "and help us. We are making charades."

"Certainly I will," answered the old lady. "I knew you were making them because I smelled them as I came along."

A Pointer.

"Say, Mr. Smartie," whispered little Tommy, slipping from behind the portals, "for a nickel I'll slip you a pick in the parlor tonight."

"What do I want with a pick?" asked Mr. Smartie in astonishment.

"Why, I heard sister say you were going to break the ice tonight."

Human Inequality.

There is a notion, and a most pernicious one, that it is the highest realization of republican form of government that all the people should by some forcing process be made as much alike as possible. All human beings are born equal only in the single fact that they all come into the world by the same natural process. The same equality exists in the matter of death, since what we call life is extinguished for all under the selfsame conditions. But that is all the equality that is possible, for human beings are all unlike and unequal in bodily and mental characteristics, and to such an extent does this lack of equality go that it is seen in the peculiarities of every individual.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Whistler Adorer.

In his book on Whistler, Mortimer Menpes writes: "Once an interesting figure appeared on our horizon, a French painter. He was Whistler's find and was held up to his followers as an example. 'At last,' Whistler said, 'I have found a follower worthy of the master.' I noticed with secret joy that he did not call him pupil. This man went bareheaded always when in the presence of Whistler. Whether out of doors or in, no one could persuade him to wear a hat."

HELPING THE ENEMY.

False to Say That the Reciprocity of Blaine Is Repudiated.

It is the Pittsburg Dispatch, professedly a Republican and not a Democratic newspaper, which says this:

"Mr. Littlefield's declaration that the Republican party 'is strictly in line with the Blaine-McKinley-Dingley view of protection' evades the fact that reciprocity, which both Blaine and McKinley advocated, is now repudiated, and his citation of tin prices as a proof that tariff and trusts have no relations is unfortunate in omitting the prices since the combination in that industry was formed."

To say that the reciprocity which Blaine and McKinley advocated is now repudiated is to falsify the facts. Blaine was a lifelong opponent of reciprocity in competitive products, and McKinley, in the Buffalo speech that has been so distorted and perverted, was careful to stipulate that when trade treaties should be entered into they must be of a character "not to curtail domestic production" and "not to injure any domestic interest." As to tin plate prices, Congressman Littlefield did exactly what he set out to do—demonstrated beyond question that as the direct result of the development of that industry under the McKinley tariff an enormous reduction had taken place in the price paid by American consumers. From the tone of some of its editorials it would seem that the Dispatch thinks the Democratic party needs more support in Pittsburg.

A PERIOD OF MISERY.

Conditions That Existed Under the Last Democratic Tariff.

The conditions existing under the last Democratic tariff law have been described by no one better than by the president of the American Federation of Labor, a Democrat, who said, on Jan. 1, 1898, "That terrible period for the wage earners of the country which began in 1893 and which left behind it such a record of horror, hunger and misery practically ended with the dawn of the year 1897." That was the "dawn" of another Republican administration.

Shall we take any chance of returning to that condition? Are the people willing to elect a Democratic president or a Democratic house of representatives, relying solely on the continuation of a Republican senate (that may at any time and from many different causes become Democratic) to save the country from another period of "horror, hunger and misery" to American wage earners?—Jamestown (N. Y.) Post

The Cold In Alaska.

David T. Hanbury, writing of his first experiences in Alaska, said: "The cold could not be kept out of even the most palatial examples of [illegible] architecture which Dawson City could at that time boast, but the [illegible] stuck to the cult of the morning tub. After I had [illegible] the [illegible] the air [illegible] the water two inches deep into the bathtub, which I had removed to the rear of the room, where there was no heat. Not two minutes had elapsed before I threw off my chamois pajamas in the [illegible] room and, opening the communicating door, stepped hurriedly into the bathtub, for I had no time to lose. Quick as I had been, the atmosphere had been quicker, and just as I stepped into the tub with both feet, wrenching with a great effort the soap from a beam hard by, I slipped on the newly frozen ice in the tub, and over we went, soap, tub and myself, all separated in different quarters of the room. Those two minutes had sufficed to transmute my water into smooth and glassy ice."

Dress Clothes For Foreign Travels.

"Here's a tip for you," said the man who has traveled to the one who is about starting for the other side. "Take your evening clothes, but if you are traveling light leave your frock coat suit at home. Even the Englishman of fashion no longer considers it absolutely necessary to appear in the daytime in his frock coat and silk beaver. For myself, a good serge is the thing in which to knock about the continent. The man who takes his frock and leaves his swallowtail at home is out of his reckoning. Over there at dinner, even in what we'd call a cheap lunch joint here, you'll find plenty of men carefully garbed in evening clothes. Dinner is a ceremony to dress for even though one be not rich."—Philadelphia Record.

Literature Versus Nature.

The essay naturalist observes and admires; the scientific naturalist collects. One brings home a bouquet from the woods; the other, specimens for his herbarium. The former would enlist your sympathies and arouse your enthusiasm; the latter would add to your store of exact knowledge. The one is just as shy of overcoloring or falsifying his facts as the other, only he gives more than facts; he gives impressions and analogies and as far as possible shows you the live bird on the bough.—John Burroughs in Atlantic.

Hours and Luck.

As strong as the superstition of Friday is that concerning certain hours in European and oriental countries.

In Paris the superstition is so prevalent that an enterprising business is that of selling cards on which are printed the hours that should be avoided.

The famous Gambetta consulted a reader of cards as to the auspicious day for embarking on any important enterprise.

President Carnot was skeptical of such things, and he chose an unlucky hour for his journey to Lyons, where he was assassinated.—American Queen.

The King of Bardsey.

Not a mile distant from the rocky promontory of Braich-y-Pwll, the extreme westerly point of north Wales, lies the island of Bardsey, the home of a singularly isolated community. The island is the property of Lord Newborough and was a favorite resort of the third baron, grandfather and predecessor in the title of the present peer. At that period the island was even more remote and out of the way than at present. Communication with Pwllheli was infrequent and uncertain. Consequently the Bardsey folk formed an entirely independent community, forced by circumstances to conduct their own affairs without special reference to the laws of the country. Lord Newborough instituted the office of "king." Selecting from the islanders one of superior parts and character, he invested him with the general authority which he himself possessed as landlord, bidding the rest to obey his ruling, abide by his decisions in case of dispute and in general respect his authority. Partly in jest, partly to strengthen his vicegerent's position, he conferred upon that worthy the title of "king of Bardsey" and bestowed upon him a crown, a treasure and an army. The "crown" was a gorgeous diadem of brass, wondrously embossed and wrought; the "treasure" a silver casket brought from Italy, and the "army" a wooden figure painted to represent a soldier.

Grotesque African Customs.

Tattooing is almost universally practiced by both sexes of the natives of Africa. It is, however, very roughly done and is altogether inferior to the tattooing of the Maoris of New Zealand and other Pacific races. The method of operation is simply to make a slit in the skin and then rub in charcoal. Among the less pleasing feminine ornaments must be reckoned the nose buttons of the Wa Yao and the frightful pelele, or lip ring, of the Anyanja. The nose button is a circular disk of ivory or burnished lead let into one side of the nostril. Ugly as is the effect produced by this, it is yet a thousand times less hideous than the pelele, which consists of a round, flat piece of ivory or wood fixed in a slit in the upper lip. The slit is gradually increased by the insertion of successive plugs, each a little larger than the preceding one, until it can accommodate a full sized pelele, which sticks out an inch or more in front of the face, rendering the appearance of the wearer scarcely human.

Gilding Without Gold.

One more proof that all is not gold that glitters is found in the fact that much of the gold lettering seen on signs, and also much of the gilding of picture frames, has no gold whatever about it. Among laymen the opinion prevails that all such decoration requires the actual use of gold leaf, but the reality is different, and a substitute that defies detection has been widely used for some time. The exact effect of gold is secured by using a leaf of [illegible] or aluminium under yellow paint. The metal backing gives the required luster, and the paint gives the required color. This method cannot be used in all cases, because the paint is of peculiar quality and requires putting on with an even thickness. For this reason it is generally applicable only to flat surfaces. Parts of a gilded picture frame which are molded into waving surfaces generally require genuine golf leaf to cover them.—Philadelphia Record.

Plant a Tree.

When eating a good pear or apple save the seeds and plant them either in a flower pot, where they will germinate before long, or else directly in the garden, when they will come up next spring. To prevent their loss the place must be covered as a mark. It takes a number of years before they bear fruit, but to see the progress of growth from year to year is always interesting. People often think it is not worth while for them to plant trees. They will not live to have fruit of them and so neglect it entirely. But some one will enjoy the harvest. It is just the individual egotism which causes so much unhappiness and affects all classes of society in many ways.—Hartford Times.

Great Heads and Little Wit.

Great men are usually said to have great memories, but it does not follow that all who have great memories are great men. I remember an idiot in Ohio who was a great curiosity many years ago. He knew the whole Bible by heart from beginning to end, and if any verse was read or repeated to him he could tell exactly in what book and chapter it was to be found and its verse number in the chapter. He was considered a great marvel in this particular, but in every other he was a mental imbecile and could not be trusted even to feed himself.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

For a Shave de Luxe.

"Let me give you a tip for which I think you will be grateful," said a local barber in one of the downtown shops the other day. "Always maintain a pleasant feeling and a slight smile if possible when in a barber's chair for the purpose of being shaved. When the face is in a smile and the muscles are relaxed it is very much easier for the barber to run over it with a razor. This is especially applicable to persons who have a tough and wiry beard."—Washington Star.

A Mean Trick.

A Huntsville man has a book on the cover of which is a picture of a man yawning. Whenever his wife begins to lecture him he gets out the book and reads it in front of her. She sees the picture and has to stop talking to yawn. Finally she becomes too tired to talk.—Kansas City Star.

An Indian's Advice.

The following is a statement made by a full blood who is well posted on Indian affairs: "Government safeguards have been the bane of the Indian. Instead of being taught to rely upon himself he has been encouraged to be dependent. The government should have pushed him off to his own resources long ago, as a cow does her calf when it is old enough to rustle for itself. The government should have given the Indian 160 acres, together with a mule and a plow, in the beginning and enjoined him to 'root, hog, or die.' Turn him loose. Let him go and work out his own salvation. Sentiment and misguided philanthropy will never save him. He must save himself."—Kansas City Journal.

Gondola Willie.

When Emperor William was younger he used to sound alarms at odd hours and turn up all available army corps to march past or maneuver when they least expected it. On one such occasion the garrison included a detachment of submarine crews; and the emperor came along accoutered as an admiral.

He was standing among a group of shivering officers when one veteran took him for some other worthy sailor. He slapped him on the back.

"I see that Gondola Willie has fished up the aquarium this morning," he observed pleasantly.

They attribute the cessation of sudden alarms to that incident.

Jupiter's Big Red Blotch.

In 1878 something happened on Jupiter which caused a red blotch to appear in his southern hemisphere near one of the great belts that cross his disk like huge bands of colored clouds. It was 30,000 miles long and 8,000 miles broad, yet, after all, only a little patch on the mighty disk! It has remained ever since, sometimes brightening to almost the crimson hue of fire and sometimes fading nearly to invisibility, yet always, even when faintest, certifying its presence and its power by keeping the area originally covered by it clear of all other objects.—Success

BISHOP OWES HEALTH AND LIFE TO PE-RU-NA.

Ministers of All Denominations Join in Recommending Pe-ru-na to the People.

Public speaking especially exposes the throat and bronchial tubes to catarrhal affections.

Breathing the air of crowded assemblies, and the necessary exposure to night air which many preachers must face, makes catarrh especially prevalent among their class.

Peruna has become justly popular among them.

BISHOP L.H. HALSEY.

The Friends of Pe-ru-na.

Despite the prejudices of the medical profession against proprietary medicines, the clergy have always maintained a strong confidence and friendship for Peruna.

They have discovered by personal experience that Peruna does all that is claimed for it.

The Bishop's Strong Tribute to Pe-ru-na.

L. H. Halsey, Bishop C. M. E. Church, Atlanta, Ga., writes:

"I have found Peruna to be a great remedy for catarrh. I have suffered with this terrible disease for more than twenty years, until since I have been using Peruna, which has relieved me of the trouble.

"I have tried many remedies and spent a great deal of hard-earned money for them, but I found nothing so effectual in the cure of catarrh as the great medicine, Peruna.

"I feel sure that Peruna is not only a triumph of medical science, but it is also a blessing to suffering humanity.

"Every individual who suffers with respiratory diseases will find Peruna a magnificent and sovereign remedy."—L. H. Halsey, Bp. C. M. E. Church.

Peruna is the most prompt and sure remedy for catarrh that can be taken.

Many a preacher has been able to meet his engagements only because he keeps on hand a bottle of Peruna, ready to meet any emergency that may arise.

We have on file many letters of recommendation like the one given above. We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast number of grateful letters Dr. Hartman is constantly receiving in praise of his famous catarrh remedy, Peruna.

HER BLOOD TOO THIN

GENERAL DEBILITY RESULTS FROM IMPOVERISHED BLOOD.

The Remedy That Makes New Blood Banishes Weakness, Headaches, Indigestion and Nervous Troubles.

Hundreds of women suffer from headaches, dizziness, restlessness, languor and timidity. Few realize that their misery all comes from the bad state of their blood. They take one thing for their head, another for their stomach, a third for their nerves, and yet all the while it is simply their poor blood that is the cause of their discomfort.

If one sure remedy for making good, rich blood were used every one of their distressing ailments would disappear, as they did in the case of Mrs. Ella F. Stone, who had been ailing for years and was completely run down before she realized the nature of her trouble.

"For several years," said Mrs. Stone, "I suffered from general debility. It began about 18[illegible] with indigestion, nervousness and steady headaches. Up to 1900 I hadn't been able to find any relief from this condition. I was then very thin and bloodless. An enthusiastic friend, who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, urged me to give them a trial and I finally bought a box.

"I did not notice any marked change from the use of the first box, but I determined to give them a fair trial and I kept on. When I had finished the second box I could see very decided signs of improvement in my condition. I began to feel better all over and to have hopes of a complete cure.

"I used in all eight or ten boxes, and when I stopped I had got back my regular weight and a good healthy color and the gain has lasted. I can eat what I please without discomfort. My nervousness is entirely gone, and, while I had constant headaches before, I very rarely have one now. I cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to women who suffer as I did."

Mrs. Stone was seen at her pretty home in Lakewood, R. I., where, as the result of her experience, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are very popular. These famous pills are sold by all druggists. A book that every woman needs is published by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. It is entitled "Plain Talks to Women," and will be sent free on request.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Seed Wheat.

Plump, heavy kernels of wheat grown in a rusted field, but which matured despite the severe test to which they were put, are especially desirable as seed wheat this season, according to Professor C. P. Bull of the Minnesota state experiment farm, in a statement he has just issued on the subject.

Professor Bull advises farmers, however, to use extreme caution in selecting for seed wheat that was grown in rusted fields. He estimates that only a small proportion, probably 10 or 20 per cent, of the wheat grown in rust-infected fields, will be sound enough to use advisedly as seed.

Very little wheat that was attacked by rust last year grades above No. 2 northern, most of it being no grade and rejected. This, Professor Bull unreservedly declares, should not be used for seed. If there is any No. 1 or No. 2, however, he advises farmers to invest in fanning mills and clean and grade every kernel to be used for seed with extreme care.

The fact that these kernels had proved rust resistant, Professor Bull says, is not their only claim to desirability as seed. The additional advantage of adaptability to the soil and climate to the section in which they are used, gives such seed an advantage over any other of equal merit that is brought from another locality.

Besides advising careful selection with a view to the elimination of all rust-damaged kernels, Professor Bull says that rotation of crops should be extensively practiced this year in fields that were ravaged. Proffessor Bull goes on record as saying that if this is done, the possibility of an attack of rust this year will be obviated.

A Dummy Wrist.

The cleverest trick that ever has been played on the Duluth authorities was executed by a member of the chain gang at Duluth named William Goodman. When the gang was being escorted to the stone yard Goodwin suddenly broke and ran. The deputy in charge scarcely could believe his eyes, for the prisoner all were handcuffed in pairs. The deputy assumed that Goodman has broken the steel bracelet. Goodman was captured after a chase covering half a mile, and then an investigation was made of how he got away. Then it was discovered that Goodman had cleverly duped the deputy. He had not been handcuffed at all. Instead of presenting his own wrist to be manacled, he offered a dummy wrist with a glove stuffed with paper on the end of it, while his own hand was pulled up into the sleeve of his coat.

Dynamited the Well.

The famous Bessie Street artesian well, recently completed by the Crookston Waterworks Power and Light company, was dynamited and, it is feared, was completely wrecked, though the damage cannot be stated definitely.

The well was 215 feet deep and for a distance of eighty feet a circular brick curbing, eight feet in diamater had been built. The pump was installed at the bottom of the curbing, and the well was ready for operation. It was sunk to give Crookston a pure water supply, and was to have been pumped into the city mains in place of the river water.

The outrage has caused a tremendous sensation and all the civil machinery has been started to land the miscreant. The well had cost cost something over $10,000. W. J. Murphy of Minneapolis is the principal owner of the waterworks and light company.

Much Ore to be Mined.

The furnace companies have placed practically all their orders for this year's iron ore deliveries, and the mining companies have ample time to prepare for production and shipping. The Shellwood group of mines will this year produce 1,500,000 tons, as compared with 800,000 last year, and the International Harvester company will ship 450,000 tons, as compared with 250,000 tons last year. Four new steam shovels were sold on the Mesaba range the past week, one to the Shenango Mining company, one to the Tesora Mining company, one to the firm of Butler Bros., contractors, and one to Corrigan, McKinney & Co. The steel corporation has purchased fourteen steam shovels for delivery the coming spring.

It Was Good.

Chloe, our maid of all work, had the true Ethiopian's fondness for "good eating," and, like so many of her race, she often used language more lofty than appropriate. 53 COTTAGE ST., MELROSE, MASS.
DEAR SIR: JAN. 11th, 1904.

"Ever since I was in the Army, I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it became so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

"I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water to-day and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition.

"I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers I am,"

Very truly yours,
I. C. RICHARDSON.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but it promptly cures kidney, liver and bladder troubles the symptoms of which are—obliged to pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brickdust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evident that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

WHAT CONGRESS IS DOING

Progress of the Russo-Japanese War in the Far East—News from All Parts of the Union and the Latest Foreign Intelligence.

THE RUSSIAN REVOLT.

Four persons were killed and 68 wounded in a riot at the Cheibler factory, and seven were killed and 50 wounded at the Marcus Kohn factory in Lodz, Poland. A collision occurred between 15,000 strikers and the military at the Russian station of Skarzysko, in which 24 strikers were killed and 40 wounded.

At Batoum, Russia, a party of high school boys publicly destroyed a portrait of the emperor. Troops dispersed them with a volley.

The czar announced to Tolstoi's son that he has plans for a people's assembly which will be made public soon.

Soisalon Soinenen, procurator general of Finland, was assassinated in his home in Helsingfors by a young man who is believed to have been actuated by political motives. The official's son was wounded in a duel which followed, and the slayer was injured and captured. His act is regarded in St. Petersburg as signaling the dawn of a renewal of terrorism.

Father Gopon, the leader of the workmen of St. Petersburg in the affair of January 22, is now known to be in Switzerland.

Absolute secrecy is still maintained regarding the exact nature of the charge against Gorky; but it is believed that it is an alleged attempt to induce troops to mutiny and to stir up a revolt of workmen. It is practically certain that the charges against him do not involve the death penalty.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The senate on the 10th heard the first witness called in connection with the impeachment proceedings against Judge Swayne, of Florida, and thus entered upon the real work of the trial. The house passed 433 private pension bills and discussed the bill providing a government for the Panama canal zone.

After nearly four days of discussion, the house on the 9th, by a vote of 326 to 17, passed the Esch-Townsend bill providing for the regulation, by the interstate commerce commission, of freight rates.

The senate and house held a joint session on the 8th and formally counted the electoral vote, declaring, at the conclusion of the count, Theodore Roosevelt elected president, and Charles W. Fairbanks, vice president of the United States.

The senate on the 7th passed the joint statehood bill. As passed, the bill provides for the admission of the states of Oklahoma, to be composed of Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and New Mexico, according to the present boundaries, with Arizona eliminated.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

Gen. Stoessel, arriving at Aden on his way home from Port Arthur, made his first statement to the world, declaring that the surrender of the citadel was imperative. He says munitions and food were exhausted, and with the fleet shattered and no aid near a continuation of the conflict would have been butchery.

A detachment of scouts and one company of infantry made a daring raid on the Japanese right, crossing the Taitse and attacking a village, bayonetting the garrison. The Russians returned in safety. Fifty Japs were killed.

Oyama's army is estimated at 365,000 men and Kuropatkin's 50,000 larger.

Russia is ready to seek peace with Japan. The czar, grand dukes, ministers and newspapers favor it. There is no more talk of a spring campaign.

Admiral Togo arrived at Kure and immediately raised his flag on the battleship Mikasa.

CZAR DECLARES FOR A CONGRESS.

TELLS COUNT LEO TOLSTOI THAT HE THINKS IT IS NOW A NECESSITY

Emperor Nicolas Whose Word is Law Expresses Conviction that Time Has Come to Give People a Voice in the Government.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—"I am not opposed to a zemsky zabor; on the contrary, I believe it necessary."

In these words Emperor Nicholas, whose word is law, personally declared himself in favor of a land congress and expressed the conviction that the time had come to prepare to give the people a voice in the government.

The emperor's words were spoken in the course of a conversation with Count Leo Deonvitch Tolstoi, son of the famous author, and fully confirm the Associated Press interview with Grand Duke Vladimir on Jan. 31, in which the grand duke expressly declared that his august nephew, the czar, was in favor of a zemsky zabor. The semi-official denial subsequently sent out is now disproved by the sovereign's statement to Count Tolstoi.

The Associated Press correspondent last evening saw Count Tolstoi in a comfortable house facing the Tauris Gardens. The count is light of build and has dark brown hair and beard. A prominent nose and black, piercing eyes beneath shaggy brows distinctly recall the father. Speaking in excellent English, Count Tolstoi said:

"I suppose you have come to hear about my audience at Tsarskoe Selo. I cannot enter into details because I consider it unseemingly to do so; but I am glad to state the broad lines of my conversation with the sovereign. His majesty summoned me after having received a memorial which I addressed to the throne, exposing the present situation in the country and humbly expressing the opinion that the interest of the monarch and the nation called for the removal of the wall raised up by the [illegible] need of devising means for enabling the sovereign to hear the voice of the people and recommending the convocation of a zemsky zabor."

HELD UP AND SHOT.

A Lake Elmo Farmer is Wounded by a Man He Had Befriended.

Stillwater, Minn., Feb. 13.—Held up, robbed and twice shot by his hired man, to whom he had given employment in order to befriend him, is the story of Henry Witzel, forty years old, a farmer who lives on the Lakeland road near Lake Elmo.

Until a couple of weeks ago, and for two months prior, Miller worked for Pat Downs, a farmer, near Lake Elmo. Then he quit and sought work at the Witzel farm. He said he wanted employment to tide over the time necessary for him to make a settlement with Downs. On this plea Witzel engaged him.

Last Saturday evening the two men went to St. Paul to sell a load of hay, and while there had a few drinks. They returned to the farm during the the evening, and Witzel went to the barn to do the chores. Miller followed him. Witzel, seated on a stool, began milking. His back was toward Miller. Then, Witzel alleges, Miller fired a revolver at him, the bullet taking effect in the former's neck.

"What are you doing?," Witzel says he asked, and again he says Miller tried to shoot, but the trigger fell on emty shells.

"Give me all the money you have or I'll kill you," Witzel alleges Miller demanded.

Witzel says he handed over $8, all he had with him.

Again the revolver flashed, the employer declares, and this time the bullet struck Witzel in the forehead.

Minneapolis, Feb. 13.—Good seed will be preached to the farmers along the line of the Milwaukee railway the latter part of this month. The railroad company is to co-operate with several professors of the state farm school.

The train will leave St. Paul Feb. 20, and aboard of it will be Prof. C. B. Bull, of the Minnesota experimental station, Prof. Boss of the state farm school, Prof. E. C. Chilcott of the department of agronomy of the South Dakota agricultural college, A. W. Wheeler, botanist of the South Dakota college; Alexander Stewart of Minneapolis, and J. J. Quinn, secretary of the Tri-State Grain dealers' association.

Suffering In Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 13.—Dispatches from western Kansas tell of intense suffering in small towns from lack of fuel. Heavy snows have interfered with railroad traffic and a coal famine is reported from many points.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Child Nearly Burned.

Fire which did $700 damage to a dwelling at 2929 Clinton avenue, Minneapolis, came near claiming an infant as a victim. Only the timely arrival of rescuers saved the child from almost certain death. John Huston and his wife, occupants of the house, were on the first floor when the fire broke out in the basement. They became bewildered and for the time being forgot their child, which slept on the second floor.

Gathering what articles they could they hastily made their way to the street. Then they remembered the child. Several young men volunteered to go to the child's rescue.

Plunging through smoke and fire, they made their way into the burning home. Almost suffocated by dense smoke and at times blistered by intense heat, they finally found the child, asleep in its cradle. One of the young men picked it up and the return trip through the blinding smoke with the greatest difficulty was made.

Prize Cattle Coming.

The Minnesota state fair board since it annual meeting has made several interesting announcements for the fair of 1905—first, Dan Patch, then Senator Doliver an orator for opening day, and now an arrangement with the American Hereford Breeders' association, for a Hereford show and sale during fair week.

Second, E. W. Randell returned from a trip to Kansas City, where he met met the board of directors of the Hereford association and completed arrangements for the exhibition at this year's fair. This means a great display of one of the favorite breeds of cattle, and a sale of perhaps seventy-five head to Northwestern farmers and breeders. Arrangements with the American Shorthorn Breeders, association had previously been concluded, and the state fair of 1905 is now assurred another cattle exhibition of national importance.

Will Lobby.

When the bill for an appropriation for the proposed women's building at the state university is presented before the state legislature strong influence will be brought to bear in its favor. The Civic Improvement league has appointed a committee whose members will exert every effort in favor of the measure, and have already secured the support of several of the stronger commercial bodies of some of the influential men of the city. This committee consists of Mrs. J. A. Crosby, Miss Ada Comstock and Prof. Maria A. Sanford of the university and Mrs. J. B. Giffilian and Mrs. David F. Simpson, has taken up its work in a systematic manner and will begin at once a campaign of education in favor of the bill.

Red River Dairymen.

The meeting of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association closed at Crookston. All parts of the valley were represented. Speakers with state wide reputation were heard, including Representative Morley of Owatonna and Col. R. A. Wilkinson.

The first-prize winners were: Dairy, Thomas Moore, Melvin, 91; creamery, Garfield Co-oprative creamery, 92½.

Officers elected are: President, T. A. Hoverstad, Crookston; vice president, George Gulmon, Thief River Falls; secretary and treasurer, James A. Wilson, Thief River Falls.

The next annual convention will be held in December next.

Killed While Coasting.

While coasting with a crowd of young people at Duluth, Miss Anna Dunleavy, aged 22, daughter of Andrew Dunleavy, an engineer, was instantly killed. Seated on a bob-sled were half a dozen others. Miss Dunleavy was ahead, and endeavoring to guide the sled a rope slipped beneath one of the runners, shunting it off to one side. The sled had retained terrific momentum, and before it was possible to gain the center of the road the party collided with a telephone pole. Miss Dunleavy sustained a crushed skull.

Polluted Rivers.

The pollution of Minnesota's rivers and streams by sewage from cities, towns and villages was the principal topic of discussion at the annual meeting of the state board of health, and it is probable that the board will ask legislation granting additional authority for regulating the evil.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

MEMBERS GETTING DOWN TO THE CONSIDERATION OF BUSINESS IN HAND.

NEW CODE HAS SURPRISES

Railway Legislation will Occupy a Considerable Part of the Time not Given to the Code.

St. Paul, Feb. 9.—There can no longer be any doubt but that legislation relating to railway regulation will take up nearly all the time of the legislature not exhausted by consideration of the revised code. And while it is still early, it is safe to predict that the code, if acted upon at all at this session, will practically sum up the net accomplishment of the ninety days' work. As for railway legislation, there are few who believe that any one of the important bills of that character will be enacted into law, though all agree that the agitation now under way will be productive of results in the long run.

New Discoveries in Code.

New discoveries are constantly being made which cause members to feel that it would be the height of indiscretion for them to adopt the code as reported back by the commission without first amending it liberally.

An interesting point in this connection is the assertion made by the chairman of the house judiciary committee, Mr. W. B. Anderson, that the revised code, if adopted as it stands, would repeal general laws covering cities under special charters. Mr. Anderson declares that it would affect his home city, Winona, seriously, in that it would nullify taxation acts under which Winona gains much of its revenue, while it would also cause much vexation in other ways. Nor would Winona be the only sufferer, according to the views expressed by the same gentleman.

Other members of the judiciary committees of both houses, while admitting the correctness of Mr. Anderson's position, express the belief that the whole matter can be straightened out by a few judicious amendments.

Another interesting discovery is that the code is so worded that it would repeal the law compelling hotels to furnish fire escapes, thus operating to the financial [illegible] of the hotelkeepers, while on the other hand it repeals the law which permits the arrest of a man who jumps a board bill.

These defects are all of a minor character, however, and leaders of both houses are still firmly expressing the belief that the revised code, properly amended, will be adopted at this session.

Railroad Discrimination.

The Eberhardt committee, which is charged with the duty of investigating alleged discrimination in railway freight rates, has had a mass of testimony placed before it, but many of the instances relate to interstate commerce, and are, therefore, of little benefit. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is still bearing the brunt of the attack and officials of that line have been in attendance at every meeting of the committee. Thus far the allegations made have been vigorously combatted by the railway men.

The house had an interesting battle over the resolution by L. H. Johnson, that the speaker appoint a special committee to visit the Wisconsin agricultural school at Menomonie. The author of the resolution urged that Minnesota's agricultural college could be benefited greatly by the adoption of a few Wisconsin ideas. The opposition claimed that such a junket would be a useless expense. The resolution was adopted by a comfortable majority, however.

Senator Wilson, of Minneapolis, who assisted Attorney General Douglas in the prosecution of the famous "Merger" litigation, has introduced two bills, which are recommended by Mr. Douglas as calculated to greatly strengthen the anti-merger laws of the state. One provides that all foreign corporations shall be obliged to appoint a resident agent upon whom summons may be served. The other relates to domestic corporations, and requires them to hold all directors' meetings within the state of Minnesota.

A number of public-spirited citizens of St. Paul wish to aid in the establishment of a state hospital for indigent, deformed and crippled children and have expressed a willingness to contribute the funds for the purchase of a site in St. Paul. At their instance Senator Dunn has introduced a bill appointing a commission to investigate the matter and report at the next legislative session.

Timber Trespass.

One result of the furious campaign waged in Minnesota last year is the unanimous passage by the senate of the bill providing that the governor, auditor and secretary of state shall constitute a timber trespass board. The board is to settle all timber trespass cases, thus relieving the state auditor of an unwelcome responsibility.

A number of the best fighters in the house have announced their intention of forcing the passage of a bill submitting to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment providing for what is known as a "wide open" tax law. Such a bill passed the house at the last session, but was killed in the senate. In view of the generally conceded need of better tax laws, however, it is believed by the promoters, that the time for decisive action has at last arrived. The adoption of such an amendment would give the legislature unlimited scope in which to work and would make it possible for counties and municipalities to secure home rule in tax matters.

Kansas has passed a law permitting women to vote for presidential electors. If the women should vote the party out of power that passed the law, they might wish they had left them out of politicts.

John King of the Red Lake County Courier, is to write the editorials for that paper, from St. Paul, as state librarian. His readers may expect some spicy Democratic editorials direct from the head quaters of the state administration.

Since the county seat scrap came up in Red Lake county the papers have discovered that H. W. Lee of Thief River Falls has been drawing his fees, as Court Commissioner of Red Lake Co., for the past two years, and has not resided at the county seat as the law provides.

Only nine times in two and a quarter centuries has Easter fallen as late as it does this year. Only five times in this period has it come later in the spring than it does during 1905, and it is never possible for it to fall more than two days later than April 25, and only twice does it come on this day of the month. During this period it comes three times on April 24th and four times on the 23rd. This year Easter Sunday will be celebrated on April 23rd. This is the latest date since 1886, when it came on April 25th, the latest date possible.

The movement to do away with all the cumbersome foolish fads introduced into the public schools a few years ago is becoming almost as general and positive as was that of their introduction. Parents and employers realize now that raffia work, phonics and scientific acoustics do not make good substitutes for a foundation of reading, writing and arithmetic. We may look for a time soon when children will dwell in blackest ignorance of the internal economy of caterpillars but can spell surely and simply by the old method.—Crookston Times.

And here is what an Oklahoma paper says about the cold weather down there." Citizins of Oklahoma need not despair because of the continued cold winter weather, "It's worse over at Grand ma's." What we are having is mild as compared with the states north and east. It extends even to the southern states where snow and frost are seldom seen. Let us enjoy it while we can and if it were possible to do so, we should keep some of it until next summer as the weather prophets predict a hot one. As a rule one extreme follows another but we hope it will not be as extremely hot as it has been cold,

The finances of the state are in excellent condition, according to the report of J. H. Block, state treasure. In a comparitively short time the state will be absolutely free from debt and the increase in the gross earnings tax on railroads resulting from the constitutional ammendments passed at the last election will provide almost enough within a few years to relieve the state from any tax levies for revenue purposes. Representative Andrew Miller's bill simply provides that lawyer's who play their clients false, cause them unnecessary loss, or rob them by double dealing shall be treated as other thieves are. There is nothing so very unreasonable in that.—Crookston Times.

Glass Eyes for Animals.

Glass eyes are now made for horses, cats and dogs, as well as for human beings. These animals use a larger eye than man, and several are ordered for them at the same time, as a new one is necessary about once in six months. The edges become roughened and produce irritation, from the acids of the secretions affecting the enamel.

Mrs. Coggins also helps in the management of two sawmills and many thousands of acres of timber land.

Trainer of Wild Beasts.

A New Jersey man claims to have an educated alligator ten feet long who will eat from the same plate with the household cat without trying to swallow either the cat or the plate, and now if the alligator trainer will whirl in and train some of those New Jersey trusts to eat from the same dish as the public without devouring the public he will be a national benefactor.

The Beauty of Kindness.

There is only one thing greater than happiness in this world, and that is goodness, and it is not in our keeping. But what God has put in our power is the happiness of those about us, and that is largely to be secured by our being kind to them.—Drummond.

REFORM IN ENGLAND.

Considerable Progress Made in Temperance Since Shakespeare's Day.

John Bull sober is the defense of London Tit-Bits. It admits that John is no total abstainer, but it avers that he is not the champion guzzler of the world. He drinks an average of 500 glasses of beer a year, but your Belgian drinks 710. For every glass of wine he drinks the Frenchman drinks fifty-six, and for every gallon of spirits that John takes the Dane takes seven. This is encouraging. It shows progress in sobriety since Shakespeare's time. In "Othello" we have this:

> Cassio—'Fore God; an excellent song!
> Iago—I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting. Your Dane, your German and your swag bellied Hollander [Belgian] are nothing to your English.
> Cassio—Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?
> Iago—Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

This is good evidence, and had Tit-Bits used German instead of Frenchman in its comparison the parallel would have been exact. As it is, it would seem that since Iago beguiled poor Cassio and made him lose his reputation the Englishman has become less potent in potting. It is well for him if it be so, for the measure of drinking is no bad gauge of a nation's progress. It is well known that the decadence of France is intimately connected with the use of alcohol. Whether as a cause or effect, the increase of the consumption of alcohol in France goes with the decline of physique and the dwindling of stationary population. Improvement in manners and increase in population and the attainment of a higher standard of living keep pace with decrease in the use of alcohol.

AMERICA'S DRINKS.

Consumption of Spirits Decreases Considerably—That of Beer Grows.

During the year which ended June 30, 1903, the average American used 46.72 gills of distilled spirits, 577.28 gills of malt liquors and 15.36 gills of wine, making a total of 639.36 gills, or 1.75 gills for each day of that year. Really, that does not seem to show that he is altogether given over to guzzling alcoholic drinks, says the New York Globe. Besides, he certainly did not drink all of the spirits he used.

Nor does he seem to be using so much strong liquor now as he used years ago, for in the year 1871 he made away with 51.84 gills of distilled spirits, and it is fair to assume that much more spirits are used now in mechanics, arts and science than in that olden time. Of wine he uses 2½ gills more in the year than he used thirty-three years ago. But the influence of the German has been strong with the American; therefore, he used 383 gills more of beer in the year 1903 than he used in 1871, and it would be difficult to convince folk that he used much of that in mechanical works, however much of it may have gone into mechanics. A third of a century ago he used only .71 of a gill of alcoholic liquids a day, and all the increase of 1.04 gills a day is beer.

CHESTNUTS A DRINK CURE.

Nature's Remedy Vouched For by a Philadelphia Specialist.

"There should be less drunkenness at this season of the year than at any other time," said a specialist in nervous disorders in an interview printed recently in the Philadelphia Record. "It is not generally known—in fact, I claim the honor of the discovery—that roasted chestnuts are a good antidote for liquor.

"The average man who drinks under high nervous pressure, not for the sake of sociability, but because the alcohol stimulates him, is the one whose nervous system is most quickly undermined. He may never get drunk, but there is a constant demand for overstimulation that works damage in the end. No sooner does the effect of one drink wear off than there is the craving for another.

"Now, if that man would eat a few roasted chestnuts instead of taking another drink when the feeling comes on him he would find that the substance of the nuts, having quickly absorbed the liquor already in his system, had appreciably decreased his longing for more alcoholic stimulant. It isn't a theory. I know it to be true."

Ireland's Apostle of Temperance.

Father Theobald Mathew, Ireland's apostle of temperance, born in 1790, had a career which is the inspiration of all Irish Catholic total abstinence societies today. His birthday, Oct. 10, is annually observed by such societies throughout the world. Father Mathew is credited with having personally administered the pledge to over 6,000,000 people. In three years he reduced the consumption of spirits in Ireland by one-half. He was received with profound respect in England and Scotland, and during his two years' visit to America he made a tour of twenty-five states, preaching to Catholics the doctrine of total abstinence. Father Mathew was one of the very few persons accorded a formal reception by the United States senate.

Antialcoholic Campaign in Italy.

The first antialcohol congress ever held in Italy took place recently at Venice, the principal address being given by M. Luzzato of the University of Padua. The following resolution was passed: "The Federation of the Antialcoholic Leagues affirms that abstinence from every alcoholic drink is the surest and most logical means for securing to man his normal condition and the well being of the individual, the family and society. It is the best means of fighting against alcohol."

Pepps, Peeples or What?

A correspondent (an American, we presume) writes to ask how he shall pronounce the name of the excellent diarist we occasionally quote. "Do you," he asks, "call Pepys 'Pepps' or 'Peeples' or 'Chumley' or what?" Even among contemporary London talkers there is disagreement, but the question should be settled by one Mr. James Caresse, whom Pepys kindly took in his boat to view the great fire and who returned the compliment by a somewhat virulent set of verses in his volume "Lucida Intervalla."

> Get thee behind me, then, dumb devil, begone,
> The Lord hath Ephthatha said to my tongue.
> Him I must praise who open'd hath my lips,
> Sent me from navy to the ark by Pepys.

The rhythm is dreadful, but the rhyme is conclusive, and the man who rowed in the same boat with the diarist called him "Pipps."—London Chronicle.

[An accepted American dictionary authority also gives Peps as the correct pronunciation of his name.—Ed.]

They Hunger For Praise.

"Praise is sweet," remarked a certain toiler, "yet is seems to be against the rule of many business houses. Perhaps they fear you'll demand a raise if they compliment your work. Why, even a man friend of mine, who is engaged in window decoration, says he wants to be told if his work is satisfactory. He dreams of it all night when it doesn't give him a nightmare, and he works at it all day. He longs to be told when it is effective, but he has to be content with the fact that, as he puts it, he'd be fired if it were not satisfactory. As for me, I design these doll dresses and other dainty things and also arrange them for display. I long for praise when I feel that my labors have been crowned with success. But, alas, my firm also pursues the clam policy—perhaps it is the best policy—in spite of the fact that I'd work the skin off my fingers to try to exceed my best work if only that were praised."—Philadelphia Record.

Sensitive Horses.

The horse does not like a nervous, fidgety, fussy or irritable man. He is too nervous and irritable himself. "Why is it," one teamster was heard to ask another, "that Phin's horses are always gaunt? Phin feeds them well." "Yes," was the reply, "but he's like a wasp around a horse." A well known owner of race horses, not at all a sentimental person, recently made an order forbidding his employees to talk in loud tones or to swear in the stable. "I have never yet seen a good mannered horse," he says, "that was being sworn at all the time. It hurts the feelings of a sensitive horse, and I'll keep my word good to discharge any man in my employ if I catch him swearing within the hearing of any horse in this stable."—Country Life in America.

TARIFF TINKERING.

Experience Proves Emphatically It Does Not Pay.

It is especially illogical to attribute the present condition of the cotton manufacturing industry to the tariff when every manufacturer and textile worker knows that under the present tariff system the textile industries of the United States have enjoyed a long extended period of unrivaled prosperity.

The cotton industry is suffering from conditions which are in nowise connected with the tariff. The mills of Lancashire, England, are suffering in the same way, proof enough that the tariff has nothing whatever to do with the matter.

The scarcity and consequently high price of raw cotton is said to be the cause of the general curtailment in cotton manufacturing.

Such conditions cannot be legislated away. They can only be removed by the increasing of the cotton acreage and the growing of larger crops.

This is the opinion of men who have made a study of the matter, and no amount of sophistry by little politicians can affect the opinions of those who are familiar with the situation.

If things are bad just as present, how much worse would they be did the manufacturers have to combat not only high prices in raw material, but foreign cheap labor competition as well. The well remembered experience of Lawrence and other textile centers under the Wilson-Gorman tariff from 1893 to 1897 is not so remote that its lessons have been forgotten by even the most thoughtless.

Emphatically tariff tinkering does not pay.—Lawrence (Mass.) Telegram.

Soldier's Sense of Humor.

A high naval official, now dead, often cited as an example of ghastly humor an incident that befell a young woman during the civil war.

"She was good and kind," he would say, "and during the war she visited the hospitals daily, distributing fruits and flowers and tracts.

"One morning on her rounds a young soldier, immediately after she had passed him, set up a loud laugh.

"She turned and looked at him in surprise. His seemed a pitiful case. Nothing of him but his face was visible on the little white bed, and this young face was sadly thin and pale. Nevertheless he laughed like one possessed. His mirth resounded through the gruesome room.

"The visitor returned to him.

"'Will you tell me what amuses you?' she said.

"'Why, ma'am,' said he, 'here you have given me a tract on the sin of dancing when I've got both legs shot off.'"—Baltimore Herald.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance." "She whipped him upon his return." "He kissed her back." "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation." "She seated herself upon his entering." "We thought she sat down upon her being asked." "She fainted upon his departure."

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through all ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which they may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian chants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.

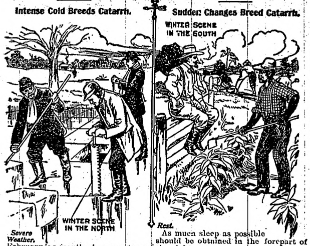
DANGERS TO BE AVOIDED IN FEBRUARY.

Intense Cold Breeds Catarrh. Sudden Changes Breed Catarrh.



WINTER SCENE IN THE SOUTH
WINTER SCENE IN THE NORTH

Severe Weather.

February is a month of severe storms and intense cold.

Even in the South where the prevailing temperature is much above wintry latitudes, February brings sudden changes of temperature.

Mercury sometimes drops 20 degrees in a single night.

Therefore, the following health hints are applicable to the whole of North America:

Ventilation.

The sleeping rooms should be well ventilated, but so as to avoid direct currents of air.

Bathing.

Those in vigorous health should take a cold water towel bath every morning before breakfast. Those in feeble health should take a brisk dry-towel-rub every morning.

Diet.

The diet should be a generous one, including meat, and occasionally fresh vegetables.

Sunshine.

The nights being long and the days short, as much sunshine as possible should be let into the house during the day.

Clothing.

The head should be kept cool at all times. The feet should be kept warm and dry, day and night.

Pe-ru-na.

When unavoidably exposed to cold or wet, a few doses of Peruna will avert bad consequences.

Precaution.

When seized with a chill, or even slight chilliness, a dose of Peruna should be taken at once.

Rest.

As much sleep as possible should be obtained in the forepart of the night

Catarrh of Head.

Mr. Frank Cobb, 175 Summit Street, Deering, Me., writes:

"I was troubled with catarrh in my head. I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice and he prescribed Peruna.

"I took it and am happy to say it helped me at once. I feel better than I have for years."

Bronchial Trouble.

Mr. J. Ed. O'Brien, Pres. American Pilot Ass'n, Pensacola, Fla., writes:

"I heartily give my endorsement to Peruna as an effective cure for catarrh and bronchial trouble."

Throat and Lungs.

Frank Battle, Jr., 111 N. Market St., Nashville, Tenn., writes:

"Peruna has cured me of chronic bronchitis.

"It is the grandest discovery of the age for the throat and lungs."

Pneumonia.

Mr. A. C. Danforth, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs. I was threatened with pneumonia.

"Peruna gave me relief within a couple of days. Three bottles saved me a large doctor bill and a great deal of suffering."

Thousands of Testimonials.

We have on file thousands of testimonials like the above. We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements Dr. Hartman is constantly receiving.

WAS CURED RAPIDLY

RHEUMATISM IN TWO SEVERE CASES MASTERED IN FEW WEEKS.

The Remedy Used by Mr. Schroeppel and by Captain Balfour in Great Demand in Vicinity of Their Homes.

In the winter of 1902–3 Mr. Schroeppel was confined to his bed by a severe attack of rheumatism. His doctor's treatment proved unsuccessful, but he subsequently regained his health by means which he describes with great enthusiasm.

"After five or six weeks of helplessness and pain," said he, "during which I was receiving regular visits from the doctor, I felt as bad as ever. Just then my mother, a woman eighty years of age, paid me a visit. She had received great benefit from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and she was confident they would help me. At her solicitation I gave up the doctor's treatment and took the pills in its place."

"And were you cured as the result of taking her advice?"

"Yes, quickly and thoroughly. Before the second box was finished I felt very manifest improvement, and within two weeks I was able to leave my bed and take up my neglected farm work. I continued to use the pills, however, until eight boxes had been taken, although long before that I felt that every vestige of the disease had been eradicated."

"Are there no traces left?"

"Absolutely none. For a year and three months there has never been the slightest return of the old trouble. For this happy result I and my family freely praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Within the bounds of China township, St. Clair county, Mich., there is no better known farmer than Mr. Henry Schroeppel. His cure has therefore naturally attracted a great deal of attention. One of Mr. Schroeppel's neighbors, Captain George Balfour, after hearing of the salutary results in Mr. Schroeppel's case, decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for an attack of rheumatism from which he was himself suffering. He took eight or ten boxes and now declares himself free from the painful ailment."

It is little wonder that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are much in favor in the community where Mr. Schroeppel and Captain Balfour are so well and favorably known. They are sold by all druggists and are equally successful in curing neuralgia, sciatica and partial paralysis.

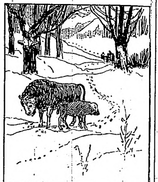
CARE OF BIG GAME

WINTER SCENES ON AN EASTERN PRESERVE.

More Timely Advice from Ernest Harold Baynes—Price of Success Lies in Management, He Declares.

The price of success in the management of a game preserve is continual, careful and intelligent forethought. I am constantly reminded of this fact as I note from week to week the work which goes quietly along in the Blue Mountain forest, commonly known as Corbin Park, near Newport, N. H., the largest fenced game preserve in America. To tell of the work which is done in the course of a year inside the 35 miles of fence which marks the boundary of the vast inclosure, would take much more space than is allotted to this article.

With the first heavy snow fall in November came the question of feeding those animals which would soon be unable to find sufficient food for themselves. The deer, elk and wild boar were all right for the present; they were not depenudent upon food which grew upon the ground, and which was now buried beneath the snow, and more over they were fat and in unusually fin condition owing to the heavy crop of apples on which they had been feedin for many weeks. But the buffaloes depend largely on the food they can ge upon the ground, and besides these animals are now too rare for any chanc to be taken with the finest herd in th world. Down in the southeastern par of the reservation, in an enclosur known as Central station or No. 1 large yards have been made as winter quarters for buffaloes, and here, once the animals are rounded up, it is a comparatively simple matter to feed them. But 24,000 acres is a large place, and buffaloes are not given to taking orders from anyone, so it is not the easiest thing in the world to persuade them to seek a particular part of the preserve and allow themselves to be shut up in buffalo yards. However, it is well known that buffaloes once started along a trail which they have been over before are very apt to stick to that trail unless there is some good cause for their leaving it.



BUFFALO COW AND CALF.

So, when one day about the first of January, the men who had the work in hand, surrounded the main buffalo herd on a plain in the northwestern part of the park, they gently urged them towards the entrance to a trail, and into this the animals turned. Five miles away the trail reached a point to which a farm wagon had been driven, and when the buffaloes arrived they found a little hay waiting for them. They quickly ate it, and just beyond there was a little more, and a little more beyond that again. The hungry animals walked along, picking up the hay as they went, and naturally enough, after they had traveled thus for ten miles, they found themselves at nightfall on the other side of the mountain and about five miles from the buffalo yards. Here in some open fields they halted for the night and the men who had surrounded them went home. On returning early the next morning they found most of the buffaloes picking up a scanty meal from patches of bare ground to be seen here and there, but two cows with their wellgrown calves were missing. They were overtaken five miles away.

In the meantime the main herd was urged and led quietly along to a large inclosure known as No. 2, whence they were easily driven into the buffalo yards. Here they were taken in charge by William Morrison, expert in the breeding and handling of buffaloes, and he divided them into groups according to their age and sex. In the first yard were placed all the calves of the previous spring; in the second, a number of old bulls; in the third, young bulls and heifers, and so on through seven or eight inclosures.

Each buffalo shed has a loft in which the hay is stored, and from which it can be tossed down into racks below. Each full-grown buffalo eats about three tons during the winter; each calf consumes about half a ton, and his allowance of hay increases about half a ton a winter with each succeeding year until he reaches maturity. In this way the animals will be provided for until May, when the entire herd, including the cows with their young calves, will be turned loose to wander at will over the great preserve, and to shift for themselves until the snow storms of next December again cut off their natural supply of food.

IT'S THE TERROR OF ALL WOMEN.

Backache Quickly Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills—Mrs. W. H. Ambrose Tells How Her Pains Vanished Never to Return When She Used the Great American Kidney Remedy.

Dover, Ky., Feb. 13th.—(Special)—So long has Backache been the terror of the women of America that the numerous reports of the complete and permanent cures of this ailment now being made by Dodd's Kidney Pills are causing wide satisfaction, and not the least remarkable of these cures is that of Mrs. W. H. Ambrose of this place. Mrs. Ambrose says: "I had such pains in my back at times I could hardly move and other symptoms showed that my kidneys were affected. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills drove away all the pains and I have never been troubled since."

Backache is the kidneys' first notice that they are out of order and need help. If they get that help in the form of Dodd's Kidney Pills all will be well. If they are neglected the disease may develop into Diabetes, Bright's Disease or Rheumatism.

Finally, relates Modern Society, the hostess turned to an American, who had taken no part in the conversation, and said:

"Yes," he replied, "we take a kind of municipal pride in seeing which city can show the greatest number of lynchings yearly."

"Oh, do tell us about a lynching you have seen yourself," broke in a half a dozen voices at once.

"The night before I sailed for England," said the American, "I was giving a dinner to a party of intimate friends, when a colored waiter spilled a plate of soup over the gown of a lady at an adjoining table. The gown was utterly ruined, and the gentlemen of her party at once seized the waiter, tied a rope around his neck, and, at a signal from the injured lady, swung him into the air."

"Horrible!" said the hostess, with a shudder.

"And did you actually see this yourself?"

"Well, no," said the American, apologetically. "Just at that time I was downstairs killing the chef for putting mustard in the blancmange."

"The Road to Wellville" Pointed the Way.

Down at Hot Springs, Ark., the visitors have all sorts of complaints, but it is a subject of remark that the great majority of them have some trouble with stomach and bowels. This may be partly attributed to the heavy medicines.

Naturally, under the conditions, the question of food is very prominent.

A young man states that he had suffered for nine years from stomach and bowel trouble, had two operations which did not cure, and was at last threatened with appendicitis.

He went to Hot Springs for rheumatism, and his stomach trouble got worse. One day at breakfast the waiter, knowing his condition, suggested he try Grape-Nuts and cream, which he did, and found the food agreed with him perfectly.

After the second day he began to sleep peacefully at night, different than he had for years. The perfect digestion of the food quieted his nervous system and made sleep possible.

He says: "The next morning I was astonished to find my condition of constipation had disappeared. I could not believe it true after suffering for so many years; then I took more interest in the food, read the little book 'The Road to Wellville,' and started following the simple directions.

"I have met with such results that in the last five weeks I have gained eight pounds in spite of hot baths which take away the flesh from anyone.

"A friend of mine has been entirely cured of a bad case of indigestion and stomach trouble by using Grape-Nuts Food and cream alone for breakfast.

"There is one thing in particular—I have noticed a great change in my mental condition. Formerly I could hardly remember anything, and now the mind seems unusually acute and retentive. I can memorize practically anything I desire." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Health of American Women

A Subject Much Discussed at Women's Clubs—The Future of a Country Depends on the Health of Its Women.

Mrs T.C. Willadsen
Miss Mattie Henry

At the New York State Assembly of Mothers, a prominent New York doctor told the 500 women present that healthy American women were so rare as to be almost extinct.

This seems to be a sweeping statement of the condition of American women. Yet how many do you know who are perfectly well and do not have some trouble arising from a derangement of the female organism which manifests itself in headaches, backaches, nervousness, that bearing-down feeling, painful or irregular menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacement of the uterus, ovarian trouble, indigestion or sleeplessness? There is a tried and true remedy for all these ailments. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored more American women to health than all other remedies in the world. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can. For thirty years it has been curing the worst forms of female complaints.

Such testimony as the following should be convincing.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Ia., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I can truly say that you have saved my life and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words. For two years I spent lots of money in doctoring without any benefit for menstrual irregularities and I had given up all hopes of ever being well again, but I was persuaded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and three bottles have restored me to perfect health. Had it not been for you I would have been in my grave to-day."

Miss Mattie Henry, Vice-President of Danville Art Club, 429 Green St., Danville, Va., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"Many years' suffering with female weakness, inflammation and a broken down system made me more anxious to die than to live, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored my health and I am so grateful for it that I want every suffering woman to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do for her."

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating, (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues, and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. No other medicine in the world has received such unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

A light heart, a cheerful countenance, and all the charms of grace and beauty are dependent upon proper action of the bodily organs. You cannot look well unless you feel well.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice and medicine have restored thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

DANGERS TO BE AVOIDED IN FEBRUARY.

Intense Cold Breeds Catarrh. Sudden Changes Breed Catarrh.

WINTER SCENE IN THE SOUTH
WINTER SCENE IN THE NORTH

Severe Weather.

February is a month of severe storms and intense cold.

Even in the South where the prevailing temperature is much above wintry latitudes, February brings sudden changes of temperature.

Mercury sometimes drops 20 degrees in a single night.

Therefore, the following health hints are applicable to the whole of North America:

Ventilation.

The sleeping rooms should be well ventilated, but so as to avoid direct currents of air.

Bathing.

Those in vigorous health should take a cold water towel bath every morning before breakfast. Those in feeble health should take a brisk dry-towel-rub every morning.

Diet.

The diet should be a generous one, including meat, and occasionally fresh vegetables.

Sunshine.

The nights being long and the days short, as much sunshine as possible should be let into the house during the day.

Clothing.

The head should be kept cool at all times. The feet should be kept warm and dry, day and night.

Pe-ru-na.

When unavoidably exposed to cold or wet, a few doses of Peruna will avert bad consequences.

Precaution.

When seized with a chill, or even slight chilliness, a dose of Peruna should be taken at once.

Rest.

As much sleep as possible should be obtained in the forepart of the night.

Catarrh of Head.

Mr. Frank Cobb, 175 Summit Street, Deering, Me., writes:

"I was troubled with catarrh in my head. I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice and he prescribed Peruna.

"I took it and am happy to say it helped me at once. I feel better than I have for years."

Bronchial Trouble.

Mr. J. Ed. O'Brien, Pres. American Pilot Ass'n, Pensacola, Fla., writes:

"I heartily give my endorsement to Peruna as an effective cure for catarrh and bronchial trouble."

Throat and Lungs.

WAS CURED RAPIDLY

RHEUMATISM IN TWO SEVERE CASES MASTERED IN FEW WEEKS.

The Remedy Used by Mr. Schroeppel and by Captain Balfour in Great Demand in Vicinity of Their Homes.

In the winter of 1902-3 Mr. Schroeppel was confined to his bed by a severe attack of rheumatism. His doctor's treatment proved unsuccessful, but he subsequently regained his health by means which he describes with great enthusiasm.

"After five or six weeks of helplessness and pain," said he, "during which I was receiving regular visits from the doctor, I felt as bad as ever. Just then my mother, a woman eighty years of age, paid me a visit. She had received great benefit from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and she was confident they would help me. At her solicitation I gave up the doctor's treatment and took the pills in its place."

"And were you cured as the result of taking her advice?"

"Yes, quickly and thoroughly. Before the second box was finished I felt very manifest improvement, and within two weeks I was able to leave my bed and take up my neglected farm work. I continued to use the pills, however, until eight boxes had been taken, although long before that I felt that every vestige of the disease had been eradicated.

"Are there no traces left?"

"Absolutely none. For a year and three months there has never been the slightest return of the old trouble. For this happy result I and my family freely praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Within the bounds of China township, St. Clair county, Mich., there is no better known farmer than Mr. Henry Schroeppel. His cure has therefore naturally attracted a great deal of attention. One of Mr. Schroeppel's neighbors, Captain George Balfour, after hearing of the salutary results in Mr. Schroeppel's case, decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for an attack of rheumatism from which he was himself suffering. He took eight or ten boxes and now declares himself free from the painful ailment."

It is little wonder that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are much in favor in the community where Mr. Schroeppel and Captain Balfour are so well and favorably known. They are sold by all druggists and are equally successful in curing neuralgia, sciatica and partial paralysis.

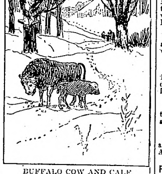
CARE OF BIG GAME

WINTER SCENES ON AN EASTERN PRESERVE.

More Timely Advice from Ernest Harold Baynes—Price of Success Lies in Management, He Declares.

The price of success in the management of a game preserve is continual, careful and intelligent forethought. I am constantly reminded of this fact as I note from week to week the work which goes quietly along in the Blue Mountain forest, commonly known as Corbin Park, near Newport, N. H., the largest fenced game preserve in America. To tell of the work which is done in the course of a year inside the 35 miles of fence which marks the boundary of the vast inclosure, would take much more space than is allotted to this article.

With the first heavy snow fall in November came the question of feeding those animals which would soon be unable to find sufficient food for themselves. The deer, elk and wild boar were all right for the present; they were not dependent upon food which grew upon the ground, and which was now buried beneath the snow, and more-over they were fat and in unusually fine condition owing to the heavy crop of apples on which they had been feeding for many weeks. But the buffaloes depend largely on the food they can get upon the ground, and besides these animals are now too rare for any chances to be taken with the finest herd in the world. Down in the southeastern part of the reservation, in an enclosure known as Central station or No. 1 large yards have been made as winter quarters for buffaloes and here, once the animals are rounded up, it is a comparatively simple matter to feed them. But 24,000 acres is a large place, and buffaloes are not given to taking orders from anyone, so it is not the easiest thing in the world to persuade them to seek a particular part of the preserve and allow themselves to be shut up in buffalo yards. However, it is well known that buffaloes once started along a trail which they have gone over before are very apt to stick to that trail unless there is some good cause for their leaving it.



BUFFALO COW AND CALF.

So, when one day about the first of January, the men who had the work in hand, surrounded the main buffalo herd on a plain in the northwestern part of the park, they gently urged them towards the entrance to a trail, and into this the animals turned. Five miles away the trail reached a point to which a farm wagon had been driven, and when the buffaloes arrived they found a little hay waiting for them. They quickly ate it, and just beyond there was a little more, and a little more beyond that again. The hungry animals walked along, picking up the hay as they went, and naturally enough, after they had traveled thus for ten miles, they found themselves at nightfall on the other side of the mountain and about five miles from the buffalo yards. Here in some open fields they halted for the night and the men who had surrounded them went home. On returning early the next morning they found most of the buffaloes picking up a scanty meal from patches of bare ground to be seen here and there, but two cows with their wellgrown calves were missing. They were overtaken five miles away.

In the meantime the main herd was urged and led quietly along to a large inclosure known as No. 2, whence they were easily driven into the buffalo yards. Here they were taken in charge by William Morrison, expert in the breeding and handling of buffaloes, and he divided them into groups according to their age and sex. In the first yard were placed all the calves of the previous spring; in the second, a number of old bulls; in the third, young bulls and heifers, and so on through seven or eight inclosures.

Each buffalo shed has a loft in which the hay is stored, and from which it can be tossed down into racks below. Each full-grown buffalo eats about three tons during the winter; each calf consumes about half a ton, and his allowance of hay increases about half a ton a winter with each succeeding year until he reaches maturity. In this way the animals will be provided for until May, when the entire herd, including the cows with their young calves, will be turned loose to wander at will over the great preserve, and to shift for themselves until the snow storms of next December again cut off their natural supply of food.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

THE HORTON BILL FOR MAINTAINING THE CAPITOL IS FINALLY PASSED.

RAILWAY MEN INTERESTED.

Public Examiner Makes Report on Timber Trespass. Board of Control Considered.

St. Paul, Feb. 17.—What is probably the most drastic anti-corporation measure ever introduced in the Minnesota legislature is that offered by Messrs. Ofsthun and Rockne as collaborators. The bill is intended as an act to suppress trusts and monopolies and compel them to conform to the laws of the state prohibiting discrimination and rebates and kindred evils. The bill is said to be modelled upon the law now in force in Texas, which is noted as the most drastic of the kind. The measure is admitted by its authors to be aimed at such corporations as the Standard Oil, International Harvester, and American Tobacco companies and the big packing combine. In the plainest possible language it declares illegal any contract or combination in the form of a trust, or any combination in restraint of trade, and any person or company who shall monopolize or combine with any other person or company to monopolize any trade in the state is declared guilty of felony and punishable by one year's imprisonment or a $5,000 fine. Property owned by such offenders may be seized and confiscated by the courts. Corporations whose stockholders are not personally liable for its debts are barred from the state until the officers shall file a statement with the attorney general which shall indicate the capital stock, market value, amount paid in, names of officers and agents, amounts paid in dividends, statements of amount of stock owned in other companies and amount of its stock held by others companies and amount of stock held in trust for it. It is made a felony to enter into a combination to drive any person out of business, or to sell with an agreement not to be sold again by the purchaser. All records of companies are made subject to inspection by the attorney general, and officers and agents are made subject to the provisions binding corporations. Rebates and discriminations in transportation are especially prohibited and punished as a felony. It also provides the procedure to be employed by the attorney general and the rule of incriminating evidence is suspended by the act in the matter of papers and books of a corporation under investigation. The bill has been sent to the committee on general legislation, and upon good information it can be predicted that it will be reported favorably to the house.

Chairman Jacobson, of the board of control, has been making a vigorous assault upon the Block measure to compel the state to furnish binding twine at cost. Mr. Jacobson says that the policy of the Block bill is shortsighted and that under a continuation of the present system, not only will the state be able to construct a new state prison from the profits of the binding twine industry, but that the state will soon be in position to furnish enough twine to supply all the farmers of the state at a greatly reduced rate. It is now generally conceded that Mr. Jacobson's stand will be approved by the legislature.

Insurance Report.

Chairman Dowling, of the house committee on public accounts and expenditures, brought in a report covering the investigation of the insurance department and it included a censure for former governors and public examiners who have failed to call attention to the enormous fees being paid by insurance companies for examinations demanded by the Minnesota department. The house struck out the censure, on the ground that it was not in the province of the committee to do more than make a recommendation. The committee recommended the passage of a bill increasing the pay of the insurance commissioner to $5,000 annually, and turning all fees into the state treasury.

Impatient members of the house failed in their effort to force the judiciary committee to turn in a report upon the revised code. Mr. Washburn led the fight, but the best that could be gotten was a promise from the chairman of the judiciary committee that some portions of the report would probably be ready for the house some time next week.

Amendments to the game laws are asked by the state commission. It is proposed to reduce about one-half the amount of game which can be killed legally, and a superintendent of state fish hatcheries is asked at a salary of $2,500. It is asked that contraband fish and game be sold to the highest bidder, and fishing with nets is to be permitted in the Mississippi and St. Croix rivers.

Drainage.

The joint drainage committee has agreed upon a new drainage law which, while it retains many features of the existing statute, will make numerous additions. The new bill will extend the right of eminent domain to persons desiring drainage; it will permit the drainage of boggy, meandered lakes unfit for fishing, and allows for lowering the levels of lakes which are raised above normal by reason of drainage ditches leading into them.

The house committee is holding interesting sessions to consider the various bills now before it. Most of these measures provide in one way or another for the extension of the primary election system, but such a difference of opinion exists that it seems almost impossible to report any plan which will receive general approval. However, a subcommittee has been appointed to draft such a measure.

The house acceded to the resolution introduced by Mr. Ware, and Messrs. Ware, Bardwell, Rockne, Carl and Rosenthal will act as special committee to investigate whether or not fire insurance companies are charging exorbitant rates in Minnesota.

The following new appointments have been sent to the senate by Gov. Johnson: Fred L. Hunt, Faribault, member state board of health; Frank Murray, St. Paul, reappointed member state forestry board; O. E. Linger, Minneapolis, member state medical examining board.

The house has passed the bill introduced by Representative Flower, in which the bribery law is extended to cover members-elect of the legislature.

The Horton Bill.

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—After weeks of contest in the house, that body has finally passed what is known as the Horton bill, which provides for the maintenance of the new state capitol building. As the measure came in from the senate the appropriation was fixed at $75,000 annually, and provision was made for the appointment of one of the members of the capitol commission as resident director at a salary of $3,000 yearly. It gave control of the building absolutely to the capitol commission and said nothing about the length of time which that body should have in which to complete the building. The result of the fight in the house was to materially change the measure. The appropriation was trimmed down to $60,000 annually, no salaried resident director is provided for and it is directed that the capitol commission shall go out of existence August 1st, 1906. At the bottom of this contract was the feeling on the part of those who were opposed to the Horton bill that it was drafted with a view to placing the patronage involved in other hands than those of the governor. This sentiment was freely expressed by them and the insinuation was vigorously denied by the supporters of the measure. The opponents wanted to adopt a plan which would give the governor the appointment of the large number of laborers required. The bill, as finally adopted, directs that the board of control shall purchase all coal and supplies. The bill will be returned to the senate to concur in the amendments.

The senate has gone on record as favoring the repeal of the Nelson bankruptcy act, though quite a respectable minority opposed favorable consideration of the Coller resolution memorializing congress upon the subject.

Interesting the Railways.

Railway officials are greatly interested in several of the measures now pending in the legislature, as was evident from the large attendance of railway lawyers at the hearing given Thursday last on the Peterson bill, which provides for the abolition of free passes and the reduction of passenger rates to 2 cents a mile. Senator Peterson, author of the bill, was the only spokesman in its favor, and his contention was that the adoption of a law such as proposed would cost the railways little, if anything, and that the loss of income occasioned by the reduced rate would be more than made good by the increased returns paid in by persons now traveling free. His argument was strongly contested by the attorneys. A. E. Clarke, general solicitor for the Minneapolis & St. Louis, declared that the railways could not earn enough to grease their wheels at the 2-cent rate. He gave figures to show that the average cost of transporting passengers on his line was 2.99 cents per mile and said that the average rate now being received was only 2.02 per mile, exclusive of earnings from mail and express carried on passenger trains. All the attorneys declared that very little free transportation was issued and that its abolition would have but little effect. It was the general opinion of the attorneys that the issuance of passes was a matter of little importance, though all of them were apparently willing to have that feature of the bill enacted into law. The hearing occurred before the senate committee on railways and was productive of no decisive result.

A petition sent to both houses of the legislature by the Minnesota Municipal and Commercial League asks for a material reduction of local distance freight rates, and suggests that the railway and warehouse commission, whether additional power be given them or not, should cause an investigation of the subject and make an order which would give Minnesota business and shippers rates which are fair and reasonable and at least as favorable as those now enjoyed in neighboring states. Specifically the petition asks: Legislation which shall give the railway and warehouse commission power to establish rates which shall be prima facie just and reasonable, and be in force until set aside by the courts; placing telegraph, telephone and electric lines under control of the railway and warehouse commission; that it be made the duty of the commission to prosecute before the interstate commerce commission complaints on claims of citizens of this state of violations of the interstate commerce laws, when such claims seem proper and just to the commission; legislation wiping out "bucket shops;" the exemption of county, township, village, school district or other political subdivision bonds from taxation; that the railway and warehouse commission have their attention called to the sections of existing laws which direct them to visit each railroad in the state each year, and to institute proceedings of their own without waiting for a complaint; that broad and general amendments to the state constitution be submitted permitting the legislature to revise the whole field of taxation; the passage of a reciprocal demurrage law.

A bill has been introduced by Representative Flower which provides that the board of control shall make public the terms of all contracts accepted by it for the construction of public buildings. This is directly antagonistic to the wishes of the board, which contends that by keeping such prices secret it secures better terms.

Accounts and Expenditures.

The house committee on public accounts and expenditures has decided, if possible, to go to the bottom of the charges so freely made in relation to timber trespass and laxity in the administration of the laws relating to the granting of mineral leases and has decided to summon former Gov. Van Sant and State Auditor S. G. Iverson to give testimony. It is said that the committee will make a thorough examination of several departments of the state government, including the office of public examiner and the state fish and game commission.

The house committee on elections has expressed itself as opposed to any extension of the primary election system which would do away with party conventions and a subcommittee has been appointed to draft a measure which will provide for the election of delegates at the regular primaries. There is much division of sentiment evident among the members generally regarding this problem, however, and it would be impossible to predict what manner of bill will be the outcome.

The resumption of the fight to take educational institutions from under the jurisdiction of the state board of control which was scheduled for the afternoon of Feb. 16, was postponed on account of the light attendance caused by the absence of many senators on junketing trips. It is to be considered again Tuesday next.

Drainage.

Mr. Ekman has introduced a bill in the house calling for the appropriation of $150,000 for drainage purposes during the coming two years. It provides that the money is to be expended under direction of the state drainage commission and considerably widens the scope of the commission by authorizing it to condemn land when necessary.

The proposition to establish a state bureau of immigration is not meeting with great favor in the legislature, the majority seeming to be opposed to any plan which would cause the creation of a board. The committee on public lands of the house, which is considering this matter, has had offered for its consideration the draft of a measure by Representative Murray, which provides that the work shall be done under direction of the state auditor, who shall have power to employ such help as he may deem necessary to better advertise state lands or in any other manner promote their sale. Mr. Murray proposes an appropriation of $30,000 for this purpose, to be used during the next two years. His idea is to use the majority of the appropriation for advertising the state's resources and its salable lands.

Representative Jefferson has introduced a bill which provides for the repeal of the statute of limitations in so far as it applies to all violators of the timber trespass law.

By unanimous vote the senate passed Senator Dunn's bill providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the desirability of establishing a home for indigent and crippled children. Mr. Dunn informed the senate that a man, whom he did not name, stood willing to contribute one-third of the entire amount necessary for such an institution, which would probably aggregate between $50,000 and $60,000.

Representatives of the State Federation of Women's clubs appeared in force before the training school committee last Thursday and advocated the establishment of a separate school for incorrigible girls. Two bills, one by Mr. Anderegg, and the other by Mr. Dorsey, are before the committee, and while they differ in details, each calls for the establishment of a new school for girls. The idea of segregation of the sexes is warmly supported by the women, who declare that Minnesota is far behind sister states in this regard.

PREPARING FOR BATTLE.

The Russians Show Increased Activity at the Shake River on Enemy's Both Flanks.

Tokio, Feb. 20.—According to reports from the Shakhe river the Russians are showing increased activity on both flanks and are extending and strengthening their right.

They also seem to be concentrating a heavy force on their left in front of Gen. Kuroki.

Fushun is the base of the operations, and it is estimated that the Russians there number six divisions.

The impression exists that Gen. Kuropatkin is preparing to assume the aggressive.

The weather is still unfavorable but the excessive cold will soon be over.

Chinese reports to the effect that Gen. Kuropatkin is preparing to as abandon the Shakhe river line and retire northward are discredited here.

A BRUTAL MURDER.

St. Paul Butcher is Killed in His Own Shop and Literally Hacked to Death.

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—Not in the annals of the whole state of Minnesota is there recorded a more brutally conceived and fiendish deed than the murder of Chas. Schindeldecker, the proprietor of a meat market in St. Paul, who, alone in his little shop at 523 West Seventh Street, was ruthlessly cut down by the hand of an assassin shortly after noon Saturday.

Left at noon by his sole employe, Walter Gerenz, the delivery boy, he was found a few minutes before 1 o'clock, upon the lad's return, cold in death, frightfully hacked, and with his head almost cut from his body by a cleaver. The blood-smeared blade lying at his side plainly told how the unfortunate man met his death. The place was rifled of all valuables.

A LARGE FIRE.

Flames Sweep Indianapolis Wholesale District, Causing a Very Heavy Loss.

Indianapolis, Feb. 20.—Fire last night completely destroyed eight buildings, among which were three hotels, causing a loss estimated at $1,500,000. One fireman was seriously injured by falling walls.

For four hours the wholesale district, bounded by Georgia and Meredian streets, Jackson place and the Union depot sheds, were menaced by the fire which started in the wholesale warerooms of the Fahnley and McCrea millinery company.

Firebrands fell in a perfect storm over the business portion of the city.

On every building were stationed companies of men equipped with fire apparatus and it was only through their united efforts that a general conflagration was prevented.

One fireman was injured and there were many narrow escapes.

Threw a Bomb.

Paris, Feb. 20.—Inhabitants of the Champs Elysees quarter were aroused by a loud explosion, and the police discovered in front of the Mexican legation a man severely wounded and lying amid fragments of a bomb.

The man was taken to a hospital and cross-examined. He claimed that his name was Garcia and that he was a Spaniard. He asserted he had been ruined by the Mexican government and in revenge threw the bomb, which however exploded too soon and he himself was injured.

Miners Hurled to Death.

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 20.—While a cage containing ten workmen was being lowered into the Lyttle shaft, four miles from here Saturday, it caught in some loose timbers along the side of the shaft, and when suddenlyly released, the cage dropped with such force as to tear the bottom from it.

The miners were hurled to the bottom, a distance of 1,200 feet, and it is believed were crushed to death.

Rescuers have been sent into the shaft to secure the bodies.

Begin Inquiry at Once.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 20.—It is expectthat the investigation of the Standard Oil affairs in Kansas will begin immediately.

Governor Hoch was notified that six inspectors had been ordered to Kansas to work to work on the case.

They will report their findings to Commissioner Garfield.

The state officers will aid the inspectors in every possible way.

Not Guilty.

Decorah, Io., Feb. 20.—"Not guilty, but insane," was the verdict returned by the jury in the Gifford murder case being out six hours. Prof. T. I. Gifford was charged with murdering H. A. Bigelow, on Saturday Nov. 5, 1804.

Reports Untrue.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., December 1904.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. on February 14. 1905 viz:

H. E. No. 7040 Chippwa Series for the W. ½ S W. ¼ Sec.27 T.150 N. R. 38 W.

H. names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Edward L. Wichterman. Fred King, John Orvold, Martin E. Hyland. all of Gully, Minn.

Led All the Guests.

In the days of King George III. of England the Persian ambassador to his court demanded, but was denied, precedence over all other foreign representatives. He refused to go to court, causing it to be reported abroad that he was ill. He met the prince regent at the house of the Lady Salisbury of the time. "I am very sorry to offend your royal highness by not going to court," he said. "Now, sir, my sovereign, he tell me I go first; your people say I must go last. Now, this very bad for me when I go back to Persia." So saying, he made a significant pass toward his head, expressing decapitation. The prince tried to appease him. "But, sir, you still angry with me. You have not invited me to your party tomorrow night." The prince explained that it was only a children's party, but the ambassador might come if he chose. He did choose, for he went and, being the only ambassador there, led all the guests, thus scoring heavily for Persia, which made him comfortable about the neck again.

Restoring Faded Ink.

Faded ink on old documents, papers, parchments, etc., may be restored so as to render the writing perfectly legible. The process consists in moistening the paper with water and then passing over the lines a brush which has been wetted with a solution of sulphide of ammonia. The writing will immediately appear quite dark in color, and this color in the case of parchment will be preserved. On paper, however, the color will gradually fade again, but on a fresh application of the sulphide of ammonia it will reappear. Writing executed in ordinary ink which has been rendered illegible by age may be restored by carefully moistening it with an infusion of galls or a solution of ferrocyanide of potassium slightly acidulated with hydrochloric acid. Care must be taken to apply the liquid so as to prevent the ink from spreading.

Sandy's Initiation.

A Scottish gillie was invited by the laird to take a pull at his flask after gaffing the first fish of the day.

"I canna trink oot a bottle," protested the gillie, with a frown of disapproval.

"Aweel, try, Sandy," said the laird encouragingly. And Sandy tried—tried so thoroughly that the laird gazed in mingled awe and admiration as the whisky gurgled and gurgled out of the flesk down the swarthy throat until, with scarce a heel tap left in it, the "pocket pistol" was handed back to the owner.

"Hoot, Sandy, maybe ye were richt; maybe ye canna trink oot of a bottle," gasped the laird, with a mighty sigh, "but, eh, mon, ye'd soon learn!"—Baily's Magazine.

Benefits of Proper Breathing.

The habit of slow, measured, deep breathing that covers the entire lung surface is of more value and importance than you will ever believe until you have tried it, and when you have established the habit of breathing in this manner you will say some remarkable things in its favor. It will reach all points of your physical system. All the benefits that occur from a healthy condition of the blood will in a greater or less degree be yours, for the manner and completeness with which the inspired air comes in contact with the blood in the lungs are of the utmost importance to every vital process.—Christian Work and Evangelist.

Hissing in the Theater.

Formerly there was no hissing in the theater. The benevolent audience were content to yawn and fall asleep. The invention of hissing is no older than 1680 and took place at the first representation of "Aspar," a tragedy of Fontenelle, so we are told by the poet Roi in his "Brevet de la Calotte." A farce was produced in Bannister's time under the title of "Fire and Water." "I predict its fate," said Bannister. "What fate?" whispered the anxious author at his side. "What fate?" said Bannister. "Why, what can fire and water produce but a hiss?"

CIRCUS PERFORMERS.

To Them the Circus Is a Very Serious Affair.

To circus people the circus is a very serious thing. When a bareback rider slips to the ground after a somersault or a lofty tumbler misses the shoulder it is his business to land on the audience is all sympathy, as if feeling itself how it is to fall before so many people. Very little the performer cares for all the vast multitude. His mind is on the superintendent, his particular superintendent, who is watching him at the side of the arena, and who, when he goes off, is sure to ask very pointedly how his eye happened to be inaccurate or his muscles infirm. There is no place in the circus for performers who fail.

Even the clowns look a little bit serious behind the scenes. But perhaps that is only because the black lines they paint on their whitened visages are always so glum and solemn. And what a wilderness of fun making people there are in the latter day circus—the Bumpkin, the Loon, the Harlequin, the Grimacer, the Merry Andrew, the Austrian Looby, the Zany, the Pierrot, the Punch, the Motley Fool and finally the German Broad Face, whose name is Paddy Burke! One of the clowns was sitting on his trunk in the dressing room licking a stick of black paint and rubbing it on his cheeks so as to make a most funereal expression. The small boy asked him what kind of a clown he was. He said that he was just "Funny Friskey," and he got his visiting card out of his trunk. It read, "H. Friskey, Clown and Comedian," and it had a heavy gold rim, which made it very imposing. In the four corners it said Europe and Asia and Africa and America, which showed that H. Friskey's fame had reached the four corners of the card. Until you saw his merry capers in the ring you never could believe that a man with such a serious face and such an imposing visiting card could be either funny or frisky.—Metropolitan Magazine.

TRUTH OR PARADOX?

Life levels all men; death reveals the eminent.

Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it.

While we have prisons it matters little which of us occupy the cells.

Titles distinguish the mediocre, embarrass the superior and are disgraced by the inferior.

Democracy substitutes election by the incompetent many for appointment by the corrupt few.

Do not do unto others as you would that they should do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same.

Your word can never be as good as your bond, because your memory can never be as trustworthy as your honor.

If you strike a child take care that you strike it in anger, even at the risk of maiming it for life. A blow in cold blood neither can nor should be forgiven.—From George Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman."

Puzzled by the Law.

The librarian of the Congressional library tells a story of a colored man who came into the library and asked one of the assistants for a "good law book." He explained that one of his neighbors intended to sue him and he wanted to get a book so he could find out the law.

The clerk gave him a copy of a book called "Every Man His Own Lawyer." The colored man sat down at one of the desks and turned the pages of the book for an hour. Then he came to the desk of the assistant and said:

"'Deed, boss, cain't you git me sumpin' easier? Dis yere is d' fifth edition. Cain't I have de fust edition? Mebbe I c'u'd understan' dat. I ain't bin gittin' on right smart with dis yere fifth one."—Baltimore News.

The Tools of Genius.

Some of the greatest discoveries in physics and chemistry have been made with the simplest forms of apparatus and under the most modest conditions of laboratory equipment. One need only recall the achievements of the famous John Dalton and in later time of Sir Gabriel Stokes to illustrate the point. As regards the latter, a comment of Lord Rayleigh is of interest. Stokes' experimental work, he says, was executed with the most modest appliances. Many of his discoveries were made in a narrow passage behind the pantry of his house, into the window of which he had a shutter fixed with a slit in it and a bracket on which to place crystals and prisms.—London Telegraph.

A False Report.

"I have been told," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that your daughter has been doing some wonderful things in pyrography."

"Oh, no," replied her hostess, "she ain't been there at all. The last letter we had from her she was in Pittsburg and thought she'd go right through to Washington."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A FROLIC IN MEXICO

BREAKING THE PINATA DURING THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

This Mirth Provoking Pastime Is the Great Social and Fun Making Feature of the Season—Dressing and Filling the Olla.

Christmas in Mexico is not the typical Christmas of cold and snow and ice, but one of bright, warm sunshine, cloudless blue skies, flowers in profusion, trees in full foliage and a life of out of doors.

At least a week before Christmas in the principal streets of Mexico arches are erected from sidewalk to sidewalk, festooned with wreaths of flowers and bunting in the national colors—red, white and green. Under the arches booths are erected, and every toy manufactured in Mexico is on sale.

In every Mexican house great preparations are made for what is called the "pinata." Every child begs and scrapes and saves the centavos for weeks and months ahead. All kinds of articles are made especially for this ceremony, and every family vies with its friends and neighbors to have its pinata more beautiful and fanciful than any one else's.

The pinata is really an earthenware utensil which is in general use for cooking. It is called in common parlance an olla and is of brown pottery something like the old fashioned earthenware crocks used in the north before enamel ware became the fad.

The pinatas are large or small, as the purse of the purchaser permits. They are round, pot bellied and very large at the top. They are sold from door to door on the streets and in the markets. They cost only 10, 15 or 20 centavos, but the olla is the least expensive part of the game.

The body of the olla for a woman is covered with tissue paper; then a crinkled paper dress is fashioned; then a bodice is built up draped to represent a loose white waist, and above this is placed a false face. The hair is made with black paper, braided into one long plait at the back, as the women wear their hair in Mexico. Sometimes a white tehuana headdress is made of the lace paper used by bakers and confectioners.

A flower pinata is decorated with large paper flowers in every color of the rainbow. Red, white and green ribbons, forming long streamers, and silver and gold tinsel, glass balls and colored lights all help to make the flower pinata very beautiful. The possibilities for dressing these pinatas are endless. In a large family the mother and daughters have their own pinatas, and great secrecy is maintained in the decoration of the olla. It is the aim of each to devise as original a dressing for the pinata as possible, and it can be made a very extravagant ornament. In the families of wealthy Mexicans the luxury of the pinata often mounts into thousands.

After the olla is decorated to the taste it is filled. The filling consists of peanuts, hazel nuts, hard candies, like marbles, and all kinds of Mexican dulces. These dulces are candied fruits, nut paste, etc.

Christmas night the pinatas are carried in great state into the sala and suspended from the ceiling one at a time. All the relatives of the family are present, and as cousins of the fifth and sixth degree are recognized and children are very numerous there is generally a large gathering. They all sit very demurely on chairs ranged in a row around the walls of the room.

One person is constituted master of ceremonies, the eldest son or daughter of the house. He or she stands in the middle of the room. Near by is a jar or umbrella stand filled with apisaco canes or sticks. When everything is ready a child or grown person is selected and called by name. She comes forward and is blindfolded.

Then the fun begins. The person blindfolded is turned round and round until she loses all knowledge of where the pinata hangs. A cane is put in her hands, and she is told to hit the pinata and try to break it. She is given three chances. If she fails to hit it she sits down amid laughter and ridicule. If she hits it without breaking it she is entitled to a small prize.

And so it goes on, one after another being called up, blindfolded and given a cane and three chances to break the pinata. Finally one more fortunate than the rest succeeds in giving a hard enough blow, and, crash, the pinata falls to the grounds in hundreds of bits, and its contents are scattered far and wide.

A wild scramble ensues. Everybody rushes forward to gather as much of the spilled contents as possible.

The fortunate breaker of the pinata gets a handsome prize and is awarded the seat of honor. He or she sits down and is debarred from another trial at breaking another pinata. As soon as the confusion dies down and order is somewhat restored another olla is hung up and the same routine gone through. So the fun continues until the last pinata is broken, and then the prizes are awarded.

The pinata party is the great social and fun making feature of the Christmas season. After the pinatas have been broken and a supper has been served there follows dancing, or a traveling company of Indians from the mountains is brought in to sing and dance in native costume.

These traveling Indians are somewhat like the singing bands which go around at Christmas time from house to house in England, Germany, France and Italy. They have been known and popular in Mexico from time immemorial. The are much in demand during the Christmas holiday season.—Kansas City Star.

"Maddening Potted Phrases."

We have protested against the "faultless even dress" of the hurried descriptive writer, since evening dress is the only male attire that excludes the possibility of error. But a long list could be made of the phrases—tinned and state—which all writers use who write like enterprising and hurried builders. building with ready made doors and window panes. For example, one never reads an account of a railway accident from the lips of the "badly shaken" passenger without finding that "all went well until"—the thing happened. But perhaps the most maddening of these potted phrases is "the rash act." You will read how Mr. Smith or Mr. Brown sat down and wrote several long letters to his relatives, how he had with great care arranged his affairs. how with the utmost deliberation he purchased poison, a revolver, a new razor and a ball of twine; how he sent his family away for a holiday, went to his room and conscientiously poisoned, strangled, sliced and shot himself. "No reason," runs the inevitable comment, "is assigned for the rash act." which was as deliberate as the movement of the Rhone glacier.—London Chronicle.

Turkish Attar of Roses.

Turkish attar of roses is mainly produced in Bulgaria and is carried on in the fertile valleys on the southern slopes of the Balkans. The rose harvest in Bulgaria begins about the third week in May and lasts about a month. The second great seat of rose farming in Europe is the space between the Maritime Alps and the Mediterranean, in the extreme southeast of France. This is, in fact, the great scent farming and perfumery making center of Europe, the town of Grasse being the emporium of the district. Of course attar of roses is also produced in India, Persia and Asiatic Turkey under the climatic conditions desired, but the great bulk of the supply is furnished by the European regions already noted. The roses employed for attar making in Europe are: In Bulgaria the red damask rose and in the south of France the Provence rose, a hybrid or variety of the hundred leaf rose, to which also belongs the well known cabbage rose.

Of course that's easy.

But our advice is really worth a little more to you than most people's, for we offer to give you the first bottle of our medicine free, if it fails to help you

We could not afford to do this unless our medicine was good. Such an offer, on the wrong kind of medicine, would put a merchant prince in the poor house.

Those whom it cannot benefit—less than one in ten thousand—we prefer to refund their money.

All we ask of you is to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for your complaint. If you suffer from sleeplessness, nervous exhaustion, dizziness, headache, muscular twitchings, melancholy, loss of memory, weak stomach, poor blood, bilious troubles, epilepsy, St. Vitus' Dance, etc., we will guarantee to benefit you or refund your money.

You are the doctor.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

HOW THEY MAINTAIN THE CHARMS OF THEIR SEX.

The Importance that Attaches to the Care of the Blood If One Wants Bright Eyes and a Clear Complexion.

Every sensible woman naturally wishes to appear attractive. She knows the value of bright eyes, delicate complexion and lively spirits. She knows also that good health is at the basis of her charms, and that good blood is the source of good health.

Miss Mamie Conway has a complexion which is the admiration of all who know her. Asked if she could make any suggestions that would be helpful to others less fortunate, she said:

"My complexion would not have pleased you, if you had seen it two years ago. It was then about as bad as it could be, and it gave me a great deal of dissatisfaction. If you want a good complexion you must take care of your health, especially of the condition of your blood. My health was at that time completely broken down. I was nervous, had frequent headaches, a torpid liver and a great deal of pain in that region. I suffered also from indigestion. It was clear that my blood was in bad condition, for pimples broke out all over my face."

"It is hard to realize that, for there isn't the slightest trace of such blemishes now."

"It was unfortunately quite otherwise then, and a long time passed before I found anything that gave me any relief. I became very weak and listless. The doctor's medicine did me no good, and I took a number of highly recommended tonics with no better result. As soon, however, as I began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People my complexion cleared up, and after I had taken two boxes there was not a sign of a pimple left on my face. My cheeks became rosy, I gained flesh and have had perfect health ever since."

Rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes are merely signs of healthy blood. They have come not only in the case of Miss Conway, whose home is at 1241 East Eighth street, Canton, Ohio, but to thousands of women for whom Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made new blood. There is no surer way for you to obtain them, than to buy a box of these pills from any druggist and try them for yourself. They correct irregularities and banish weakness.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Tame Wild Cats.

Domestic cats running wild, and their descendants born in the timber threaten to overrun the forests of Lake county, on the north shore of Lake Superior.

Several years ago a lumber company operating in that division of the state distributed about fifty cats among its camps and at the headquarters for supplies to kill off the rats, which were doing much damage. When the camps broke up most of the cats were left to shift for themselves, and the result has been that they are now running wild, with their hundreds of decendants, and the feline population of the county has already reached astonishing proportions.

To all intents and puposes the animals have been transformed from domestic to wild cats. The kitten born to the wild conditions are much larger and fiercer than the old Duluth mousers that bred them. As a rule the kittens grow nearly a third larger than the old tabbies and their fur is longer and finer than that of cats raised in the domestic state. The animals are more active and better conditioned.

The new race of wild cats has no difficulty in making a good living in Lake county, which abounds in rabbits, wild mice and birds.

Prison Report.

The report of Warden Henry Wolfer of the state prison for two years ending July 31, 1904, states that during that time 180 have been committed to the prison, of whom twenty-two have died, thirty-nine were pardoned, and seven were transfered to asylums.

The income from visitors' fees was $6,619, most of which has been turned into the fund for the amusement and education for the prisoners.

The total number of prisoners is 581, of whom 243 are bachelors, 170 married, 23 divorced and 42 widowers. Grand larceny is the most common offense in the state.

Laborers are most tempted to commit crime, as the prison contains 180 who have been in that occupation; 55 have been farmers, and bookkeepers come next with 20 representatives.

As to nativity of the prisoners, Minnesota comes first, New York next and Canada third. As to habits, only 28 are total abstainers, 254 are heavy drinkers, and 319 drink moderately.

Almost Deserted.

The state supreme court has moved into its quarters at the new capitol. The office of the clerk and the chambers of the judges are now ready for occupancy. The court room is not entirely finished, but it will be in condition to hold the next session of the court.

George N. Lamphere, secretary of the soldiers' home board, has received notice that his rooms in the north wing of the basement are ready for him. He expects to move soon. The adjutant general's department will also move into its new quarters in a few days.

This will leave the old capitol deserted, with the exception of the department of public instruction, historical library, the laboratory of the dairy and food commission and the live stock sanitary board.

Sponser for Battleship.

Miss Rose Marie Schaller of Hastings will act as sponsor for the battleship Minnesota, which will be launched April 6 at Newport News, Va. The appointment of Miss Schaller was made by Gov. Johnson, following a telegram received from Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, asking the governor to name a girl to christen the ship.

It was not known definitely until this dispatch was received yesterday when the launching would take place or whether Gov. Johnson would be called upon to name a sponsor. Coupled with a request to name a sponsor is an invitation for Gov. Johnson to be present at the launching.

Miss Schaller is a daughter of Senator A. Schaller of Hastings. She is a sophomore at the Minnesota State University.

Binding Twine.

The production of the state prison of all the binding twine used by Minnesota farmers was advocated by J. F. Jacobson of the state board of control, before the house committee on binding twine. The output he said should be increased from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 pounds per year, so that clubs of the poorer farmers could order state twine through dealers who guaranteed payment and were allowed a profit of 1 cent a pound, the same as if they bought the twine outright. The farmer would still have a considerable saving.

News Notes.

The North Star Implement company has been incorporated at Cottonwood.

Bena is exceedingly lively as a result of logging. Three camps are being operated just outside of town.

The Twin City automobile dealers are making plans for an automobile day at the state fair.

Christian Lind, of St. Paul, was sentenced to ten days in the workhouse for the larceny of a meal at a restaurant.

Judge Austin Hill Young, for 18 years a judge of the Hennepin county district bench, died at his residence in Minneapolis, after an illness of several months.

Dr. Bracken, of the St. Paul board of health, says sand filters are cheap and effective in purifying the water supply of a small city.

Good seed will be preached to the farmers along the line of the Milwaukee railroad the latter part of this month. The railroad company is to co-operate with several professors of the state farm school in a missionary campaign.

POINTS ON APPENDICITIS.

Jersey School Superintendent Turns Loose on Vermiform Misinformation.

Many a layman has been "stumped" in trying to master the intricacies of the vermiform appendix. But let everybody take heart, says the New York Sun.

In an aristocratic New Jersey suburb recently the superintendent of public schools was visiting a grade while a lesson in physiology was being demonstrated. The teacher was explaining the construction of the spinal column. She compared it to a string of beads in order to show its formation, and drew a diagram for further illumination.

When the lesson was finished, the superintendent suggested that a most important feature of the spinal column had not been explained.

"It is this curious, pointed section at the base," he said, indicating the end of the vertebral column, "which is called the vermiform appendix. You have all heard of appendicitis? Very good. Well, that is the name given to a disease which is caused by an inflammation of this appendix. An operation for appendicitis means an amputation of this useless appendix."

There is a new superintendent of public schools in that suburban New Jersey town.

Quick Cure of Rheumatism by Dodd's Kidney Pills—How They Saved the Shop of a Kansas Blacksmith—Cure Was Permanent Too.

Goodland, Kan., Feb. 20th.—(Special)—So quick and complete was the cure of N. E. Albertson, a local blacksmith, that it almost seems like a miracle. He had Rheumatism so bad he feared he would have to give up his shop. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills drove away all the pains and they have never returned. Speaking of his cure, Mr. Albertson says:

"I had Rheumatism in my shoulders and arms for years. Part of the time it was so bad I could not sleep at night. My arm hurt so that it seemed I would have to give up my blacksmith shop. I went to the drug store and bought one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and took them. I have not had the Rheumatism since. A great many of the neighbors are using Dodd's Kidney Pills since they saw how they cured me."

A HEALTHY OLD AGE

OFTEN THE BEST PART OF LIFE

Help for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill our mission in life, and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs. Mary Koehne

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth.

When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspiration easily, and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and you cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 Garfield Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it never disappoints; so when I felt that I was nearing the change of life I commenced treatment with it. I took in all about six bottles and it did me a great deal of good. It stopped my dizzy spells, pains in my back and the headaches with which I had suffered for months before taking the Compound. I feel that if it had not been for this great medicine for women that I should not have been alive to-day. It is splendid for women, old or young, and will surely cure all female disorders."

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

RUSSIAN REIGN OF TERROR.

Grand Duke Sergius' funeral was held in Moscow without any violence being offered the attending nobility.

Emperor Nicholas has received, through Ambassador McCormick, a message of condolence from President Roosevelt, which contains a strong expression of the abhorrence with which both the American government and people view the crime perpetrated at Moscow.

Four thousand students demanded freedom of Russia, denounced absolutism, called for the assassination of Trepoff, glorified in the murder of Sergius, tore a portrait of the czar and trampled it under foot.

M. De Witte, president of the Russian council of ministers, resigned after the czar refused to broaden the scope of reforms.

Five hundred persons have been killed in the street fighting at Baku, in the Russian Caucasus.

Owing principally to the strike western Poland is completely cut off from communication with middle and western Europe except by telegraph.

LARGE FIRE AT NEW ORLEANS.

NEARLY $5,000,000 WORTH OF PROPERTY WIPED OUT BY FIERCE FLAMES.

Elevators, Cars, Freight and Residences are Devoured by Flames. Many Firemen Injured But No Lives are Lost.

New Orleans, Feb. 17.—Fire involving millions of dollars loss in property and one that strikes a serious blow at the immense export trade of New Orleans swept the river-front last night and wiped out the vast freight terminals of the Illinois Central, known as the Stuyvesant docks. Nearly a dozen squares of modern wharves and freight sheds, two magnificant grain elevators, hundreds of loaded cars and vast quantities of freight including 20,000 bales of cotton, were destroyed, together with a large number of small residences.

The fire was still still raging furiously at midnight, at which time it had almost reached the upper end of of the Illinois Central property.

It has not been determined whether there has been any loss of life. The ocean-going shipping seems to have escaped serious damage. A number of firemen and employes of the docks were injured. Actual estimates of the losses are impossible now, though they may exceed $5,000,000.

The Stuyvesant docks extend from Louisiana avenue almost to Napoleon avenue, a distance of twelve squares. The wharves between these two points were covered with miles of trackage, and steel and iron sheds ran the whole distance.

The two grain elevators were of the most modern construction, the upper one having a capacity of a million bushels. Thousands of bales of cotton, several hundred thousand packages of sugar, great quantities of cotton seed oil and oil-cakes, lumber and every conceivable variety of freight filled the warehouses and sheds.

Practically all the export business handled by the Illinois Central was put abroad ships at these docks. The docks and improvements have been under construction for ten years, elaborate extensions and immense investments having been made after the constitutional convention of 1898 made it possible for the road to invest permanently at this point.

At midnight more than nine squares of terminals had been completely destroyed and it seemed unlikely that the fire would be checked until it reached Napoleon avenue which is a very broad street.

The fire was checked at the Methodist church, the district where the Hotel Moody stood having been entirely been destroyed. The burned section comprises about one-fifteenth of the entire area of the city, and was occupied almost exclusively by the poorer classes.

The cause of the explosion has not yet been determined.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL BILL NOT HAVING EASY TIME BY ANY MEANS.

RAILWAY MEN INTERESTED.

Advocates of Good Roads are Getting Together and Favorable Results may be Attained.

St. Paul, Feb. 23.—Those members of the legislature who are working hard to secure the passage of the senate bill divesting the state board of control of jurisdiction over the educational institutions of the state are having a hard time of it. It will be remembered that when the measure was before the upper house about a week ago it was amended by including the state public school at Owatonna, and the schools for the deaf and the blind at Faribault. This amendment was distasteful to the friends of the measure, who contend that it was a device of the enemies of the bill to load it down with objectionable provisions. The bill was again taken up as a special order by the senate yesterday but the attendance was slight and on motion of Senator Brower, who is leading the contest for the educational institutions, a further postponement was taken until next Friday afternoon. There was a spirited contest over the adoption of Mr. Brower's motion, which won out by the narrow margin of one vote.

Quite a display of oratory was provoked in the house in the course of consideration of the Adams bill, which provides that when lumber is sold as inch stuff it shall measure a full inch, etc. A Minneapolis member made the point that such a law would serve no practical purpose, inasmuch as all lumber was cut for certain purposes with which builders were perfectly familiar. Mr. Adams contended that there was no more good reason why lumber should be sold on false representation than any other commodity. A motion to indefinitely postpone the bill was defeated, and further action was delayed.

Tax Commissioner.

Representative S. D. Peterson has introduced a bill which provides for the creation of the office of tax commissioner at an annual salary of $3,500, he to be appointed by the governor and to hold office until January, 1907, after which time a four-year term is provided. The principal duty of the commissioner will be to ferret out unpaid taxes and to see that public service corporations pay their share of the public burden. In addition he is to make a study of laws in other states for the purpose of suggesting improvements in our taxation laws to the legislature.

Advocates of good roads have been getting together recently, with the result that a general form of a proposed new law has been agreed upon and a subcommittee of the joint road and bridge committee has been appointed, with instructions to draft a bill along indicated lines and have it introduced. The bill will provide for a highway commission of three, to serve without pay. The state tax of one-twentieth of a mill is to be levied each year and distributed among the counties. The money is to be spent by the county commissioners, subject to the approval of the state commission. The commission is to be allowed an appropriation for the employment of engineers and a highway engineer and a corps of road experts are allowed. Their duties will be to investigate and report upon proposed new roads. Counties are given the option of building any kind of road which seems best to suit local conditions and may establish grades and build scientific roads only when they desire. It is calculated that inasmuch as there will be no direct tax for road purposes this year, the proposed new law will interfere in no way with the passage of the usual omnibus road and bridge measure by this legislature.

Representative J. B. Kelly is the author of a bill which provides for increasing the terms of all county officials to four years. It also includes a provision which would extend the terms of two-year officials already elected.

Railway Fares.

Representative Ware, of Northfield, has introduced a substitute for his 2½-cent passenger fare bill, in which many objections are obviated which were urged against the original bill. Reduced excursion rates are permitted and interchangeable mileage books at the 2-cent rate are made compulsory. Mr. Ware also introduced a bill making it malfeasance for any public officer, elective or appointive, to solicit or accept passes, reductions in prices or favors of any kind from railways, telephones or telegraph companies. Removal from office by the governor is the punishment prescribed. For those who offer such favors a fine of $500 is fixed.

It is still a matter of doubt whether or not the legislature will be able to properly amend the code revision report so that it will be in shape for ultimate adoption at this session. The judiciary committees of both houses have been laboring with great diligence and the mass of amendments which have been agreed upon is somewhat appalling in view of the fact that scores of important bills have yet to receive action at the hands of both houses. Chairman Anderson, of the house judiciary committee, feels that his committee will have its code report before the house within the week, and it has been agreed among the leaders to make it a special order to be considered each afternoon, until the task is completed. This is slow work and will consume a great deal of time, and more will be consumed when the two houses have succeeded, each to their own satisfaction, in framing a code, try to get together on the points of difference which are certain to result.

Representative Gates has introduced a bill giving village councils power to prescribe safety regulations at railway crossings.

Representative Bardwell is the author of a bill appropriating $5,000 to aid the Minnesota Horticultural Society.

Insurance Laws.

Over thirty amendments to the insurance laws, as revised by the statute revision commission, have been recommended by the subcommittee of the judiciary committee of the house, and have been reported in by Chairman M. L. Fosseen. The most important of these was the two per cent premium tax, which, by inadvertance the commission had applied to all earnings of companies doing business in the state. Under the amendment the tax will be levied only upon business done in the state. Another important amendment allows all fire departments in the state to participate in the provision for state aid. The commission had limited this aid to departments having at least a fire engine, a hook and ladder truck and a hose cart. This would have barred out fully two-thirds of the organizations in the state. Another amendment exempts fraternal insurance from payment of the two per cent tax. As reported by the commission, annual valuations of insurance companies are made necessary. This would entail an expense of $120,000 yearly upon the companies. As amended, the valuations shall be made at the discretion of the insurance commissioner. Newspaper publishers and job printers are authorized to form mutual companies under another amendment, and still another omission is remedied by conferring upon the insurance commissioner the power to revoke the license of any company failing to pay its taxes.

STOPPING SMALL SMUGGLER

Customs Officers by Their Vigilance Are Gradually Subduing the Evil.

"Petty smuggling, the sort that is practiced by people who have bought some small articles abroad and want to bring them home without paying duty, is now being pretty well stamped out," said a man who was for several years in the United States customs service on the Pacific coast to a Kansas City Journal writer. "Of course, there never was so much of it in the west as on the Atlantic coast, but the vigilance of the customs officials and the severe penalties imposed on people who have been caught has had a tendency to break it up pretty thoroughly.

"As a general thing the people who try to smuggle in dutiable goods are now of two classes, the one composed of professional smugglers, who operate on a large scale, and the other of actresses and wealthy people of a certain sort, who take no particular pains to avoid detection, and who enjoy the notoriety which an escapade of the sort gives them.

"On the Pacific coast the two things to which the operations of smugglers are almost entirely confined are opium and silks. Both have to pay heavy duties, and both are comparatively easily concealed. Much of the silk brought in from China and Japan is of such fine texture that four or five ordinary sized handkerchiefs could be concealed in an English walnut shell.

"Some unique methods are used by opium smugglers. One day the wharfinger at San Francisco was standing near his office when he saw a lime fly over a high fence which inclosed a vacant lot just adjoining the wharf. Before long another one came in the same way. He thought nothing of it at first, as the boys are quite in the habit of throwing things at the rats around the wharfs. But when they kept on coming his curiosity began to be aroused. He stepped over to where the limes were falling, and where there were by that time probably a dozen of them, picked one up and cut it open. He found a small plug had been cut from the lime, as though with a leather punch, the hole filled with small pills of opium wrapped in oiled paper, and the outside part of the plug returned to its place. The limes had been thrown from the deck of a ship at anchor at the wharf to the vacant lot, where the smuggler expected to pick them up later.

"Of late the center of the opium smuggling has been transferred from San Francisco to the ports further north, as the men who were operating in that line became too well known to San Francisco officials. Now most of them come in through Portland, or further north, in the British possessions, where I understand the Canadian officials are now having a great deal of trouble.

"It was the custom for some time to allow a great deal of liberty to army officers returning from the Philippines, and to take their statements as to the dutiable goods in their possession without a very thorough investigation. But it was found that the privilege was being abused, and a stricter search was instituted. Shortly afterward a captain came through, with three big trunks, and declared that he had practically nothing of a dutiable nature. An inspection showed that in the bottom of one of his trunks were whole bolts of valuable silks, which he lost altogether by trying to cheat the government which he served."

Indian Novels by Indian Writers.

Of late years the number of writers among the Cherokees has greatly increased. There are historians in the tribe whose works are used as textbooks in the Indian schools, and who are cited as authorities not to be disputed. There are also Indians who have written codes of law which before being put in permanent form had been handed down from generation to generation. The Indians to-day obey these laws with a greater reverence than they do the laws of the United States. There are Indian novelists—novelists who devote their time to entertaining the Indian mind with romance with entangled plots and blood-curdling climaxes. These books are popular among the Indians. Edition after edition of some works is published, and they are read by buck and squaw alike.—Kansas City Journal.

Manufacture of Chartreuse.

One of the few items of foreign trade of this district in which change is shown is alcohol, which is being imported now by the Carthusian monks, lately emigrated from France, who have transferred the manufacture of their renowned chartreuse to this city. They continue to receive spirits for its manufacture from the distilleries which they owned and are suspected of owning still in other countries. It is doubtful whether they will find it economical to continue under their present management owing to the custom house duties which they tried to avoid by pleading the reexportation of alcohol after it is blended in their liquor. Drawbacks are unknown in this, the country of their adoption, and the claims were not allowed.

The stories that are being told about the wolf farming, are told by some irresponsible class that would not know a wolf from a sheppard dog. Last week's Plummer Pioneer came out with along lingo written by some Thief Riverite that was supposed to be the stand of the people in that neighborhood on the county seat question. The Gazette does not believe in wasting a particle of space on the aforesaid spiel nor does it believe that the people of that part of the country take the least stock in the article fathered by Mr. Latta. It has been plainly evident for the past month that Latta was merely waiting for a price and being unsuccessful in attempts to get it from the people here he let himself be 'approached" by the upriver gang. Latta action is in keeping with the other acts of the bunch up the river, who propose to buy everything and everybody that they can to help their winning cause. If they paid more than six cents for the article in last week's Pioneer, however, they have greatly overestimated its "influence." —Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The Hawaiian Death Prayer.

Upon the minds of such a people as the Hawaiians were, while under their ancient form of religion, it was but natural that superstition should gain a rooted hold. The most curious and effective belief to which they were made subject was that a man can be prayed to death, a belief that survives among the natives to the present day. For the success of the tragical death prayer it was necessary to obtain some hair or a piece of finger nail of the intended victim. A priest was then employed to use incantation and prayer for his destruction. Always informed of the doom that the priest was invoking upon him, the victim generally pined away and died.

There is a story that an Englishman in the service of Kamehameha I. having incurred the displeasure of a priest, the latter proceeded to "remove" him by the death prayer process. The Anglo-Saxon, however, set up an opposition altar in derision and jokingly proclaimed that he intended to pray the priest to death. Alarmed at the threat and overwhelmed at the failure of his own incantations, the sorcerer died, proving by his death his faith in his religion.

The Social Capital.

We do not think that either Washington or New York or any other city will ever become the social capital of the United States as London is the social capital of Great Britain. Washington will come much nearer to it than it does at present, but the country is too big to have a social capital. Hordes of people will come to New York to make money, to amuse themselves, to study, to live their lives in the least restricted atmosphere that the country offers, but only very rich people will come here to find and occupy a place in organized society. Pleasant people will always find pleasant playmates here. There is no lack of good company for everybody that is companionable. But the charm of New York for people who still live elsewhere is not in its society, but in its shops and shows, its sunshine, its eating and its drinking. It is pleasant. It grows finer every day. When it is finished it will be a marvelous city, but hardly the social capital of the country.—Harper's Weekly.

A Finny Acrobat.

No two leaps of the tarpon are quite alike. As the tarpon comes out into day his jaws distend, his gills flap open, and the mullet bait flies out across the water for a hundred feet, while he retches at the hook, shaking his head angrily from side to side, like a horse that fights his bit. In midflight he will turn and cut into the stream with a head on dive that makes a perfect cleavage of the whitened water. His next emergence may be a back somersault and his third a long distance jump with no height to it, but a substantial gain in feet. With infinite spirit he will continue his play until absolutely worn out, when the spring and somersaulting lapse into a long, rolling stroke from side to side, showing the two foot dorsal filament, which waves and floats out behind, like some independent water creature.—Country Life In America.

The Knowledge That Pays.

If you glance round at the work of some of our big men you will be surprised to see how many have made their reputation by doing one small thing, but doing it well. If a man gets to the front in one narrow subject the world credits him with knowledge of all the rest. It is, however, even easier to acquire a large general knowledge than an advanced special knowledge of one narrow subject. The specialty must not be too narrow either. It is often said that the pursuit of knowledge has a nobility of its own. But what knowledge? No knowledge is worth obtaining for its own or any other sake unless it is or will probably be useful to man.—James Swinburne in Electrical Review.

Could Be Happy If We Wished.

If in a less fortunate time than ours, when the resources of mind and body were less varied and plentiful than they are now, men and women took delight in life, warmed both hands at its fire and filled their hearts with joy and gladness, may we not conclude that they were happy simply because they lived, as we might, in the right way, and put to their right uses that which was provided for them?—Christian Register.

There exists among India's educated classes a mad desire for professional vocations. Take a walk in certain streets in India, and you will observe a perfect panorama of signboard depicting professional callings, and the business houses are principally conspicuous by their absence.—Times of India.

Time to Begin.

Are you doing as much to brighten this world as a single sunbeam does? Are you scattering as much fragrance in the lives about you as is shed by one little violet? Do you refresh tired hearts as a drop of rain refreshes a drooping plant? If not, it is time to begin.—Detroit Free Press.

ANIMALS' WANDERINGS.

Country Mouse and Town Mouse Fable Has Foundation In Fact.

The fable of the country mouse and the town mouse has a foundation in fact. Mice occasionally migrate in large numbers when food grows scarce and travel considerable distances to fresh houses. Farmers in a part of Perthshire had a good reason to become aware of this fact when a couple of years ago vast swarms of mice invaded their cornfields at harvest time.

But the mouse only travels when it has to. The rat, on the contrary, seems to take a yearly outing, in very much the same fashion as do human beings. Rats are the most migratory creatures in the world. Troops of rats leave the towns at the end of summer and spend a month or two in the country, apparently in order to enjoy the change of food which the country affords at that time of the year in the way of fresh fruit and grain. Before the cold weather sets in they are all back again in their old quarters.

Reindeer migrate with the same regularity as swallows. They move south when winter sets in, but as soon as ever the snow begins to melt they travel steadily north, sometimes for as much as a thousand miles.

To end a holiday by deliberate suicide is so strange a phenomenon that for a long time naturalists looked upon the stories of the migration of the lemmings as an improbable fiction. Yet the facts are beyond dispute. At irregular intervals these ratlike creatures start out from their homes in the fastnesses of northern Scandinavia in huge droves numbering tens of thousands and travel steadily southward. Death pursues them in a hundred forms. Hawks and other birds of prey hover above them. Thousands are drowned in rivers. Yet the rest struggle on until they reach the sea. They do not stop. They plunge in, swim out and struggle on until at last their strength fails and they drown. Not one ever returns from this journey of death.—London Answers.

COTTON IN A FABRIC.

How to Tell If Worsted or Woolen Cloths Are Adulterated.

Worsted cloths are less often adulterated than woolens and are more easily detected. A cotton worsted is a lie on the face of it, for the cotton stands out with prominence. But often a cotton thread is twisted with a worsted thread, and to determine its presence it is only necessary to take the twist out of the thread and then examine its component parts.

Cotton, having a long staple, can be carded and combed with wool to be spun into worsted yarn. This is done to cheapen the cost of production. Cotton is carded and spun with wool and shoddy, not so much to cheapen the yarn, for cotton is generally as expensive as some shoddies, but is introduced to give strength or spinning qualities to the stock. In many cases the shoddy is of such short staple that it would not stand the drawing in spinning, and, as it would make the cost of the yarn too high to put in enough wool to give that lacking strength, cotton is put in for this purpose.

The percentage of cotton in a fabric can be determined in this manner: Take a small piece of cloth and weigh it. Now boil it for five minutes in a 5 per cent solution of caustic soda. Take out what is left, and, if any, it is all cotton. The wool will all be dissolved. The percentage of shoddy cannot be determined except by experience.

A cloth or yarn with shoddy in it is easily detected by its feel. Cloth made of all new wool is softer feeling than one containing shoddy, for the latter has lost that new, soft, springy feel peculiar to wool.—American Wool and Cotton Reporter.

Success Prolongs Life.

It is now well known that increased complexity of life with increased expenditure distinctly aids longevity. Luxury, "the fertile parent of a whole family of diseases," modifies it greatly, of course, but this is a manageable factor, says the London Chronicle. We have only to recall personal experience to realize the force of intellectual stimulation. The interest of sport will sustain men without fatigue for distances they otherwise could not traverse. The excitement of strife will often mask the presence of wounds. Self forgetfulness in all the walks of life, under the stress of love, chivalry or accepted duty, doubles human endurance. Success gives new vitality, new powers, and this is another name for new life.

No Notion of Real Trouble.

"I bet I get into more trouble than any man in this state," volunteered the young fellow who had come in the clubhouse. "Nothing in the trouble line overlooks me. Why, I'd be afraid to marry"—

"What! Ain't you married?" ejaculated the red nosed elderly party who was hovering over the gratis lunch. "Boy, you don't know what trouble is."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Charity.

She—I'm glad we went. It was an excellent performance—and for such a charitable purpose. Her Husband—Yes, indeed! We all feel a thrill of satisfaction when we do something for charity and get the worth of our money at the same time.—London Tit-Bits.

Intended.

Bills—You made a funny break in congratulating the bride's father instead of the groom. Wills—No, I didn't. I've a daughter, too, and I know what they cost.—Chicago Journal.

Just as you are pleased at finding faults you are displeased at finding perfection.—Lavater.

HUTTON'S ONE RECIPE.

It Included a Paper Cutter, Ink Eraser and Rubber Bands.

Perhaps the most ingenious and the most original of all schemes for procuring autographs was from a lady in a western town. She was raising funds for the building and support of a public library, and she had conceived the idea of issuing a volume to be called "The Authors' Recipe Book." Authors from all over the country, the most distinguished of authors—always authors with a capital A—had been good enough to send her a list of the favorite dishes of their own construction, with their method of making them.

The cookbook was one of the many forms of literature to which the recipient had never turned his attention. He had no more idea of cooking than he had of milking a cow or of harnessing a horse or of setting a hen or of building a dynamo. He did not even care what was cooked for him so long as it contained none of the ingredients of tripe and none of the essence of tomato. But he was asked to contribute a paper, which she would have reproduced in facsimile, stating what he could prepare most to his liking upon a kitchen range or in a chafing dish, with his manner of procedure. This quite nonplused him until he bethought himself of one particular and peculiar delicacy in the evolution of which he could safely trust his reputation as an expert. In reply, for which he received no thanks, he said:

"Take a long paper cutter; attach to the same by means of rubber bands, and securely, an ink eraser; insert the ink eraser firmly into a marshmallow plug and hold the same over a student's lamp or study fire until the marshmallow begins to sizz, drops into the ashes, puts out the light or burns your hand. And eat while hot!"

He has never seen a copy of "The Authors' Recipe Book!"—Laurence Hutton in Critic.

BULGING GUN BARRELS.

The Ruin That Is Wrought by Careless Handling.

I have sold guns for ten years, and in that time four of them have had their barrels bulged, one by snow, one by dirt, one by sand and one by something else getting into it. One man crawling through a fence got a little snow in the muzzle. He could not remove it with his finger, so concluded to wait and shoot it out, which he did, but he found a bulge like a pullet's egg on the end of the barrel. Another got some earth in the muzzle and shot it out, and he, too, found the same kind of a bulge on the end of his gun. Another fired his gun at ducks, which knocked him over on his back and fairly got away from him. When he picked up the gun he found a narrow raised band around the barrel fourteen inches from the muzzle. In this case a wad had probably lodged there. This customer thinks the manufacturers ought to give him a new set of barrels. I tell him if the barrels had not been good ones it would have been a burst instead of a bulge, which might have maimed or killed him. Another man lying on a point brought down a duck with a broken wing which scurried for the water. The man ran and struck the duck with the muzzle of the gun and in so doing got sand in it. He blew most of it out and shot out the rest of it. Well, after that shot he found a little blister two inches from the muzzle about the size of a man's little finger.

Moral.—Do not shoot obstructions of any kind out of your gun if you value your life or gun.—Uncle Dan in Amateur Sportsman.

Something Wanted.

A bachelor, old and cranky, was sitting alone in his room. His toes with the gout were aching, and his face was o'erspread with gloom, no little ones' shouts to disturb him—from noises the house was free. In fact, from cellar to attic 'twas as still as still could be. No medical aid was lacking; his servants answered his ring, respectfully answered his orders and supplied him with everything. But still there was something wanted, which he could not command—the kindly words of compassion, the touch of a gentle hand. And he said, as his brow grew darker and he rang for the hireling nurse, "Well, marriage may be a failure, but this is a jolly sight worse."

A Water Candlestick.

A glass of water makes a fine emergency candlestick. Weight one end of the candle with a nail just large enough to hold the candle in the water so that the water touches its top edge, but does not touch the wick, and then light the candle. It will burn until the last vestige of wick is gone and the flame will not flicker. The melted tallow that runs down but serves to hold the candle more stationary.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Two Views.

"A man's vote is too precious to be sold," said the patriot.

"Perhaps," answered Senator Sorghum, "although a number of people of my acquaintance regard it as too valuable to be given away."—Washington Star.

A Secret Society.

Carrie—I've got a dandy idea for a girls' secret society. Belle—A secret society! Do you think it would be practical? Carrie—Surely. We wouldn't keep secrets; we'd swap them.—Puck.

Beyond Reason.

There be two individuals who cannot be reasoned with—a girl in love and a man who is determined to run for an office.—New Orleans Picayune.

Love is never afraid of overwork.—Chicago Tribune.

Narum and Ole Ordegaard last Saturday evening at Singer's Hall was attented by the most promient people in the vicinity. and one of the most jubliant times was enjoyed, that was ever held in this community before. The party adjourned after the program was compleated and ended with a grand march on the main street of Gully at 8: 30 A. M. Their many friends extend their most heartful thanks to the managers of the social affair, for their kind compliments.

STEENERSON COMMUTATION BILL

Congressman Halvor Steenerson, has scored another triumph. His commutation bill has passed the house of representatives by the unanimous consent of the members present. This fact is a hand some recognition of the esteem in which he is held by his fellow members. It would appear that his sterling good sense and indefatiguable labors, is giving him a standing among the lawmakers at Washington It is probably beginning to come home to them that the man from the ninth district of Minnesota does not go after things unless he has something which his constituents need and then that he does not ask anything unfair or selfish,

This extension of the commutation privileges to the homesteaders who settled on the lands thrown open to settlement on the Red Lake and Chippewa Reservations since May, 1900, will remove a recognized hardship from the shoulders of thousands of thousands of homesteaders in this state. The bill will unquestionably pass the senate and become a law

This bill like all the work of the big Congressman from this district, has a definite end: the bette ment of the conditions for the people of his district. The records which Mr. Steenerson has made in congress is an enviable one. Every measure which he has championed has found favor with either congress or the departments. He is wise in his choice of subjects for legislation or regulation and is not guilty of freak bills or play to the gallery. His latest achievements will make him more popular then ever in the district.—Crookston Jousnal.

MR and MRS. SCHWANDT, Sanborn, Minn.
MR and MRS. JNO. O. ATKINSON, Independence, Mo.

Remarkable Cures Effected By Pe-ru-na.

Under date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife has been a sufferer from a complication of diseases for the past twenty-five years. Her case has baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing. She was also passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life.

"In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of twenty-five years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me."—John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. I am still cured of catarrh."—John O. Atkinson, Independence, Mo., Box 272.

Mrs. Alla Schwandt, Sanborn, Minn., writes:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and catarrh for twenty-five years. Could not sleep day or night. After having used Peruna I can sleep and nothing bothers me now. If I ever am affected with any kind of sickness, Peruna will be the medicine I shall use. My son was cured of catarrh of the larynx by Peruna."—Mrs. Alla Schwandt.

When old age comes, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

Conviction Follows Trial

When buying loose coffee or anything your grocer happens to have in his bin, how do you know what you are getting? Some queer stories about coffee that is sold in bulk, could be told, if the people who handle it (grocers), cared to speak out.

Could any amount of mere talk have persuaded millions of housekeepers to use

Lion Coffee,

the leader of all package coffees for over a quarter of a century, if they had not found it superior to all other brands in Purity, Strength, Flavor and Uniformity?

This popular success of LION COFFEE can be due only to inherent merit. There is no stronger proof of merit than continued and increasing popularity.

If the verdict of MILLIONS OF HOUSEKEEPERS does not convince you of the merits of LION COFFEE, it costs you but a trifle to buy a package. It is the easiest way to convince yourself, and to make you a PERMANENT PURCHASER.

LION COFFEE is sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages, and reaches you as pure and clean as when it left our factory.

SOUTHERN CONDITIONS AND POSSIBILITIES.

Hundreds of industries have been established and as a result there is an unprecedented demand for

Day Laborers, Skilled Workmen, and especially Farm Tenants.

Parties with small capital, seeking an opportunity to purchase a farm home; farmers who would prefer to rent for a couple of years before purchasing; and day laborers in fields or factories should address a postal card to Mr. J. F. Merry, Asst. General Passenger Agent, Dubuque, Iowa, who will promptly mail printed matter concerning the territory above described, and give specific replies to all inquiries.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Deppe, N. C., says: "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor ride in an easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors, and they have also found good results. MINNESOTA NEWS.

Wheat Reserve.

From private reports received by the Daily Market Record from correspondents throughout the Northwest, whose estimates during the past two years have proven very close, it would appear that some 23.2 per cent of last year's crop of North Dakota and 16.5 per cent of that of South Dakota was in farmers' hands on Feb. 1, last.

The reports cover a large portion of the wheat growing territory of the three states, but there are many sections from which no reports have been received up to date. Taking the government estimate of last year's wheat production as a basis to work on, and which report closely agrees with the published Market Record figures on last year's crop, the amount of wheat held by farmers Feb. 1, was:

Minnesota, 15,856,096 bushels; North Dakota, 7,451,034 bushels, South Dakota, 4,921,710 bushels. The amount of wheat out of farmers' hands and held in interior mills and private and country elevators, Feb. 1 was:

Minnesota, 4,045,550 bushels; North Dakota, 1,914,500 bushels, and South Dakota, 1,041,932 bushels, a total of 7,001,982 bushels.

A Busy Place.

The annual report of the Union Depot company, submitted to the ten St. Paul roads who are stockholders, by President A. W. Trenholm, shows that during the year just closed more business was done at a less cost than ever before.

Last year 1,054 locomotives and passenger cars went in and out of the depot yards each day, 385,756 during the entire year, as against 369,863 in 1903. The daily average of incoming and outgoing trains for last year is 527.

The net decrease in operating expenses during the past year is estimated at about $16,000. This was due in a large measure to the decreased cost of the maintenance of way and structures.

Railway Extension.

Word is received from a reliable source that A. Guthrie & company of St. Paul, railroad contractors, were awarded a contract for extending the Minnesota & International road to the Big Fork river, a distance of thirty miles this season.

The work will be pushed forward rapidly and preparations are being made by the contractors to get men, teams and tools on the ground.

Northome is the present northern terminus of the road, and International Falls or Koochiching, as it is better known, on Rainy river, is the ultimate destination.

More Seed Trains.

Three more good seed trains will be run through the northwest shortly, one by the Soo, one by the Minneapolis & St. Louis, the other by the Omaha road. The Soo train will leave Wishek, March 7. The others will start from Minneapolis. The agitation for good seed has spread even beyond the hopes of the men who started it. The railroads are giving men and material to the cause and it is now certain that in the next thirty days the gospel of good seed will be preached to the farmers of the northwest as never before.

Flax Binding Twine.

The International Harvester company is contracting with a number of farmers in southeastern Minnesota to grow flax the coming year and sell it to them to be made into flax twine for binding purposes, samples of which have been shown to the farmers. This twine, it is represented, can be secured about one-half a cent a pound cheaper than the prison-made sisal twine. It is claimed that the flax secured there is better than that grown further north in that it is more even in length.

Poor Milk.

The state dairy and food department announced the result of the examination of milk and cream samples taken from dairies and stores supplying milk in the twin cities. Out of thirty-six samples tested for the week ending Feb. 13, ten were found illegal.

In two cases, rich, thick cream was found in fact to be below the legal limit of 20 per cent of butter fats and thickened with gelatine.

This is the first of a series of bulletins and most of the samples were taken in St. Paul.

ALL SICK WOMEN

SHOULD READ MRS. FOX'S LETTER

In All Parts of the United States Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Effected Similar Cures.

Many wonderful cures of female ills are continually coming to light which have been brought about by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and through the advice of Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., which is given to sick women absolutely free of charge.

Mrs. Fannie D. Fox

Mrs. Pinkham has for many years made a study of the ills of her sex; she has consulted with and advised thousands of suffering women, who to-day owe not only their health but even life to her helpful advice.

Mrs. Fannie D. Fox, of 7 Chestnut Street, Bradford, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I suffered for a long time with womb trouble, and finally was told by my physician that I had a tumor on the womb. I did not want to submit to an operation, so wrote you for advice. I received your letter and did as you told me, and to-day I am completely cured. My doctor says the tumor has disappeared, and I am once more a well woman. I believe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women."

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women establish beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She asks nothing in return for her advice. It is absolutely free, and to thousands of women has proved to be more precious than gold.

PRESIDENT BEGINS HIS SECOND TERM

ROOSEVELT TAKES OATH BEFORE IMMENSE AUDIENCE.

SOLEMNITY MARKS EVENT.

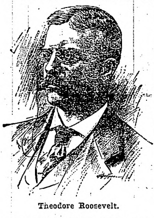
Multitude Awed as Chief Executive Repeats Binding Words—Twenty-One Guns Boom Salute—Fairbanks Is Inducted.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and, to the best of my ability, protect, preserve and defend the constitution of the United States." With these words Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States for the past three years, was Saturday inaugurated for another term to the highest office which it is the privilege of an American citizen to attain.

Chief Justice Fuller, with all the solemnity of the three other occasions of like character in which he has figured during his career, administered the oath to the president. This was the fourth and last instance in which the chief justice is to be the second figure of importance. Hardly had the president finished his inaugural address and disappeared within the capitol building than the hush which had fallen upon the spectators when he raised his hand preparatory to taking the oath was broken by the deafening roar of 21 guns in official salute to the executive, just entering upon his second term as president.

Interest at Its Height.

During the hours intervening between the gathering of the crowd and the ceremony there was no letting down of the tension of interest. The passing of a uniformed horseman was sufficient to call forth cheers, although in some sections the multitude showed signs of restlessness. This was true particularly on the outskirts of the throng where, pressed by constantly arriving recruits, many struggled to get nearer to the point of interest. The effect upon the densely packed multitude was a continuous surging backward and forward—a turbulent sea of humanity.



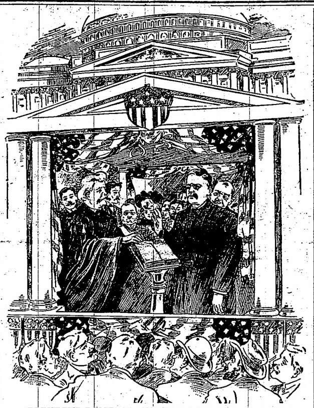
Theodore Roosevelt.

The rendezvousing of the troops, committees and civic societies entertained the crowd throughout the long wait incident to the schedule. The various organizations arriving by different routes passed into the narrow defiles which the police kept open, the brilliant uniforms of the troops, the bright sashes of the committees and the rich caparisoning of the horses lending themselves to a kaleidoscopic, panoramic effect. Cheers upon cheers greeted the constantly shifting picture.

Notables Begin to Arrive.

Shortly after noon, just following the induction into office of Vice President Fairbanks, the monster stand, decorated with plants, flowers, flags and bunting, began to fill with the people who had just finished witnessing the ceremonies in the senate chamber, and scarcely a half hour passed before this coign of vantage was filled to overflowing. Added to the color afforded by the plants and bunting were the brilliant costumes of the women, and these put on a touch of variety which rivaled the occasion of four years ago. Every ledge about the capitol and the windows were filled to the point of overflowing with their human burdens, and long before the official party appeared the streets were jammed as far as the eye could reach.

Several minutes before one o'clock an extra loud burst of cheers from the multitude just in front of the main capitol door called the attention from the brilliant parade of uniforms in the street to the official party, which had just come through the main door. "The president, there he is," and similar cries came from the assembled populace, but the nation's chief was not to come for some moments.



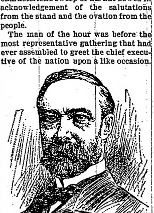
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TAKING THE OATH OF OFFICE.

A hush was noticeable in the crowd. The official entrance was dramatic. All except those who were participating in the ceremony were seated. When the justices of the supreme court, with the exception of Chief Justice Fuller, emerged from between the Corinthian pillars and marched down the sloping carpeted aisle to their station they were greeted with applause. The justices wore their robes and skull-caps. Then came the members of the diplomatic corps, in their gorgeous uniforms, and they evoked thunderous applause. Led by Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador and dean of the corps, and followed by the others in order of precedence, they took seats on the right of the stand. Strolling in after them came members of the cabinet, senators and representatives in congress.

Hush as President Comes.

Following on the heels of the official party came Mrs. Roosevelt and a party of friends; then, but a moment later, the new vice president, Mr. Fairbanks, and his escort arrived and were greeted by tremendous bursts of applause. As soon as Vice President Fairbanks seated himself the cheers ceased, the military presented arms, every hat in the committees came off and the great ocean of people set up a perfect roar of cheers, fairly shouting itself hoarse.

Quick as a flash every sound was stilled and President Roosevelt, quiet and composed of demeanor, came from between the gigantic pillars, escorted by Chief Justice Fuller. A random burst of cheers came from the front of the crowd as with measured tread, in harmony with the dignified step of the chief justice, the president advanced in state down the long aisle of distinguished guests. By this time all were standing and nothing could be heard above the roar of thunderous welcome. Immediately following came, arm in arm, the members of the committee on arrangements. As the president passed down the aisle he bared his head and with characteristic sweep of his hat bowed in acknowledgement of the salutations from the stand and the ovation from the people.



Charles W. Fairbanks.

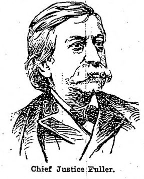
The man of the hour was before the most representative gathering that had ever assembled to greet the chief executive of the nation upon a like occasion. President Roosevelt's manner was not that of a man upon whose head fell the great responsibilities of a nation's care. Three years of experience as chief executive had changed this man as much as did Lincoln's liberation of the black man change that great statesman. While he waited for the applause to die out he stood in triumph, with no show of vanity, with no evidences of political enmity, apparently no memories of the campaign gone by, and nothing more disconcerting than a huge gathering of loyal Americans.

Oath Is Administered.

Chief Justice Fuller stepped to the front of the pavilion constructed especially for the use of the president during the ceremonies, and his clerk came forward bearing a Bible. A hush, followed by absolute silence, fell over the crowd, which but a moment before was cheering itself hoarse. President Roosevelt raised his right hand and took the oath which binds him in supporting the laws and constitution of the United States, with great reverence and amid deep silence. So great was the awe of the assembled multitude that not the semblance of a demonstration followed. Then the president began his inaugural address, and as soon as he had finished and disappeared within the capitol the signal was flashed to the navy yard and the salute of 21 guns told the end of the ceremonies and the initial step of the president's entrance into his second term of office.

Fairbanks Is Inaugurated.

Second only in importance to the inauguration of the president, on the calendar of events for the day, was the induction of Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, into the office of the vice president of the United States in the senate chamber. The ceremony was brief and simple to the extent of being severe. Immediately following the address and oath of Vice President Fairbanks came the final adjournment of the Fifty-eighth congress and the beginning of the special session.



Chief Justice Fuller.

"Solemn and yet brief" is the way the taking of the oath impressed the spectators. It consisted of a promise, made with uplifted hand and bowed head, to perform the duties of the office and to support and defend the constitution of the United States. This was the oath of office, and it was administered by Senator Frye as president pro tempore of the senate. The two officials stood confronting each other on the elevated platform on which rests the desk of the preceding officer of the senate, practically on the same spot on which all the incoming vice presidents for the past 50 years have stood.

Regarding the notables who were present at the ceremony in the senate, practically the same personages were seen at this event as were present about an hour later at the inauguration of the president. Every niche and cranny in the gallery was filled with people. That section which is generally used privately by the senators was turned over to the executive party and directly opposite that quarter newspaper men were busily engaged portraying the scenes about them. Outside of these two quarters of the gallery persons holding special tickets were seated.

Shortly before 12 the special guests began to arrive. The president was seated in a big red leather chair immediately in front of the desk of the presiding officer and was an interesting spectator of the ceremony in which he himself had participated four years ago. The induction ceremony did not consume more than two minutes of time and was administered by Mr. Frye, presiding officer of the senate.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

DESIRE SHOWN TO HAVE RAILWAY COMMISSION NAMED BY GOVERNOR.

MEMBERS WORKING HARD.

The Revised Code with a Wold of Amendments is Finally Reported to the House,

St. Paul, March 2, 1905.—One of the most remarkable pieces of patchwork legislation ever known will be the new Minnesota code after it shall have passed the legislature and become law. For six weeks past the judiciary committees of the two houses have been struggling with the revision, as it was turned over by the commission which had been appointed to revise the state laws. In those six weeks approximately 1,500 amendments have been adopted in committee to the work as reported by the commission. Hardly a chapter has escaped the pruning knife. Some chapters have been amended as many as 100 times. It can be judged from this that the present legislature is undeserving of the censure which has been heaped upon it by those who seem to believe that but little has been accomplished. As a matter of fact few legislatures in the same limited time have been known to do as much. But now that the code is ready for submission to the house there is bound to be more or less difficulty in arranging a method for its disposal there. Some favor making it a special order for each afternoon, to be considered chapter by chapter, but this would necessarily prove slow and cumbersome, with a chance of such delay that the entire code could be defeated by interested parties, and it has been suggested by those who favor expedition that the house adopt it as it comes from the judiciary committee and then arrange with the senate for the appointment of a conference committee, upon whose judgment the members of both houses could rely.

Gov. Johnson has sent the following appointments to the senate for confirmation: Boiler inspectors, John D. Lowe, St. Louis county; H. E. Zimmerman, Norman county. Member state forestry board, Lee W. Ha[illegible]

Taxes and Tax Laws.

Two very important measures have been recommended favorably by the house committee on taxes and tax laws. One is by Representative Thayer and is known as a "tax ferret bill." It is practically a duplicate of the Iowa law and authorizes county commissioners to employ tax experts to uncover property which has escaped the assessor, receiving therefor 20 per cent as reward for his services. Mr. Thayer submitted evidence to show that the law in Iowa had resulted in placing $2,000,000 additional property on the tax lists.

The second bill was that introduced by Representative Stone, which provides for an inheritance tax on all estates exceeding $5,000 in value. State Auditor Iverson appeared before the committee to urge the [illegible] of this measure. Two years ago a similar bill passed the house, only to meet defeat in the senate.

Senator Sundberg proposes a constitutional amendment permitting a state system of hail insurance, and has introduced a bill in accordance with that idea. The bill authorizes the state auditor to levy an average tax when proper application has been made by the owner of the crop which it is sought to insure.

An appropriation of $40,000 for the purpose of providing a state display at the Lewis and Clark exposition to be held at Portland, Ore., this year, has been offered in the house by Mr. DeLaittre. No more than $10,000 of the amount is to be paid out in salaries or wages. A commission of three to be appointed by the governor, is to direct the expenditure.

Senator Torson has introduced a bill appropriating $200,000 for the purpose of erecting a stock amphitheater at the state fair grounds. This measure is fathered by the state fair officials.

Railway Commission.

Representative Rachie wants to legislate the present railway and warehouse commission out of office and, incidentally, restore the old system of having a board appointed by the governor. No more than two of the three commissioners are to come from the ranks of any one political party. In arguing for his bill Mr. Rachie contends that it is best to have a commission so constituted that the responsibility for its actions can be located without trouble.

Two bills introduced by Senator Brower, both relating to local conditions in the city of St. Cloud, have been enacted into law under suspension of the rules in both houses and now await the signature of the governor. One authorizes cities owning waterworks to borrow money on the property for purposes of extensions, and the other allows cities of 10,000 inhabitants or less to issue bonds for the purpose of funding present indebtedness.

The house has passed the Dorsey bill creating a state embalming board, another by Bennett, regulating the sale and compounding of cocaine, and several others of minor importance.

The ware committee to investigate insurance rates, has held two meetings thus far and has heard what the insurance men have to offer on that subject. The latter naturally contend that the present rate in Minnesota is none too high, and a point made by them in the hearing was that the higher the rate charged the more chary the companies are of taking the risks.

An interesting contest is under way between members of the Minnesota National Guard and the judiciary committee of the house. The latter committee by a majority of one vote, refused to retain the present law relating to the state guard in preference to the law reported by the code revision commission. The military committee of the house sides with the soldier boys and the latter are preparing to fight the matter every step of the way. It is claimed that the present Minnesota law is considered a model by other states.

By the adoption of a resolution fathered by Representative Joseph Mannix, of Hennepin, the state capitol commissioners have been instructed to keep the new capitol building open to the general public on Sunday afternoons.

Senator Cook has introduced a bill which declares telephone and telegraph companies to be common carriers and places them under control of the state railway and warehouse commission. Under the bill the commission is authorized to designate what hours telegraph offices and telephone exchanges shall be kept open, and may compel connections between competing companies if deemed advisable.

The house by nearly unanimous vote defeated the Wallace bill, which is a companion to the one introduced in the senate by Senator E. E. Smith, the provisions of which made it possible for corporations and persons to pay taxes under protest prior to beginning action to test validity of the same.

Code Reported.

St. Paul, March 6.—Thursday last, after hard work on the part of the judiciary committee, the amended code was reported in and its 1,500 amendments were immediately adopted by the house and the code itself made a special order for this morning, at 10 o'clock. Such harmonious action on the part of such a large body as the house is remarkable, and was only made possible by representations on the part of the leaders that to consider the amendments one by one in committee of the whole would lead to interminable discussion and confusion. It is impossible to predict what the next step will be. The speaker and his friends have a well defined plan which they are trying to have adopted. They want the house to pass the code without further discussion and pass it on to the senate, thus throwing upon the shoulders of the senators the work of revising the labors of the house judiciary committee. Of course it is expected that many amendments will be added by the senate, but these can be easily disposed of afterwards by means of committees on conference. This line of procedure would be the most rapid, if not the most thorough. As a check for possible mistakes, it is proposed by some that the new code does not take effect until some time after the first of January, 1907, thus giving everybody interested an opportunity to examine and criticise, and permitting the next legislature to make such further amendments as may be found necessary. Some idea of the magnitude of this one work of the present legislature can be obtained from knowledge of the fact that the estimated cost of enrolling and engrossing the bill would alone cost the state over $27,000. By a few simple amendments the laws relating to special charters of cities have been restored, thus adding fully 300 pages to the work as it came from the revision commission. Members of the judiciary committee claim that the code today has been shorn of every valid objection which has been urged against it by its critics, and so far as possible the existing law has been restored where the commission had attempted to insert new legislation.

Insurance Matters.

Two bills have been introduced in the house having for their object the control of insurance by board methods. One by W. H. Putnam provides that upon complaint of two persons the insurance commissioner may take testimony, and if it is proved that the companies complained of are in any compact he may revoke the license of the offending company. The other bill was introduced by Representative Thompson, of Rice county, and requires insurance companies to file by May 1, of each year, affidavits that they have not entered into compacts during the year. It is made illegal for one person to make rates or to buy a rate book. A false statement is punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1,000 or jail imprisonment.

Senator Morgan is the author of a bill which would compel sleeping car companies to pay a gross earnings tax in manner similar to the method applied now to railways. He would tax interstate business by ascertaining what proportion of mileage of the company was in Minnesota, as compared with its total in the United States, and taxing it in that ratio.

Among recent bills passed by the house are: By Mr. Adams, to regulate the size of lumber; by Mr. Johnson, requiring railroads to bulletin the time of arrival and departure of trains; by Mr. Gandrud, requiring railway companies to report to the railway and warehouse commission all wrecks in which fatalities occur; by Senator Pugh, establishing a naval reserve.

The senate took an important step when it passed the Laybourn bill, which puts into effect the constitutional amendment adopted at the last election, abolishing the grand jury. The bill was amended to provide that grand juries can be called by the judge when he deems it necessary, or by petition of 100 voters of the county.

The present legislature is evidently in earnest in its intention to establish a [illegible] but there are so many different ideas upon the subject entertained by the members that it is not easy to draft a measure which will meet with enough approval to secure its adoption. The house committee has considered the bills before it, however, and after thorough discussion has appointed a subcommittee which will report a bill that it is hoped will pass. The understanding is that the board of control is to choose the site and manage the institution absolutely. This will prevent the participation of representatives of women's organizations in the management, something which they have been striving for.

A hard blow at the bucketshop business would be dealt if the bill introduced by Representative Erickson, and recommended for passage by the house committee on general legislation, should receive the approval of the two houses. Under the bill bucketshops are made illegal, but chambers of commerce are allowed to continue business.

Taxes.

The expected bill providing for a constitutional amendment permitting "wide open" tax legislation, has been introduced in the senate by Senator Lord. The bill is brief and provides that taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and allows the legislature to enact general or special laws authorizing municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements, or upon the property to be benefited by such improvements, or both, without regard to cash valuation. Public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property used for religious purposes, houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for public purposes, are to be exempt from taxation by general law. A similar bill passed the house two years ago and was defeated in the senate. The opposition to the bill is based upon the contention that it confers too great power upon the legislature. On the other hand it is freely granted that no uniform and equitable system of taxation will be possible in the state without some such legislation.

The state highway commission bill, prepared some time ago by civil engineers and surveyors of the state, has been introduced in the senate by Mr. Cooke.

The house is anxious to go into the trust-busting business, and adopted unanimously a resolution offered by Representative Telgen which provides for the appointment of a committee to confer with the state board of control and Warden Wolfer regarding the feasibility of establishing a factory for the making of farm implements at the state prison. The same resolution in the senate was met by notice of debate and went over.

Freight Rates.

Granite manufacturers and quarrymen of St. Cloud appeared before the rate investigation committee Thursday and filed complaints alleging freight rate discrimination and exorbitant charges on the part of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways. A specimen of discrimination claimed was that the rate on rough stone from Sandstone to Duluth, 63 miles, was 2¼ cents, while from St. Cloud to Minneapolis, 65 miles, it was 3¼ cents. It was shown that stone shipped from Vermont was shipped into Wisconsin towns at no greater freight charge than that made to the same points from St. Cloud, though three or four times the distance. Agent Randall, of the state reformatory, stated that the state was charged $12 per car switching charges at St. Cloud by the Great Northern. At the same hearing George S. Loftus appeared to substantiate the charge that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific charge proportionately a much higher rate to small non-competitive towns than does the Soo, at points of relatively the same distance.

The house railroad committee has finally given a favorable recommendation to the W. A. Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill. An amendment was adopted which would prevent manipulation on the part of the shippers.

Senator Stone's bill compelling railways to sell mileage books at 2 cents a mile and making them transferable, has been recommended to pass by the railroad committee.

One cent a ton per mile will be the maximum freight charge for grain in carload lots if the legislature passes the bill introduced by Representative Ware.

RUSSIAN ARMY FACING CRISIS.

FATE OF GEN. KUROPATKIN'S ARMY IS NOW HANGING IN A BALENCE.

Russian Retirement to Tie Pass is Now Thought to be Absolutely Necessary.

Tokio, March 6. — Field Marshal Oyama is continuing his great drives around both flanks of the Russian army. His front is now a huge bow, the base on the Shakhe river, the right arm reaching a point east of Fusham, and the left arm extending to a point west of Mukden. He is steadily tightening the great cord of men and steel.

Gen. Kuropatkin is striving desperately to check the Japanese advances, contesting the flank encroachments and hammering the Japanese center.

The Japanese are making heavy gains of ground west of the railway and have captured great quantities of stores and other spoils. There has already been captured a great quantity of stores and this will be vastly increased when the masses of infantry meet.

St. Petersburg, March. 6.—The fate of Gen. Kuropatkin and his army hangs in the balance today, depending on the result of the fighting almost in the outskirts of Mukden.

According to the latest reports this morning the fighting went well for the Russians, who beat back the wave that threatened to roll over Mukden as it had over the fortifications of Port Arthur, but nothing is known as to what is going on beyond the line of breakers, whether part of Gen. Nogi's force is in full march to Tie Pass or whether the Japanese have staked all in a cast against Mukden.

Tokio, March 6.—The Russian army driven from Chin Hocheng, passed Talien and have remained at Samiungku four days resisting the Japanese advance. The Russians there, although having received a reinforcement of over 50,000, show signs of retreat. The Japanese are pressing them to[illegible]

SWALLOWS EVIDENCE.

New York Pool Room Keeper Nearly Chokes to Death Swallowing Racing Card.

New York, March 6.—In his anxiety to swallow illeged incriminating evidence during a raid in Brooklyn, Hugh Winters, the reputed proprietor of a pool room, nearly choked to death.

His life was saved by prompt action of an ambulance surgeon. When the obstruction was removed from Winter's throath with the aid of instruments it was found to be part of a racing sheet.

Winters and ten other men found in the place were arrested, but released on bail. The alleged pool room was in the rear of a saloon. When the raiders broke in about fifty men broke in through doors and windows before they could be halted.

Winters was found in a corner of the room coughing and choking and in convulsions. In his hand he held part of a torn racing card. He was purple in the face and frothing at the mouth. An amblance was quickly summoned, with the result noted.

The scrap removed from the prisoner's throat was carefully preserved as evidence by the police.

DOCK COLLAPSES.

Workmen Repairing a Dock at Duluth are Suddenly Thrown to the Ice Below.

Duluth, Minn., March 6.— James Moran of Superior was killed and three Duluth men sustained injuries of a minor character Saturday in the collapsing of a section of an extension to the Duluth, Missabe & Northern ore dock at Duluth, which is in course of construction. The weight of a derrick and engine operating it was too much for the portion of the work upon which it rested.

The rebuilding of the dock is in progress and the work of tearing down a portion of it is going on. Upon the top of one of the bents was the derrick operated by an engine and crew of four men. The lateral braces of the adjoining bent were being removed, and their withdrawal took away the support given to the bent upon which the derrick was stationed, and it collapsed, precipitating the engine and crew to the ice, fully fifty-eight feet below.

Collided.

Paterson, N. J., March 6.—An Erie railroad train and a trolly car collided in this city. It is reported that a number of persons were killed.

Farmers, whatever you do, take no chances with your seed wheat. For that matter take no chances with any seed stock you plant. The best is none too good. Never jeopardize any of your crops by planting poor seed. The Creator can do much for you, but he will never prospor a farmer who will throw a lot of poor seed into the ground and then expect Nature to square the deal.

When a petition is handed to you to sign it is a mighty good thing to stop and read it before putting your name down. Besides men as a rule, are too busy now adays to stop for a little thing like that. The other day a man went through a big office building in Chicago, on a wager, and secured twenty names to a petition asking the public executioner to hang every one of the signers.

Speaker Clague is doing a great service when he forbids lobbyists the privilege of the floor. Some prominent St. Paul railroad lawyers, it is said, have had to be content to send in for their victims. Thanks to Mr. Clague, the lawyer lobbyist and corporation agent and the grafter are not permitted to ply their vocation of corruption on the floor of the house. The people are watching this legislature as they have never watched one before.

It is being hinted in some quarters that Red Lake county may get a bran new court house for nothing before the county seat question is settled.—St Hilaire Spectator.

The settlers on the new reservation lands can be reached better by some practical good road work, than by court house and jail promises, as both cities seem to have a suitable building for a Court house, while a bridge or two across the Clearwater river, would touch the reservation voter heart in about the right spot.

The bill passed by Congressman Halvor Steenerson, allowing the settlers that took land on the Red Lake and Chippewa reservations since May 1900, is a just law and, now there should be added to that law another clause allowing the settlers that settled on Sec. 16 & 36, the so called School Sections, to be free homes after a residence of five years, the same as their neighbor who settled on Sec. 15 and 35. The passage of the present bill will firmly convince the residents of the of the ninth district, that Congressman Steenerson is alive in their interests and they should see to it that he is kept in his presant position.

TARIFF TINKERING.

Experience Proves Emphatically It Does Not Pay.

It is especially illogical to attribute the present condition of the cotton manufacturing industry to the tariff when every manufacturer and textile worker knows that under the present tariff system the textile industries of the United States have enjoyed a long extended period of unrivaled prosperity.

The cotton industry is suffering from conditions which are in nowise connected with the tariff. The mills of Lancashire, England, are suffering in the same way, proof enough that the tariff has nothing whatever to do with the matter.

The scarcity and consequently high price of raw cotton is said to be the cause of the general curtailment in cotton manufacturing.

Such conditions cannot be legislated away. They can only be removed by the increasing of the cotton acreage and the growing of larger crops.

This is the opinion of men who have made a study of the matter, and no amount of sophistry by little politicians can affect the opinions of those who are familiar with the situation.

If things are bad just as present, how much worse would they be did the manufacturers have to combat not only high prices in raw material, but foreign cheap labor competition as well. The well remembered experience of Lawrence and other textile centers under the Wilson-Gorman tariff from 1893 to 1897 is not so remote that its lessons have been forgotten by even the most thoughtless.

Emphatically tariff tinkering does not pay.—Lawrence (Mass.) Telegram.

A Dream With a Moral.

A rich lady dreamed that she went to heaven and there saw a mansion being built. "Whom is that for?" she asked of the guide.

"For your gardener."

"But he lives in the tiniest cottage on earth, with barely room for his family. He might live better if he did not give away so much to the miserably poor folks."

Farther on she saw a tiny cottage being built. "And whom is that for?" she asked.

"That is for you."

"But I have lived in a mansion on earth. I would not know how to live in a cottage."

The words she heard in reply were full of meaning. "The Master Builder is doing his best with the material that is being sent up."

Then she awoke, resolving to lay up treasure in heaven.—Chicago Post.

The Englishman's Morning Tub.

Until the beginning of the seventeenth century English princes and other babes were immersed three times in the font when christened. The last Prince of Wales who was submitted to this ordeal appears to have been Arthur, the son of Henry II., who died in 1502 at the age of sixteen. The abolition of the practice was strongly objected to upon sanitary grounds by Sir John Floyer, a celebrated physician, who died in 1734. "Immersion," he says, "would prevent many hereditary diseases," and "the English will return to it when physic has given them a clear proof that cold baths are both safe and useful." So our morning tub is the outcome of royal immersion.—London Mail.

Freshness of Youth.

He was a respectable looking man, and, judging from his appearance, he was a butcher by trade, and this belief was verified a few minutes later. He carried a white apron under his arm, and as he entered a car a huge cleaver dropped from the bundle to the floor. A youth who had not reached the age of discretion sank out merrily, "Say, mister, you dropped your pocketknife." The passengers laughed, but they could not help but think that the youth took a long chance on kidding a man with a cleaver.—Albany Journal.

Lovely Liverpool Lasses.

Can you or your readers give any explanation of the remarkably heavy percentage of splendidly handsome ladies to be seen in Liverpool's city thoroughfares? When I say handsome, I refer not only to facial beauty, but also to symmetry of form and perfect physique. Walk from the Central station via Lord street to, say, the Landing stage, any day in the week, and you will behold a phalanx of superb womanhood. I am a Manchester man by birth and sentiment, but I must confess our city can produce nothing to compare with Liverpool's battalions of tall, lovely girls.—St. James' Gazette.

DESERT SHEEP HERDERS.

Their Lonely, Dreary Life Tends to Drive Them Crazy.

Do you realize what it means to watch 5,000 sheep alone in the desert? You have read weird, gruesome stories of the horror of the solitary lighthouse keeper's life, but compared to the days of the Mexican shepherd those of the average keeper of the light are filled with gayety and noise. Even with their one or two dogs the shepherds often go insane, and were it not for the company of their shaggy collies the lunacy among them would rise to an almost incredible percentage, if we are to believe those who have followed the sheep in the desert and therefore may be supposed to know.

Once in old Santa Fe, N. M., I met a man who for twelve years had followed the sheep. His work was done. All day long he sat in a chair in the rear of a little dobe store, crouched over, gibbering to himself, bleating—an idiot. He still saw his sheep swaying like a great white wave among the sagebrush, and ever in his ears sounded the killing monotone of their bleats. One boy, though fifteen years of age, is mentally no further advanced than the average child of five. His father is a shepherd, his mother died when he was four years old, and his father took him out upon the range. All his life has been spent among the sheep. He is one with them today.

How is it possible, then, you ask, that men are to be found willing to watch them? It is very easy. Sheep herding is a lazy job at best, and the "greaser" is the laziest creature on earth. For $20 a month he is willing to sit in the sand and listen to the never ending bleating until the little mind he has gives way and they fetch him in from the range insane. He is glad to take the chance for $20 a month.

The greaser is not the only shepherd in the west. On the vast ranges of Nevada and Wyoming you may run across an occasional college man tending the sheep. Once, indeed, a college professor, ill of consumption, undertook to follow 5,000 bleaters for the summer. In autumn they found him insane, on his hands and knees among the sheep, bleating with them. Day after day his eyes behold only a brilliant turquoise sky, in which hangs a sun of brass; an ocean sweep of sage flecked sand and a slowly moving, compact mass of sheep. His ears hear no sound save the steady "Baa, baa!" day and night, affecting him as the Chinese criminal of ancient days was affected by the regular tap, tap of a hidden drum.

And yet so long as the desert continues to provide food for the "bleaters" so long will shepherds go mad among the flocks, and for ten years the desert's greatest value to man has been the food it has offered the sheep, nor yet is the store depleted.—Pilgrim.

The Wickedness of Growing Old.

Here are the three deadly symptoms of old age: Selfishness, stagnation, intolerance.

If we find them in ourselves we may know we are growing old, even if we are on the merry side of thirty. But, happily, we have three defenses, which are invulnerable. If we use them we shall die young if we live to be a hundred. They are: Sympathy progress, tolerance.

The first is the hardest to most of us, because our own little prison of the actual is so immensely important to us. There is no denying the fact that when you have a toothache yourself it is hard to have to consider other people's aches. But it can be done, though it generally involves physical effort, for we must bestir ourselves and act. The mere feeling of sympathy expressed by action is a poor, useless thing, but the soul, determined not to grow old, can force the body to such physical effort, though there is no denying that it is hard work.—Harper's Bazar.

Toothache.

Toothache is something to be dreaded. Until a dentist can be consulted and the exact cause of the disturbance located and professionally treated it is an excellent thing to moisten the finger, and, after dipping it into some bicarbonate of soda, rub it on the gum round the sore tooth. It is also a relief to mix a teaspoonful of this bicarbonate of soda in half a glass of warm water and rinse the mouth with some every little while, holding a little in the mouth for a few seconds so that it penetrates all the crevices. The soda, being an alkali, serves to neutralize the acids in the mouth, which are often the cause of toothache.

Knew the Crowd.

A street preacher in a west of Scotland town called a policeman who was passing and complained about being annoyed by a certain section of the audience and asked him to remove the objectionable ones.

"Weel, ye see," replied the cautious officer, "it would be a hard job for me tae spot them, but I'll tell ye what I'd dae if I were you."

"What would you do?" eagerly inquired the preacher.

"Just gae round wi' the hat!"

THE GRAY WOLF.

His Cunning Is Marvelous, and He Is Difficult to Catch.

The cunning of the gray wolf is marvelous, and it is most difficult to catch napping. He somehow seems to know that iron is associated with man. A piece of iron anywhere will keep him at a distance. If you shoot an antelope, for instance, and just put your spur on the carcass you may leave it as long as you like and no wolf will touch it. A pocket handkerchief will do as well.

Lobo, a great gray wolf who was the king of the pack at Currumpaw, a vast cattle range in New Mexico, was a thinker as well as a ruler. His pack ate nothing but what they had killed themselves, and thus poison was no good. At last a thousand dollars was set upon his head. This brought a noted wolf hunter from Texas, with his pack of great wolfhounds. But again there was failure. Then two other hunters came with subtly devised poisons to work his undoing. Then I came on the scene. First I tried poison, and there was no combination of strychnine, arsenic and prussic acid which I did not use. I put the poisons in cheese melted together with kidney fat, and during the whole process I wore gloves steeped in hot blood. And I scattered the bait all over the ranch. The next morning I went out and found Lobo's tracks, with the bait gone. I was delighted. I followed the track and found another bait gone and yet another. Then I found the three baits piled upon another one and covered with filth. Lobo had evidently carried the first three in his mouth and had taken this means of expressing his utter contempt for my devices.

But Lobo's downfall came about through a big white she wolf who was always with him. I managed to catch her in a trap. Then I knew we should soon have Lobo. Night after night he came around the homestead and mourned his mate in long, plaintive howls. I knew he would try to find her body. I set 130 strong steel wolf traps, and in one of these I caught him—a martyr to constancy. And that was the end of Lobo.—Interview With Ernest Thompson Seton.

Two Ways of Doing Business.

I have seen in London only one office where there is any real enthusiasm. And the employees seldom have any interest in the business beyond drawing their salaries. In most of the factories, and even in the offices, they are taught a certain round of duties, and they are allowed to do nothing else. They seldom suggest improvements for fear of losing their places, where in America they'd soon lose their places if they didn't make suggestions. Here it's the firm in its private offices and everybody else doing as little as possible and never stepping out of the rut they're put in, and there it's everybody working together, coats off, and the head of the concern glad to listen to the office boy and to do as he says if it means results.—Vanity Fair.

A German epicure comes to the rescue of the Chinese in regard to their alleged habit of eating rotten eggs. The eggs, he says, are simply preserved in lime until they get a consistency like that of hard butter and they taste somewhat like lobster. When he went to live among them his friends predicted he would starve, but he had a good time and gained weight—more than he wanted to.

Balky Steam Boilers.

According to an engineer, though there may be every reason present why a steam boiler should steam there are occasions when it simply will not. It refuses duty and sulks without any cause that can be detected. On such occasions every one takes a hand at the fires, but the result is the same—no steam or only enough to keep three-quarters speed. Marine and stationary boilers are both thus afflicted. There are "good days" and "bad days" in the performance of each.—Chicago News.

An Enjoyable Affair.

By far the most enjoyable social event of the present season, was held at Singer's Hall last Saturday evening, When the young men — and some of the old ones — of the vicinity entertained their ladies at a social dancing party, returing the compliments given them a week ago.

The crowd being large, happy, merry, and contented as one may wish to meet anywhere. South of the Canadian boundary line. The musical program was in the hands of Mr and Mrs. Adolaph Nelson and Johnny Radnecski. It is stated that this program easily exceded all former attempts in the way of perfect music. At twelve o'clock suppor was served under the direct supervision of Misses Annie Hyland and Annie Swenson, which was provided liberaly in the way of good eatables for the party. And ample justice was accorded the repast, the dancing and visiting continued until an exceedingly late hour, but the enjoyment of the event was so unanimous that not thought was entertained of going home until almost past the day light signs.

The occasion will long be remembered as one of the grandest in the history of this locality, and the committe on arrangements are receiving many congratulation on successful manner in which it was carried out

The Story of a Discovery.

How many valuable inventions have been the result of pure accident, while in other cases men have puzzled their brains with study for a lifetime and brought forth nothing!

It happened one night that a big starch factory on the banks of the Liffey, near Dublin, took fire, and great puddles of starch and water were left outside.

Some calico printers who had been out all night and were quite tipsy came along toward morning, and one of them stumbled into one of the puddles. He found it so sticky that all his clothes stuck to him so fast that he had to stay in bed next morning till his wife soaked them out.

The man knew from his trade that the starch and water had formed a very powerful and valuable gum. He went back to the place of the fire and investigated, and the result was the discovery of the adhesive gum now used in sticking postage stamps and which has made many rich. But temperance lecturers need not know it.—Boston Globe.

No One But Yourself if You Don't Get Well When Sick.

All we can do is give advice.

Of course that's easy.

But our advice is really worth a little more to you than most people's, for we offer to give you the first bottle of our medicine free, if it fails to help you

We could not afford to do this unless our medicine was good. Such an offer, on the wrong kind of medicine, would put a merchant prince in the poor house.

Dr. Miles' Nervine, however, as years of experience have proved, is a medicine that cures the sick.

Those whom it cannot benefit—less than one in ten thousand—we prefer to refund their money.

All we ask of you is to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for your complaint. If you suffer from sleeplessness, nervous exhaustion, dizziness, headache, muscular twitchings, melancholy, loss of memory, weak stomach, poor blood, bilious troubles, epilepsy, St. Vitus' Dance, etc., we will guarantee to benefit you or refund your money.

You are the doctor.

"My son Bert, when in his 17th year, became subject to attacks of epilepsy, so serious that we were compelled to take him out of school. Many Persons Have Catarrh of Kidneys, Or Catarrh of Bladder and Don't Know It.

President Newhof and War Correspondent Richards Were Promptly Cured By Pe-ru-na.

PRES. C. B. NEWHOF, Suffered From Catarrh of Bladder.

Mr. C. B. Newhof, 10 Delamare street, Albany, N. Y., President Montefiore Club, writes:

"Since my advanced age I find that I have been frequently troubled with urinary ailments. The bladder seemed irritated, and my physician said that it was catarrh caused by a protracted cold which would be difficult to overcome on account of my advanced years. I took Peruna, hardly daring to believe that I would be helped, but I found to my relief that I soon began to mend. The irritation gradually subsided and the urinary difficulties passed away. I have enjoyed excellent health now for the past seven months. I enjoy my meals, sleep soundly, and am as well as I was twenty years ago. I give all praise to Peruna."---C. B. Newhof.

Suffered From Catarrh of Kidneys; Threatened With Nervous Collapse, Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Mr. F. B. Richards, 609 E Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., War Correspondent, writes: "Exactly six years ago I was ordered to Cuba as staff correspondent of the New York Sun. I was in charge of a Sun Dispatch boat through the Spanish American War. The effect of the tropical climate and the nervous strain showed plainly on my return to the states. Lassitude, depression to the verge of melancholia, and incessant kidney trouble made me practically an invalid. This undesirable condition continued, despite the best of treatment.

Finally a brother newspaper man, who like myself had served in the war, induced me to give a faithful trial to Peruna. I did so. In a short time the lassitude left me, my kidneys resumed a healthy condition, and a complete cure was effected. I cannot too strongly recommend Peruna to those suffering with kidney trouble. To-day I am able to work as hard as at any time in my life, and the examiner for a leading insurance company pronounced me an "A" risk."

In Poor Health Over Four Years, Pe-ru-na Only Remedy of Real Benefit.

Mr. John Nimmo, 215 Lippincott St., Toronto, Can., a prominent merchant of that city and also a member of the Masonic order, writes:

"I have been in poor health generally for over four years. When I caught a bad cold last winter it settled in the bladder and kidneys, causing serious trouble. I took two greatly advertised kidney remedies without getting the desired results. Peruna is the only remedy which was really of any benefit to me. I have not had a trace of kidney trouble nor a cold in my system."

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

SOUTHERN CONDITIONS AND POSSIBILITIES.

In no part of the United States has there been such wonderful Commercial, Industrial and Agricultural development as along the lines of the Illinois Central and the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroads in the States of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, within the past ten years. Cities and towns have doubled their population. Splendid business blocks have been erected. Farm lands have more than doubled in value. Hundreds of industries have been established and as a result there is an unprecedented demand for

Day Laborers, Skilled Workmen, and especially Farm Tenants.

Parties with small capital, seeking an opportunity to purchase a farm home; farmers who would prefer to rent for a couple of years before purchasing; and day laborers in fields or factories should address a postal card to Mr. J. F. Merry, Asst. General Passenger Agent, Dubuque, Iowa, who will promptly mail printed matter concerning the territory above described, and give specific replies to all inquiries.

DERANGED NERVES

DISTRESSING TROUBLES LEFT BY ST. VITUS AND GRIP.

Woman Afflicted for Years by Strange Spells of Numbness and Weakness Recovers Perfect Health.

When she was fourteen years old, Mrs. Ida L. Brown had St. Vitus' dance. She finally got over the most noticeable features of the strange ailment, but was still troubled by very uncomfortable sensations, which she recently described as follows:

"One hand, half of my face, and half of my tongue would get cold and numb. These feelings would come on, last for about ten minutes, and then go away, several times a day. Besides I would have palpitation of the heart, and my strength would get so low that I could hardly breathe. As time went on these spells kept coming oftener and growing worse. The numbness would sometimes extend over half my body."

"How did you get rid of them?"

"It seemed for a long time as if I never could get rid of them. It was not until about six years ago that I found a remedy that had virtue enough in it to reach my case. That was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and they have since entirely cured me."

"Did it take long to effect a cure?"

"No! I hadn't taken the whole of the first box before I saw a great improvement. So I kept on using them, growing better all the time, until I had taken eight boxes and then I was perfectly well, and I have remained in good health ever since with one exception."

"What was that?"

"Oh! that was when I had the grip. I was in bed, under the doctor's care, for two weeks. When I got up I had dreadful attacks of dizziness. I had to grasp hold of something or I would fall right down. I was just miserable, and when I saw the doctor was not helping me, I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills again. In a short time they cured me of that trouble too, and I have never had any dizzy-spells since."

Mrs. Brown lives at No. 1705 DeWitt street, Mattoon, Illinois. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are without an equal for the rapid and thorough cure of nervous prostration. They expel the poison left in the system by such diseases as grip and are the best of tonics in all cases of weakness. They are sold by every druggist.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Seed Wheat.

According to Dean. W. M. Liggett and Prof. C. P. Bull of the state experiment station, the question of a seed wheat famine in Minnesta depends entirely on securing a proper distribution of the supply of good seed. A bulletin has just been issued from the state experiment station in which it is said that there is enough good seed to sow the 6,500,000 acres of wheat land, provided the supply is properly distributed, and also provided farmers use proper precautions in selecting seed grain from their rusted wheat.

There is plenty of seed in some localities and none in others. The authorities at the experiment station are making efforts to relieve the situation, and farmers who have good seed are asked to advertise the fact, the suggestion being made that they can probably get more than the market price, and at the same time assist in protecting the state's chief product.

There is an idea prevalent among farmers that rust, like smut, is carried from one crop to another by the use of infected seed. This, the authorities assert is not true. Methods have been found for the prevention of smut, but as yet no definite methods have been found for the prevention of rust.

Wheat rust is propagated by spors and from field to field. Precaution is the only way the farmer has combating rust. The authorities claim that all stubble and rubbish which would tend to harbor the spors of this disease should be burned, and crop rotation practiced. After these precautions have been observed and some rust-resistant variety of wheat is planted the farmer will be reasonably sure.

State Fair Races.

The management of the Minnesota state fair has fairly outdone itself in the race program for the fair of 1905, which has been completed and given by Secretary E W. Randell. The total of purses offered has been increased by $2,000 from last year and reached the handsome amount of $27,650. This is the largest amount yet offered in purses by any western race meeting, whether at a state fair or elsewhere.

The 2:40 class trot is cut and a 2:19 class is inserted while the 2:17 class is made a 2:14. These changes meet the views of horsemen.

Perhaps the most interesting change is the increase for the purse of the 2:09 pace and the 2:10 trot (formerly) 2:12) from $1,000 to $1,500. These are the fastest classes on the program and the increase is intended to draw out a larger field of starters.

The great $5,000 races for Minneapolis and St. Paul days are retained as are the $2,500, 2:35 trot and 3:30 pace introduced last year. The special novelty, however, is the introduction of two colt races, for three-year-olds or under, bred and owned in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and the two Dakotas with purses of $800 for each.

The rules are substantially the same as last year, with the popular provisions for substitution and withdrawal, except in this important particular:

"Horses not standing for money at end of third heat cannot start in fourth or fifth heats."

This is a new provision for Minnesota, but one which is coming in vogue on many Eastern tracks and is said to suit the great majority of horsemen perfectly.

Farmers' Trust.

The farmers of the western part of Winona county have organized a local union of the Society of Equity with the following officers: President, C. L. Blair; vice president, Timothy Daly; secretary, O. P. Boysen; treasurer, Charles Rabben.

The object of this society which is national in its scope, is to regulate the prices of farm products according to demand and not permit them to be fixed by the arbitrary rulings of speculators. It is probable that the farmers in other parts of Winona county will also organize.

A Valuable Paper.

The state historical society has come into the possession of an autograph letter written by George Washington two days after his retirement from the presidency. It has been handed down in the family of Christopher Gist, Washington's guide in the expedition to Fort Euquesne, and was donated to the society by Annette Ralpe, a sister at the Episcopal home in St. Paul. The letter was written to Sir John Sinclair, a Scotch baroness, March 6, 1797.

Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Mrs. J. W. Lang and Mrs. S. Frake

Of all the diseases known, with which women are afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing down pains, urine too frequent, scanty or high colored, producing scalding or burning, or deposits like brick dust in it; unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back running down the inside of her groin, she may be sure her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The following letters show how marvelously successful it is.

Mrs. Samuel Frake, of Prospect Plains, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I cannot thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I first wrote to you I had suffered for years with what the doctor called kidney trouble and congestion of the womb. My back ached dreadfully all the time, and I suffered so with that bearing-down feeling I could hardly walk across the room. I did not get any better, so decided to stop doctoring with my physician and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am thankful to say it has entirely cured me. I do all my own work, have no more backache and all the bad symptoms have disappeared.

I cannot praise your medicine enough, and would advise all women suffering with kidney trouble to try it.

Mrs. J. W. Lang, of 626 Third Avenue, New York, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I have been a great sufferer with kidney trouble. My back ached all the time and I was discouraged. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure kidney disease, and I began to take it; and it has cured me when everything else had failed. I have recommended it to lots of people and they all praise it very highly.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from kidney trouble, or any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of the great volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than likely she has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS AT HOME AND ABROAD IN CONDENSED FORM.

THE WAR IN THE FAR EAST

Progress of Hostilities Between Russia and Japan—Doings at Washington—Items of Interest from All Over the World.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

The Japanese have taken Mukden. The Russians are panic-stricken. Thousands of prisoners and enormous quantities of stores and guns have been captured.

Kuropatkin's army is retreating all along the line. The losses are believed to total 100,000 in killed and wounded. Thousands of tons of supplies were burned. St. Petersburg concedes Kuropatkin's defeat, the only question being whether he can save his shattered army by retreat.

Every one in St. Petersburg is discussing peace, which many of the stanchest advocates of the war, bureaucrats and officers, now declare to be inevitable. It can be stated, however, that no overtures for peace yet have been made, and none are likely to be made for a few days, before the extent of the disaster to Kuropatkin's army has developed.

Gen. Kuropatkin's retirement from command in the orient is said to be desired now by the czar.

The Russian fleet has left the Madagascar coast, where it had been since early in January and has returned to the Red sea.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The special session of the senate was opened on the 6th by Vice President Fairbanks. A message from the president on the San Domingo treaty was discussed and referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

All the members of the present cabinet have been again named except Postmaster General Wynne. Mr. George B. Cortelyou was nominated for that office. The nominations were confirmed by the senate.

The senate confirmed the nominations of former Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, to be interstate commerce commissioner and of former Senator Quarles, of Wisconsin, to be United States judge for the eastern district of Wisconsin.

Without determining any question of policy in regard to the Santo Domingo treaty, the senate decided on the 7th that the treaty should be reported as soon as possible from the committee on foreign relations, and the entire question fought out in executive session.

President Roosevelt is said to plan radical changes in the Panama canal commission, including the retirement of Admiral Walker and the reduction of the membership to three.

The total appropriations for the short session of congress just closed were $818,478,914, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, as against $781,172,375 for the previous year.

Republican members of the senate fear democratic hostility will defeat ratification of the Santo Domingo treaty.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The coroner's jury at Honolulu returned a verdict that Mrs. Jane L. Stanford died an unnatural death. The verdict says that death was due to strychnine poisoning, the poison having been introduced into a bottle of bicarbonate of soda with felonious intent by some person or persons to the jury unknown.

The government must pay $5,000,000 to the sugar trust, according to the decree of the federal court, that amount representing excess in duties charged in 1903.

The defense in the Chadwick case at Cleveland made a desperate effort to have the case taken from the jury, and a verdict of acquittal rendered by the court. After arguments lasting through the greater part of the day, Judge Taylor overruled the motion.

Andrew Carnegie is now definitely out of the present trial of Mrs. Chadwick. If she should be acquitted this time, Mr. Carnegie might appear at a subsequent trial.

Mr. and Mrs. Penish and Thomas Danick were killed by a train at a crossing in Foley, Minn. The heads of both men were severed from their bodies and the body of Mrs. Penish was cut in two by the wheels of the engine.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

HOUSE IS MAKING GOOD PROGRES IN EXAMINATION OF CODE REVISION.

REVISED CODE IS ADOPTED.

The Matter of Legislative Expendature is Taken up and Given Warm Discussion.

St. Paul, March 9.—A new provision in the proposed revised laws, which would make it possible for the state board of control to fix salaries of employes of charitable and educational institutions, whose general management remains in the hands of local boards, was discovered yesterday by Representative A. K. Ware of Northfield, and on his motion it was struck out.

Section 6, chapter 25, gives the boards in charge of the various charitable institutions power to employ necessary teachers and other help, as does the present law. The following new clause, however, was added:

"But the total expenditures for such purposes shall not exceed in any one year such proportion of the whole sums available for the use of the institution during such year as the board of control shall prescribe."

A cent-a-mile excursion rate in effect Saturdays and good returning through the following Monday is prescribed for Minnesota railroads by a bill by Representative G. W. W. Harden of Le Roy. The bill retains the present maximum passenger rate of 3 cents a mile.

The bill provides that tickets shall be sold for a cent a mile between any Minnesota points on Saturdays with 5 cents for five miles as the minimum fare. Return-trip tickets are to be sold Saturday for double the cent-a-mile one-way rate prescribed, and are to be good returning the following Monday.

The bill imposes a penalty of $50 for each failure to sell the week-end excursion tickets at the rates prescribed by the bill.

Theaters.

Theaters and amusement halls in Minnesota must have fireproof curtains for the proscenium opening, under a bill introduced by Representative W. A. Nolan, of Grand Meadow. The measure requires the curtain to be of asbestos or other fire sustaining material, and to close completely the opening. The bill requires common councils to name an inspector of halls and theaters to enforce the provisions of the act, and who shall inspect each theater and hall at least once a year, collecting a fee of $3 for such inspection.

A fine of $300 to $500 is imposed on the managers and owners of theaters or halls failing to comply with the provisions of the act.

Bills will be recommended in the senate and house providing that county superintendents shall be appointed by non-partisan county boards of education instead of elected by the people and making several other changes in the state laws relating to education, as a result of a hearing of the legislative committee of the Minnesota Educational Association before the house and senate committees on education yesterday afternoon.

It is proposed to create county boards of education which shall have as many members as there are commissioner districts in the county. The members of the board shall serve five years and besides appointing the county superintendent shall have general supervision over the educational affairs of the county. The superintendent in no instance shall be paid less than $100 for each commissioner district.

Bucket Shops.

A bill aimed at bucket shops was introduced by Senator G. B. Ward of Alexandria. It empowers any city or village to prohibit the maintenance of bucket shops by a majority vote of the electors.

The bill defines a bucket shop as a place at which stocks, bonds and commodities are dealt in without intention on the part of the seller to deliver the goods or of the purchaser to receive them.

On petition of ten electors the city or village council is required to draft an ordinance prohibiting bucket shops and to submit it to the people at a general or special election.

A bill requiring private banks in the state to incorporate and come under a system of state inspection was introduced in the senate by the senate committee on banks and banking as a substitute for Senator A. O. Eberhart's measure, which abolishes private banks. The bill provides that private banks shall meet most of the requirements of state banks. The notable exception is that private banks shall not be limited in the amount they may loan to one firm or individual.

The house committee on drainage, decided to recommend for passage the bill by Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston, revising the state drainage commission law. The bill is a duplicate of that introduced by Representative O. B. Ekman and now on general orders in the house.

A resolution by Representative J. T. Mannix of Minneapolis tendering to President Roosevelt the congratulations and well wishes of the Minnesota legislature on his inauguration was unanimously adopted by the house and senate.

Logs.

Persons cutting and selling logs will be greatly aided by a bill introduced by Representative W. A. Hinton of Truman. The bill provides if logs are sold by the Scribner scale, logs more than twenty feet long shall count as two logs, and forty per cent shall be added to scale of logs less than twelve inches in diameter.

The Scribner scale was established before the introduction of the band saw, and lumbermen say that under it a man selling logs must bank at least 25 per cent more lumber than he gets paid for, as with the use of circular saw the waste was much greater than now.

Beer bottles and other receptacles permanently marked with the name of the owner, in which beverages and other products are sold, are protected by a bill by Representative M. D. Fowler of St. Paul. The bill applies to bottles in which are sold a long list of beverages, including the best known stimulants and summer drinks, and all receptacles containing ice cream, butter and other products, including kegs and barrels, on which the name of the owners are blown in, stamped, engraved or otherwise permanently affixed to the receptacle.

The owner of such receptacles is to file with the secretary of state a certified copy of the inscription with which they are marked. The bill makes it unlawful for any one except the owner, as shown by such mark, to refill such receptacles.

A bill appropriating $5,000 for a summer school at Bemidji is one by Senator E. J. Swedback of Bemidji. Under the bill a school for instruction in scientific, historical and social subjects shall be maintained at least one month each summer.

SENSATIONAL OCCURRENCES.

St. Paul, March 13.—One of the most sensational occurrences in the history of the Minnesota legislature was that of Friday, when the house, acting deliberately and with due knowledge, turned down the report of the majority of the railway committee upon the so-called Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill. This measure was prepared after careful consideration by the Municipal League of the state and Mr. Nolan introduced it at their request. It has been before the house committee on railroads for the past six weeks and public hearings galore have been held. A few days since a vote of the committee revealed the fact that 10 of the 19 members favored it. Thursday final consideration in the committee showed that a change in sentiment had occurred and by a vote of 11 to 8 it was recommended to indefinite postponement. A substitute placing demurrage matters under the province of the state railway and warehouse commission was recommended for passage instead. Friday this report was submitted to the house and by the overwhelming vote of 77 to 26 the report of the minority of the committee was substituted for that of the majority, the motion carrying with it the indefinite postponement of the newly drafted substitute. Representative Rockne tried to secure a reconsideration of the vote on the ground that "gag" rule had prevented a fair hearing for the majority report, but his motion was defeated, yeas 45, nays 69. The failure of Mr. Rockne's motion, therefore, settled for all time the fate of the substitute bill or any bill carrying the same subject matter. Under the rules such a bill can receive no consideration during the remainder of this session. The original Nolan bill will be taken up Wednesday next and passed upon as a special order and its friends confidently predict its passage.

REVISED CODE.

The re-revised code has been passed by the house in accordance with expectations of speedy action and is now ready for the consideration of the senate. Very few changes of importance were made by the house in the report which was submitted by its judiciary committee. Probably the most important action was the restoration of the existing law as it applies to the right of eminent domain as exerted by street and electric railways. The code revision conferred the right upon these companies, but an amendment was adopted which makes it applicable only in the country and small towns. As adopted by the house the code will take effect immediately upon its passage.

While the house is doing a great deal of work which is commendable, the members have their off days, when it seems as though the interests of the state are entirely lost sight of and all for the gratification of all interests or petty spite. Thursday was such a day. It is estimated that $500 worth of time, measured by the running expenses of the body, was wasted in a contest over the appointment of a clerk to assist the committee on public accounts and expenditure. The latter committee had offered a resolution for the appointment of such a clerk. It was understood that the appointee was to have been a man selected by Chairman Dowling. The resolution, in its regular order, was sent to the committee on rules. The latter body, avowing its intention to save the state's money, decided to assign one of the clerks already upon the pay roll. Over this question the entire membership became involved in a wordy warfare which, as above stated, consumed time to the value of the full amount of a clerk's salary for the entire session at $5 per day.

Some time ago Senator Stephens introduced a bill exempting the property of Grand Army posts from taxation. The bill was withdrawn after it had been pronounced unconstitutional by the judiciary committee. Now Mr. Stephens has introduced a bill providing for a constitutional amendment to effect the same purpose, and to exempt the property of all old soldiers to the extent of $1,000 each, as well.

During the session of the Grand Army encampment which was held in St. Paul this week, the veterans visited the capitol in a body and before the two bodies of the legislature urged the passage of the bill appropriating $100,000 for the construction of a home for the wives, widows and mothers of civil war soldiers.

The house committee on taxes and tax laws has passed favorably upon the measure introduced by S. D. Peterson, providing for the taxation of franchises and the appointment of a state tax commissioner. This bill passed the house two years ago, when it was known as the Haugland bill. The bill practically redrafts the present tax laws of the state and provides that franchises of public service corporations shall be assessed after ascertaining their value by adding the market value of the company's stock and funded debt and deducting therefrom the valuation of real and personal property as returned for taxation. The tax commissioner is to be appointed by the governor for a term of four years at a salary of $3,500 per annum. He is to have general supervision of assessing officers and has power to examine persons and compel the production of books and papers in ascertaining the value of property subject to taxation.

The same committee has reported favorably upon the Fanning bill increasing the gross earnings tax paid by sleeping car companies from 3 per cent to 4 per cent, and imposing the tax upon the Minnesota proportion of interstate business.

Expenditures.

The house committee on public accounts and expenditures is a very busy body. It is now especially engaged in sifting charges made by a St. Paul coal dealer against a certain member of the state board of control. It is alleged that the latter had his winter's supply of coal furnished gratis by the corporation which secured the annual contract to supply the state. The evidence thus far has failed to substantiate the charge. The committee is also investigating the voluminous charges made by Former Public Examiner Johnson against Former State Auditor Dunn. These charges were very much in evidence during the late political campaign. Mr. Dunn appeared before the committee Thursday last and explained many points. He claimed that many settlements for trespass were made because they were evidently best calculated to conserve the interest of the state, although he admitted that not in all cases was the law followed to the letter. State Auditor Iverson also testified.

A bill introduced by Senator Somerville provides for a constitutional amendment specifically authorizing the legislature to levy a registry tax on mortgages, which shall be in lieu of all other taxes.

The senate grain and warehouse committee has reported favorably two bills introduced by Senator Thorpe. One prohibits warehouse managers from giving due bills where the law demands a warehouse receipt. The other empowers the railway commission to cancel the licenses of commission merchants found guilty of defrauding patrons.

Senator Witherstine has introduced a bill which is said to be a copy of the Iowa distance tariff law. It is a bulky document and covers nearly every phase of railway regulation, prohibiting a greater charge for a short distance than is made for a longer distance, and declaring rebates and discriminations of all kinds illegal. The meat of the bill is included in the long and short haul clause, which reads as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers or a like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over its railroad, all, or any portion of the shorter haul being included within the longer, and shall charge no more for transporting freight to or from any point on its railroad than a fair and just rate, compared with the price it charges for the same kind of freight transportation to or from any other point."

The bill provides that charges for freight and passenger traffic shall be "just and reasonable," and says that in determining this point the railway and warehouse commission shall take into consideration what charges railways make in other sections of the state, or in any state in the union. The roads are permitted to charge a lower rate on carload lots than on less than carload lots. A fine of from $1,000 to $5,000 is fixed for the first violation of the act. Subsequent offenses are punishable by a fine of from $5,000 to $10,000.

RUSSIAN RETREAT WAS MASTERLY.

KUROPATKIN AND A PORTION OF HIS ARMY RETREAT TO TIE PASS.

The Russians it is Estimated Have Lost One Third of Army by Killed and Wounded.

Tie Pass, March 13.—For many versts all the approaches to Tie Pass are covered with troops, artillery and baggage transports pressing northward, and twenty-five miles away the strong rear guard of troops, which is personally commanded by Gen. Kuropatkin, is retiring slowly, doggedly disputing with the pursuing enemy every foot of ground in order to cover the retreat of the remainder of the army.

The losses in this defeat, which is the most bitter yet experienced by the Russian army, by a moderate computation, is not fewer than 200,000 men, Russian and Japanese.

The Russians, in addition, sacrificed enormous quantities of munitions and stores, the greater part of which were set on fire before leaving Mukden.

It is impossible to say whether the Russians will be able to put up a fight and hold this position, or whether it will be necessary to continue the retreat to Harbin, but the rank and file, whose military qualities never shine so brightly as in retreat and defeat, are far from being panic-stricken, and under capable leadership and given a brief time to strengthen positions may be able to check their pursuing enemy at this point.

The order to abandon Mukden and to retreat to Tie Pass was given at 9 o'clock on the evening of March 9.

Before beginning the retreat, all the depots, stores and military buildings, and everything that would be of service to the Japanese, were set on fire. A large amount of baggage and many guns were abandoned.

All rolling stock belonging to the main railroad was brought away, and not a car or locomotive was left at Mukden, though some cars belonging to the military roads behind the Shahe positions were abandoned.

About 1,500 severely wounded Russians and several hundred Japanese were left at Mukden hospitals, together with a complete medical staff, which was entrusted to the care of the chivalrous Japanese.

Mukden station was abandoned at 7 o'clock Friday morning. The retreat was dreary and disagreeable to an extreme. A dust hurricane, blowing directly southward, filled the eyes of the troops, but at the same time tended to blind the enemy and delay pursuit from the south.

The retreating columns were bombarded on both flanks by batteries, which it was impossible to silence, the shells reaching the Mandarian road from the east with especial frequency from Tawan, eight miles north of Mukden, and Pu, five miles further north.

Under the circumstances, the retreat was conducted with astonishing precision, which was largely due to the personal efforts of Gen. Kuropatkin, who with face haggard and uniform yellow with dust, was everywhere when needed.

The troops composing the rear guard fought with extraordinary bravery.

Kuropatkin Reports.

St. Petersburg, March 13.—A dispatch from General Kuropatkin, timed 6 p. m., March 10, says:

"The retreat of the army was very dangerous and especially trying for those corps which were some distance from the Mandarin road.

"The Japanese penetrated far into the mountains in the direction of Tawan. They threatened our troops, but thanks to extraordiny efforts, our armies are out of danger.

"The enemy cannonaded the route of our retreat from the east and west. The eastern Mandarin road was bombarded at two points near Tawan and the Pu river.

"Our troops are very brave.

"The reason the Japanese advanced so easily from the south is that the Hun river, which covered our position at Mukden, is frozen over.

"General Zerpitsky is wounded, but remains at the front."

Open Gambling.

Reno, Nev., March 13.—The bill compelling all gambling to be conducted on a second floor has been repealed.

The measure practically makes Nevada a state where gambling can be carried on in any place, either on street or in the house, so long as the gambler pays the license.

Found Guilty.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 13.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick Saturday night was found guilty of conspiring to defraud the United States by conspiring to procure the certification of checks on a national bank, when there were no funds in the bank to her credit.

Louis Hancock will wield the majority axe to prosecute the sightless swine for Fosston, while S. H. Drew will endeavor to chase them out of McIntosh.

That the railroad lawyers who are crowding the capital building, lobbing for railroad measure's have two good friends in the person of Simons and Krostue, was fully demonstreated last week when the Nolen "Reciprocal demurage law," was before the legislature, and they voted squarely in favor of the railroads, and against the people.

An old criminal was once asked what was the first step that led him to ruin and he said; "The first thing that led to my downfall was cheating an editor out of two years' subseription. When I done that the devil had such a grip on me that I could not shake him off."

Fosston, McIntosh and Erskine all voted out license at last Tuesdays election, The spirit of reform seems to be sweeping over that part of county, but the devil will undoubtedly loom up in sightless swine, and the tax payers will pay the bill for the prosecution of them, while the liquor traffic will go merrily on the only differance being that a few individuals will enrich themselves by violating the law, but then the people must have their reform innings even if they are expensive

In some quarters A. D. Stephens of Crookston, is mentioned as a candidate for Governor on the republican ticket next year. We will permit no one in the state to outdo us in acknowledging the ability of our friend Stephens or Stevens up to the point that he is a good man for congress we are not going to swallow that we consider the limitations and even admit that he would make a good candidate for goverror. A convention might be manipulated to nominate him, we will go that far for A. D. is a practical politician, but he would fall short several hundred thousands of votes in landing for governor while if by any chance he should be elected he would be an embarassment to his party and the state. This is our candid opinion of the matter is fearlessly expressed and does not mean that we are not favorable to the nomination and election of Mr. Stephens to congress, after the next re-apportionment of the state which re-apportionment will put Beltrami county in some other congressional district. —Bemidji Pioneer

Well now we object to the Pioneer giving our A.D. a boast for congresman of this district, just as they are going out of it. However we would like to see Mr. Stephens run his head against the stone wall of the voters of the ninth congressional district, at the next primary election, and he will find, that he is no manipulating a convention, with a lot of free expenses paid delegates.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs," "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance," "She whipped him upon his return," "He kissed her back," "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation," "She seated herself upon his entering," "We thought she sat down upon her being asked," "She fainted upon his departure."

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through all ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which they may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian chants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.

Muscles In Tension.

The Revue Scientifique has been asking what muscles tire soonest, with the conclusion that it is not the muscles in use, but those under tension, although doing no work. The writer urges us to use the arms and legs less and the back and neck more, for on them comes the greatest strain. He has been asking men of all occupations the same questions:

When you have worked much, where do you feel tired?

Before you were trained did fatigue show itself in the same regions?

All the answers point to the same conclusions. The baker who kneads dough all night complains of fatigue in his legs.

The blacksmith is tired, not in his arms and shoulders, but in his back and loins.

The young soldier, after a march, is especially tired in the back of the neck, even if he has carried no knapsack.

The oarsman who is in perfect training after prolonged exercise gets tired in his calves and insteps.

These facts point to the conclusion that in any continued effort we should try to alter the habit of contraction. That is to say, the body, like the mind, needs change of work.

A Nightmareless Rarebit.

A bachelor whose skill at getting up dainty supper dishes assures him plenty of company in the evenings is responsible for a substitute for the Welsh rabbit that is free from nightmare. He covers lightly toasted bread with finely grated cheese and instead of slipping it in the oven places it beneath the flame of the gas broiler until the cheese has been toasted a light brown.

If a good cream cheese is used there is not the slightest suggestion of sogginess or greasiness, and even those to whom a rabbit means a night of troubled dreams may indulge in this with no fear of evil consequences.

The trick lies in the grating of the cheese. Broken into bits, it would melt into a pasty mass. Finely divided, each particle should be individually toasted before it has a chance to melt down, and in that state it is readily assimilated.—New York Press.

The Choice of a Wife.

A German professor selects a woman who can merely stew prunes not because stewing prunes and reading Proclus make a delightful harmony, but because he wants his prunes stewed for him and chooses to read Proclus by himself. A fullness of sympathy, a sharing of life one with another, is scarcely ever looked for except in a narrow, conventional sense. Men like to come home and find a blazing fire and a smiling face and an hour of relaxation. Their serious thoughts and earnest aims in life they keep on one side. And this is the carrying out of love and marriage almost everywhere in the world, and this the degrading of women by both.—From One of Mrs. Browning's Letters, 1846.

The Value of New Ideas.

The recognition of the value of a new idea in regard to a business point is leading employers to encourage criticisms and suggestions from employees in respect to the details of the business, thus utilizing their microscopic view rather than depending solely on the birdseye view which is taken by the manager. A friendly feeling results from this attitude, and the employee takes a deeper interest in his work, developing his own capacity and helping the business. To see his idea carried out by his superiors puts new life into him and adds new enthusiasm to his efforts.—Success.

The Wedding Ring Finger.

The wedding ring was placed on the left hand as nearest the heart and on the fourth finger because that finger was supposed to have its own "private wire" (in the shape of a delicate nerve) to the heart. That finger, too, was called the medicine finger, and the belief was that by virtue of the little nerve it could detect a dangerous poison if simply inserted in the liquid. From that belief the idea that wedding rings —the rings worn on that finger—had special curative qualities had its rise. To this day wedding rings are rubbed over an obstinate sty on an eyelid.

The Chance He Lost.

"Why are you so sad, Alice?" her mother asked.

"I've decided not to keep company with Mr. Jonesby any more."

"Dear me! Have you heard anything about him?"

"No. But last night when I said I wished that I was a man he merely asked me why, instead of getting excited and saying that life would be hateful to him if I had not been born a girl."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Cynical.

"Which do you think counts for the most in life, money or brains?"

"Well," answered Miss Cayenne, "I see so many people who manage to get on with so little of either that I am beginning to lose my respect for both."—Washington Star.

Marketing in Paris.

Almost every woman in France does her own marketing, and ladies take their maid or cook along to carry home their purchases.

I am speaking of the average household. Rich or very chic people leave the marketing to the cook, who deals in stores which have regular deliveries, while in very wealthy households that all important personage, the chef, would not hear of any one interfering with his prerogative of selecting and ordering everything, and this able creator of sauces, of things savory, steaming or jellied, may even have his own coupe to take him to the Halles, the huge market that each day provides the provisions for all of Paris and its suburbs.

Servants love to go to market, for it is a custom with almost every storekeeper to give them a cent on every franc spent, so you will find it next to an impossibility to make your cook deal where she does not receive her sou du franc, and in engaging a servant many will ask you, "Does madame do her own marketing?"—Good Housekeeping.

Milk and Apples.

Though no one would think so from looking at a fluid glass of milk and a solid apple, the percentage of solids and water in apples and in milk is almost the same, apples being 85 per cent water, and milk 80 per cent.

There is more sugar in apples and more acid in milk. A diet of both apples and milk is one of the most wholesome and well balanced. The potash contents of both are high. They are the best for brain, bone and muscle nourishment, and in their effect upon the nerves they are soothing.

In skimming milk the cream removed lessens the fat percentage, and for older people or fat children the skim milk is equally desirable, in some cases better. In eating apples the skin, too, should be eaten. Pared apples are not so nutritious, as the ash contents of the apple skin are valuable to the human system.

Odd Animal Laws.

When a dog was unlawfully killed in countries differing so widely as Germany and Arabia the owner of the animal used to be indemnified in the following manner: The dog was hung up by the tail, with the point of its muzzle touching the ground, and the man who had committed the offense was obliged to pour over it corn or flour until the carcass was completely hidden by the heap. This heap then became the property of the man who owned the dog.

In Syria there was a specially curious variation, for if it were a street dog that was killed the flour was made into bread and given to its fellows. No doubt this arose from the value attached in those old parts to street dogs as scavengers. By the old Welsh laws of Howel the damages for killing an animal belonging to another were assessed in the same odd manner.

Two Kinds of Reading.

If we make the pages of our books merely a sort of pleasant maze in which to set our minds to wandering during idle hours we in reading shall have acquired a pastime that is usually harmless. But there is a vast difference between such a way of spending our time and the reading that teaches us to think as the greatest and wisest men and women have thought. Words stand in our minds for certain ideas or images. From what we read we learn to make these plain or hazy, clearly drawn pictures or carelessly executed sketches, and thus our powers of thinking are directly trained by our method of reading.—St. Nicholas.

Magnet Power.

The lifting of massive iron and steel plates weighing four, six and twelve tons by magnetism is now done every workday in a number of large steel works. The magnets are suspended by chains from cranes and pick up the plates by simple contact and without the loss of time consequent to the adjustment of chain and hooks in the older method. It is also found that the metal plates can be lifted by the magnets while still so hot that it would be impossible for the men to handle them. A magnet weighing 300 pounds will lift nearly five tons.

Position In Sleep.

According to Dr. Fischer of Berlin, the most effective position of sleep for obtaining intellectual rest is to keep the head low and the feet slightly elevated. Failing this, the body should at any rate be horizontal, so as to irrigate the brain well. The habit of sleeping with head low and feet high is, according to the doctor, a remedy for brain troubles and some internal maladies. It can be adopted gradually.

One Advantage of England's Fogs.

"Should scientists succeed in finding ways and means for dispelling the foggy condition of England's atmosphere I am afraid that country will lose more than it gains," said a weaver. "One of the reasons why English weavers produce fabrics of finer and softer finish than American weavers from the same quality of cotton and other yarn is because of the damp condition of the atmosphere in that country at all times.

"It is a well known fact that yarn kept continually and uniformly damp will spin finer and softer than that drying out in the process of weaving. Thousands of dollars have been spent by our weavers in appliances to keep their shops uniformly humid, but thus far without success. The fine quality of panama hats, for instance, if the straw were not kept damp while the process of weaving is on, could not be produced. The straw is not worked under water, as many suppose, but is kept uniformly damp by being worked in the early morning hours when a heavy dew is falling."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

He Wanted That Wine.

General Sir E. Hamley is cited as the authority for a good anecdote about Bismarck. Hamley was sitting close to the chancellor at luncheon, with the old Emperor William not far off.

Bismarck, talking rather loudly, described the old monarch as being generous, but very forgetful. Hamley got nervous, as he thought the emperor would hear. "For instance," continued Bismarck, "I pleased him the other day, and he asked me what he could do for me. I said, 'Give me a dozen of that Tokay you have in your cellars,' and he said he would. "But," added Bismarck, raising his voice still higher, "he hasn't done it." Here Hamley hastily broke in, "I beg your pardon, but I am really afraid the emperor will hear you." "I want him to hear me!" roared Bismarck. "That's just what I want." And a smile broke over the face of his imperial master.—"Fifty Years of Fleet Street."

Tiger Story From India.

A man living in a village near Lucknow is reported to have had an extraordinary adventure in the jungle. He had gone in search of two buffaloes that had gone astray when he was attacked by a tiger.

He was unarmed except for a heavy stick, with which he fought until overcome by loss of blood, when he sank unconscious. At this moment the two buffaloes appeared. One of them stood over the wounded man, while the other snorted and tossed his head.

The man recovered consciousness and staggered to his feet, when the tiger made another spring at him. The beast was, however, received on the horns of one of the buffaloes and was so badly wounded that it turned tail and slunk away.—London Express.

Liquid Metal Polish.

Take eight ounces of Spanish whiting, which must be perfectly free from grit, and put in one quart of gasoline. Shake up the whiting and gasoline thoroughly. You will notice the whiting settles immediately, leaving the liquid as clear as water. To remedy this and, further, to make it a better polishing agent, add to each quart of the mixture thirty-two drops of oleic acid—no more, no less. Shake again, and the whiting will not settle. Apply to gold, silver, nickel, brass, glass or any kind of metallic surface with a piece of cotton flannel, rubbing well. Polish with a piece of same cloth.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Waterproofing Dress Goods.

One of the most important processes used for waterproofing dress materials is on the lines of the old alumina process. In this case the factor used is rosin dissolved in a large bulk of petroleum spirit. The fabrics to be proofed are passed through a bath of this solution and dried to drive off the solvent. Following this, the goods are treated by pressing with hot polished metal rollers. This last process melts the small quantity of rosin which is deposited on the cloth and leaves each single fiber with an exceedingly thin film of rosin on it.

Forests and National Prosperity.

As a living example of the consequences of deforestation we need simply look to Spain, a country which centuries ago was rich in timber and agricultural products, a proud seafaring nation of world conquerors. Spain's decadence dates from the time when her timber supply became exhausted, her shipbuilding relaxed and her barren, unprotected soil ceased to bear fruit.—Forum.

Next week we will have the pleasure to announce in our colums, that two weddings will be solemnized in the near future. One being a young farmer who resides West from here; while the other is the holdier of a farm in Winsor township.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Bakken, desire to announce to there many friends in this locality, that their invitations, are hereby extended to attend their Wedding reception given at Mr. Schultz's place near Clearwater Crossing, on next Saturday evening, March, 18th.

A. basket party was given at Christ Solin's place last Saturday evening, for the benifit of the new School building which is to erected in that community this comming summer. The party was well attended by the surrounding neighbors, and a snug little sum was taken in towards their treasury.

Last Saturday evening a jovial crowd of young people left this burg, and drove to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Orvold, where they intruded upon most unceremoniously, but they being equal to the occasion they bade the parties welcome, and they were soon feeling themselves right at home. The evening was spent by the merry crowd in dancing. And all enjoyed a pleasant time and they departed for home when the daylight signs appeared happier then ever before.

Ernest Metcalf one of the enterprising farmers in the town of Winsor was a buiness visitor here to-day.

Ivory From the Graves of Elephants.

As a species of rejoinder to the charge that the present consumption of ivory is threatening the elephant with extinction, it has recently been stated that 85 per cent of the supply of ivory is obtained from "elephant cemeteries"—spots met with here and there in the jungle, where elephants have resorted for centuries to die. W. L. Distant, editor of the Zoologist, points out that very few of these spots seem to have been discovered by travelers, and scarcely any record of them is to be found in books of travel.

A Tribute to Weather Conditions in Western Canada.

During the early portion of February, of this year, the Middle and Western States suffered severely with the intense cold and winter's storms. Trains were delayed, cattle suffered, and there was much general hardship. While this was the case, throughout Western Canada, now attracting so much attention, the weather was perfect.

One correspondent writes: "We are enjoying most beautiful weather, the gentlemen are going to church without top coats, while the ladies require no heavier outer clothing than that afforded by light jackets." In contrast with this it is interesting to read in a St. Paul paper of February 13 the following, in double headlines, and large bold-faced type:

"Warm Wave Near Arctic Zone,

"Calgary Much Warmer Than St. Paul.

"Balmy Breezes are Blowing in Northwestern Canada while people are freezing to death in Texas and other Southern States."

During the month of January of this year the number of settlers who went to Canada was greater than any previous January. The movement northward is increasing wonderfully.

The vacant lands of Western Canada are rapidly filling with an excellent class of people. The Government Agents located at different points in the States, whose duty it is to direct settlers, are busier than ever. They have arranged for special excursions during the months of March and April, and will be pleased to give intending settlers any desired information.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

MARRED A YOUNG WOMAN'S HAPPINESS FOR SEVEN YEARS.

Interfered With Her Social Duties and Threatened to Cause Her Retirement—How She Was Cured.

Every sufferer from nervous headache knows how completely it unfits one for the duties and pleasures of life. Any little excitement, or over-exertion, or irregularity brings it on. Sometimes the pain is over the whole head. Again it is like a nail driven into the brain, or a wedge splitting it open, or a band tightening about it. At one time it is all in the top of the head, at another it is all at the base of the skull.

Most headaches can be traced to some faulty state of the blood. When the blood is scanty or charged with poison, and the nerves are imperfectly nourished and the digestion weak, one of the commonest results is frequent and severe headaches.

The important thing is to get rid of the diseased condition of the blood that causes the attack by the use of a remedy that will do the work quickly and thoroughly. What is that remedy? The experience of Miss Ellen McKenna furnishes the answer. She says:

"For more than seven years I was a great sufferer from nervous headache and dizziness. My stomach was disordered, and I became so restless that I could not sit still any length of time. Dizziness interrupted my work greatly. At first the attacks were not so severe, but they gradually grew more violent, and finally became so acute that I was on the point of relinquishing my membership in the different organizations to which I belonged."

"What saved you from that necessity?"

"A very simple thing; the call of a member of one of the clubs, who strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills before giving up. I acted on her suggestion at once, and after steadily using this great blood and nerve remedy for two months, my headaches and my dizziness entirely disappeared."

Miss McKenna is secretary of the Associated Ladies' Guild, and resides at No. 48 Wait street, Roxbury, Mass. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many hundreds of similar cases, and can be confidently recommended to drive all poisons from the blood and to give needed strength to the nerves. Every druggist keeps them.

Neuralgia is bad enough, but when your physician calls it tic douloreaux—look out for the bill.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Secret of Success

with Pusheck's-Kuro is that it does what no other medicine can do. It affects the grand trio—the stomach, the blood and the nerves—that controls and regulates the whole body, every organ and every function. It corrects the digestion and assimilation of food that keeps up the body. It purifies and enriches the blood, corrects, regulates and strengthens the nerves. This explains why one medicine permanently cures Rheumatism, Pains, Weakness, Nervous Debility, Catarrh, Indigestion, Skin diseases and all Blood and Nerve troubles. The price of Pusheck's-Kuro is $1.00. It can be had at your druggist's or direct from Dr. C. Pusheck, Chicago. Write for illustrated booklet.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Growing Industry.

E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, has made public a part of the tenth biennial report of the department. The report shows eleven new creameries and seventeen new cheese factories. The number of cows supplying milk to creameries has increased 54,384. The butter output of the state has increased 2,047,315.83 pounds.

The report shows that there are 573 co-operative creameries, and 198 independent creameries. There are 58,900 dairy patrons in the state and 433,740 dairy cows from which 1,351,642,619 gallons of milk were furnished to creameries, making 72,260,348 pounds of butter. Minnesota creameries supplied the state with 13,769,498 pounds of butter and 53,052,101 pounds were shipped out of the state.

There are 56 private and 34 co-operative cheese factories; 66 cheddar factories and 24 curd factories. The factories supplied 3,262,767 pounds of cheese to the state, and 126,258 pounds were shipped out of the state. The factories received 35,113,492 pounds of milk, and manufactured 3,419,035 pounds of cheese.

School Apportionment.

In preparing the semi-annual apportionment of state aid to the different schools, it was discovered that 58,173 children between the ages of eight and sixteen years attend school less than forty days a year. The apportionment is based on the enrollment at the first of the year and there is every reason to believe that it has not changed materially since then.

There are 365,590 pupils entitled to share in the per capita apportionment of $547,635. The apportionment for each pupil who attended school forty days or more is $1.50 When the last apportionment was made the per capita amount was $2 21. The total enrollment of school children is 423,663, which compared with the total number entitled to the apportionment shows that there are many children who do not attend school even forty days a year.

Ramsey county has 27,342 pupils enrolled to an apportionment of $40,998: Hennepin, 44,539, entitled to $66,808.50; St. Louis county, 17,467 pupils, entitled to $26,200.50, and Stearns, 9,934 pupils, entitled to $14,901.

Improvements at Fair Grounds.

A live stock amphitheater at the state fair grounds at a cost of $200,000 is provided for in a bill introduced by Senator Thomas Torson of St. James. The money is to be expended on warrant of the state auditor by the board of managers of the state agricultural society.

Rings for the display of live stock will be provided in the center and seats for the spectators will be arranged on the sides.

The long talked of tunnel under the race track at the Minnesota State Fair grounds will be constructed this season and opened for the use of teams and automobiles during the fair of 1905. This was decided at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the board of managers.

Better Milk.

Samples of milk and cream taken by the state dairy and food department during the last week have shown a better percentage up to the legal standard. Of 51 samples taken, 17 were illegal and 34 legal. Of the 24 Minneapolis samples 9 were illegal and 15 legal. Three samples which were taken at St. Louis park were found to be legal.

E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, says a marked improvement has been noticed since the crusade began, and the use of artificial thickener in cream has been dropped.

Lost the Ring.

Otto Kankel, the Fertile miller, recently lost a valuable diamond ring in a peculiar manner. He was examining a bin of flour in one of the upper stories of the mill when the ring dropped from his finger into the flour and although he made an immediate effort to recover it, failed to do so, and by this time, in probability, is enclosed in a sack and will eventually fall into the hands of some dutiful housewife. That particular brand of flour is now in demand.

News Notes.

The senate votes to abolish grand juries.

Found at Last.

Alston, Mich., March 13th.—(Special)—After suffering for twenty years from Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles, and spending a fortune in doctors and medicines that brought him no relief, Mr. James Culet of this place has found a complete cure for all his aches, pains and weakness, in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Naturally Mr. Culet feels much elated over his cure and gives great credit to the remedy that gave him health.

"Yes," Mr. Culet says, "my Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles are all gone and I feel like a new man. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. Before I used them I spent a small fortune on doctors and one remedy and another. I cheerfully recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone suffering from Rheumatism or Kidney Trouble."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure sick kidneys. Healthy kidneys take all the uric acid—the cause of Rheumatism—out of the blood. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Rheumatism.

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

A Prominent Cincinnati Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cured Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

Mrs. Sara Wilson

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About nine months ago I was a great sufferer with womb trouble, which caused me severe pain extreme nervousness and frequent headaches, from which the doctor failed to relieve me. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and within a short time felt better, and after taking five bottles of it I was entirely cured. I therefore heartily recommend your Compound as a splendid uterine tonic. It makes the monthly periods regular and without pain; and what a blessing it is to find such a remedy after so many doctors fail to help you. I am pleased to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Sara Wilson, 31 East 3d Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you have suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, leucorrhœa, flooding, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, some derangement of the uterus or ovarian trouble. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

BILL IS PASSED ADMITTING WIVES AND WIDOWS TO SOLDIER'S HOME.

REVISED CODE IS ADOPTED.

Nolan's Reciprocal Demurage Bill is Finally Passed by the House After Hard Fight.

St. Paul, March 16.—Senator Somerville, chairman of the senate judiciary committee, to which the new code as adopted by the lower house has been referred, announces that the committee will have its report upon the bill ready in a very few days, Monday next at the outside. The task of passing upon the amendments made by the lower house is comparatively simple, owing to the fact that the senators have closely followed the proceedings of the house, and in its consideration of the measure is consulting freely with the house subcommittees. It is likely that the code will be adopted by the senate with very little delay, although the amendments to be offered may require a great deal of time at the hands of conference committees.

Commissioner Staples of the state railway commission, was the principal advocate before the senate railroad committee of the Thorpe bill, which prohibits railways from raising rates without consent of the commission. He said that one of the best points about the bill was that it would bring about closer relations between the commission and the railways. Attorney Root, of the Milwaukee railway was present to oppose the measure on behalf of the railways. The committee also devoted some little time to consideration of the Peterson bill to abolish passes and establishing a 2-cent per mile passenger rate, but no definite action resulted in either case. The committee did approve Senator Stone's bill making railway mileage books transferable.

The senate has passed, without opposition, the bill permitting admission to the soldiers home of the wives, widows and mothers of old soldiers. It also has passed the following: By Senator Stone, making mileage books transferable; by Senator Eberhart, amending the military code; by Senator Thorpe, making it a penitentiary offense for a person to be convicted three times in two years for selling liquor without a license.

The senate has approved a bill to appropriate the sum of $15,000 for the purpose of erecting a statute of Former Governor Alexander Ramsey in statuary hall at Washington.

A resolution introduced by Representative Smith calls for the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the advisability of purchasing or erecting a mansion for the governor. Another by Representative Flower calls for the appointment of a committee of five, three from the house and two from the senate, to represent the legislature at the launching of the battleship Minnesota April 8 [illegible]ort News.

Representative W. P. Roberts is the author of a bill which provides that election officials shall maintain primary registers, which shall be a complete list of voters and a record showing which party ticket was voted. This record is to be retained for public inspection for two years and four months. Each voter is prohibited from participating in the nomination of party candidates, either in direct primary or at conventions, unless he affiliated with that party at the last general election. The bill is intended to prevent the participation in primaries of voters of opposite political faith.

Representative J. R. Morley has introduced in the house a copy of a law embodying the South Carolina dispensary system, under which the liquor business is to be conducted by municipal authorities and the profits turned into the public funds. The bill leaves it optional with a municipality whether or not it shall maintain a dispensary, and provides that only liquor in unbroken packages shall be sold.

A bill by Representative Hickey enlarges the membership of the state fair association by permitting the governor to appoint three delegates from counties which have no agricultural societies.

Text Book Bill Lost.

The Perley free text book bill was lost by an overwhelming majority when it came up for consideration in the house Tuesday. The bill was one in which great interest was manifested by the public and large stacks of petitions in its favor and against it were received. The opposition came principally from the friends of the parochial schools of the state, and a tinge of religious discussion was noticeable in the debate.

Another educational bill lost in the house the same day was that by Representative Anderegg providing for consolidation of rural schools. This bill came within five votes to having enough to pass and as the attendance was light the author gave notice of reconsideration.

Speaker Clague has named the following committee to look into the matter of the advisability of manufacturing farm machinery at the state prison. Messrs. Teigen, Rockne, Vollmer, Krostue, W. I. Nolan, Hinds and Jefferson.

The senate committee on roads and bridges has reported favorably a bill increasing the tax levy for road and bridge purposes to one fourth of a mill upon all taxable property. No county is to receive more than 3 per cent of the fund in any one year, or less than one-half of one per cent.

Under suspension of the rules the senate passed the Schaller bill, which provides that persons under indictment may plead guilty at any time upon request to the judge. Heretofore such prisoners have had to await the action of the grand jury. Other bills passed by the senate include: By Senator Brower, appropriating $65,000 for the purpose of taking a state census this year; by Senator Gjertson, increasing personal property exemption from $100 to $200; by Senator Calhoun, abolishing days of grace on sight drafts or acceptances and making negotiable instruments falling due on Sundays or holidays payable the following day.

District Judges.

The bill increasing the salaries of district judges has been amended by the senate judiciary committee so that in counties of less than 75,000 salaries are raised from $3,500 to $4,200. Larger counties are to pay an additional $800. This leaves the salaries in the large counties unchanged.

The senate judiciary committee recommends the passage of Senator Wilson's bill abolishing the sale of the giant fire cracker after July 1, 1905.

Two years ago the legislature passed a bill authorizing the appointment of a commission to supervise the erection of a monument at Vicksburg National Park to commemorate the services of the Third, Fourth and Fifth Minnesota regiments and the First Minnesota battery in the siege of Vicksburg, but provided no funds for the carrying out of the work. This session Senator McGill introduced a bill appropriating $30,000 to cover the expense, and the senate has already passed upon it favorably in committee of the whole.

Quite a little humorous discussion arose in the senate over the Laugen bill, providing a bounty of $2 for each rattlesnake killed in the state, but the author contended that in his section at least it was no laughing matter, and the measure was recommended for passage.

Primary Election.

St. Paul, March 20.—Both houses of the legislature are at sea regarding the extension of the primary election system to cover the election of state officers, and although many joint meetings of the committees on elections have been held at which the various bills introduced have been thoroughly discussed, it has been impossible to secure a favorable report upon any proposed plan from a majority. This was plainly shown in the house yesterday, when Chairman Adams, of the election committee, stated the existing condition to be as outlined above. Mr. Adams declared that it was only by a tie vote that all the bills before the committee had been saved from indefinite postponement. Only one of the bills, that by Representative Lund, proposed an extension of the system in direct fashion to the election of state officers, and in order to get a test vote in the house he offered a motion to indefinitely postpone that bill. This motion precipitated a flood of oratory and protests came in thick and fast. The motion was finally withdrawn and another offered by Mr. Hugo, that the bills be referred to a special committee of ten. This was voted down as tending to delay, and it was finally agreed that all the bills should be made a special order for Thursday next, and that all, save the Selb bill, be printed. The latter bill is to be amended by the author and acted upon with the others. While it is plain that the sentiment of the members favors amendment of the present law, there is no indication that a majority can be brought to favor any of the plans yet presented.

Reciprocal Demurrage.

Probably no bill before the present session of the legislature has provoked the expression of more interest than the Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill. The measure was introduced early in the session and had countless hearings before the house railway committee, at which both shippers and railway attorneys appeared to argue its merits and demerits. The railroad committee finally decided that it should be killed and by a small majority reported it for indefinite postponement. This report was turned down by the house and the bill put up as a special order for last Wednesday. After three hours of heated debate it was passed by a vote of 108 to 7. The bill is backed by the Shippers' Association and will be vigorously pushed in the upper house.

The house has passed the Anderson bill requiring the insurance commissioner to turn over to the state all fees received in his department. This bill fixes the salary of the insurance commissioner at $2,500 annually, and was opposed by many, who thought twice that sum should be paid.

The Dale anti-cigarette bill, after being amended to suit the author, was voted down by the senate in committee of the whole, by a vote of 25 to 26. An attempt made later by Senator Witherstine to have the vote reconsidered failed.

Two bills of interest passed by the senate are the Laybourn measure, abolishing the grand jury, and the Gjertsen bill, establishing a chiropractic school. Both had a comfortable working majority.

House File No. 1, by Mr. Roberts, received the almost unanimous approval of the house. It provides for a constitutional amendment establishing what is known as "wide open" tax legislation policy. When the bill was reported to the senate, that body, on motion of Senator Lord, gave it a forward shove by having it read the first and second time and placed on general orders.

Public Expenditures.

[illegible] and expenditures is busy investigating the charges of the late public examiner, S. T. Johnson, affecting the conduct of the state auditor's office under R. C. Dunn and S. G. Iversen, and several spicy sessions have resulted. Messrs. Dunn and Iverson have had opportunity to go over the report and point out alleged errors in the Johnson report and now the latter is appearing daily to prove the correctness of his allegations. In conducting the work, the committee has before it for reference the voluminous records from the auditor's office and the services of several clerks are required to handle those documents.

After suffering a precarious existence for some time past, the Thayer tax-ferret bill was put to sleep by the house Wednesday afternoon without coming to a direct vote. It was evident that sentiment was strongly against it.

The special insurance investigating committee of the house finds itself unable to agree and two reports will doubtless be made. One will recommend the creation of the office of state fire marshal and the passage of an anti-compact bill, alleging that the investigation has shown that the existence of the Western Union Underwriters' Association has resulted in an increase of rates. The other report will agree to the fire marshal bill, but finds no fault with the association.

The appointment of George W. Knox, of Aitkin, as a member of the state equalization board, which was held up for weeks upon objection by Senator Mausten, was finally confirmed by the senate during the absence of the objecting senator.

The Selb bill to remove by constitutional amendment the present limitation of the amount which can be recovered for death by accident and practically giving the jury the right to assess the amount, has emerged triumphant from the house judiciary committee. The existing law limits the amount which may be recovered to $5,000.

By a vote of 27 to 26 the senate, in committee of the whole, sustained the report of the majority of the banking committee killing the Eberhart bill, which provided that private banks should be placed under the laws applying to state banks.

The senate game and fish committee has recommended favorably the Cook bill regulating fishing in Lakes St. Croix, Pepin and the Mississippi river. It permits the use of seines under certain restrictions. The bill prohibiting the use of magazine guns for bird shooting was turned down. It was decided to make a uniform open season for all small game, beginning Sept. 1, and the Hawkins bill will be redrafted along that line.

In a joking spirit the senate passed the Laugen bill, which provides that a bounty of $2 be paid by the state for each rattlesnake killed. It is expected that the bill will be killed in the house or that the amount of the bounty will be materially reduced.

Road Engines.

The house committee on labor has reported favorably a bill requiring engineers of road engines to have had at least three years' experience as practical engineers and firemen which was supported strongly by a lobby of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; also a bill strengthening the state board of barber examiners, which requires barbers to renew their license at least once in each two years. The committee was not satisfied with the terms of the Bennett bill, which prohibits the employment of women in stores for more than eight hours daily, and the bill was laid over for further consideration.

Once more the house has gone on record as favoring an inheritance tax by passing the Ward Stone bill which, after exempting $5,000, provides the following tax: By widows and children, one-quarter of 1 per cent; direct heirs, 1 per cent; collateral heirs, 5 per cent. Five times the Minnesota house has passed the same sort of a bill, two of which met the approval of the senate, but each time some defect was found which made the proposed law inoperative.

Important bills passed by the house include: By Mr. Hugo, providing that the Monday after a legal holiday falling on Sunday be a legal holiday, and including Good Fridays as legal holidays; by Mr. Gandrud, providing that legislative supplies be purchased by the board of control; by Mr. Rachie, extending the Torrens system of land titles to all counties in the state; by Mr. Murray, authorizing villages to issue bonds for the purpose of refunding floating indebtedness.

JAPANESE FORCE RUSSIAN FLIGHT.

GENERAL LINEVICH CONFIRMS REPORT THAT JAPS OCCUPIED FAKUMEN.

Several of the Russian Ministers are Strongly Urging that Peace Overtures be Made.

Tokio, March 20.—Headquarters of the Japanese armies in the field, reporting under yesterday's date, says:

"Our detachment, continuing its course north, pursued the enemy to Kaiyuen (Some twenty miles north of Tie pass). Kaiyuen was evacuated by the enemy on Saturday after he had set fire to the railroad station."

St. Petersburg, March 20.—Commander-in-chief Linevitch in a telegram dated Saturday says:

"On March 17 Japanese batteries bombarded our divisions in the valleys of Tavanpun and Yanpu. The enemy appearred near Kaotaitse (on the railroad about twenty-two miles north of Tie pass) and their cavalry has occupied Faknmen. Our armies continue their concentration.

Fusan, March 20—The Russian army continues its northern retreat, the Japanese following. The Japanese have occupied Fakumen, to the northwest of Tie Pass. Yesterday evening the Russian army camped three miles south of Kaiyuen. Large Russian columns are retreating towards this place from the southwest.

The natives report that they are not stopping there, where the hills make a defense possible.

If the retreat is forced it will probably be continued to Harbin.

The Russians are reported as being badly disorganized.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—While Emperor still declines to abandon the war several of his own ministers are strongly urging that the time has come to indicate to Japan a desire for peace on a reasonable basis.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—The secret police of Moscow have discovered an organization acting [illegible] with the revolutionary party in London, and 300 persons have already been arrested. The police found in a store infernal machines, hand bombs and a quantity of explosives and weapons, together with printing presses and revolutionary documents, included among the latter being letters to the central committee and correspondence relating to the assassination of Grand Duke Sergius.

Revives Tin Project.

Hill City, S. D., March 20.—A demonstration soon will be made by the Hill City people on a tin vein near this place. E. C. Johnson of Chicago some time ago purchased the Gertie tin mine and with his own money put a shaft down 500 feet. Before he could complete a small mill, he ran short of funds, and labor and money have been donated by the mining men and business of this vicinity to complete the mill. The ore carries 6 to 10 per cent tin. The people here will make a demonstration to prove that tin can be mined at a profit in this part of the Black Hills. The plant will have a capacity of about twenty tons of ore a day to start with.

Negro Elected.

Owatonna, Minn., March 20.—As a result of the election of Essex Liddington, a negro, as constable, the race question has created something of a stir in local political circles. Cord King, the former constable, was decidedly popular with the legal fraternity, and the citizens in general, and at the time the time the negro was nominated the whole affair was considered as a huge joke.

However Liddington refused to consider the matter in that light and qualified for the office.

Senate Adjourns.

Washington, March 20.—The special session of the senate was, at 3:39 Saturday, adjourned sine die, with the Santo Domingo treaty still on the calendar.

All of the nominations sent in were confirmed with the exception of five, the most important of which was that of Judge James Wickersham, to succeed himself as judge of the district court in Alaska.

Senator Elected.

Jefferson City, Mo., March 20.—Missouri's senatorial deadlock is broken. Major William Warner (Rep.) of Kansas City, was Saturday elected United States senator from Missouri, to succeed Marcis Marion Cockrell, the democratic senator.

Suicides in Tank.

Amery, Wis., March 20.—John Stromberg, a farmer who lived north of this village, committed suicide by drowning himself in the reserve tank of his windmill. It is believed he was temporary insane. He is survived by a widow and a number of small children.

The farmer's of Eastern Clearwater County, are rejoicing over their ability to again defeat the bonding of that County, by the Bagley "Gang" to build a court house. The citizens the of County seat of that County will have to cultivate a more friendly feeling with the farmers, by giving them some assistance on roads, before asking them to vote funds for a County court house.

The county seat removal fight must be getting rather warm over in Red Lake County if we are to judge from the following, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette." Editor Eastman says that Thief River Falls drew first blood in a fight at Plummer recently, and infers that Thief River Falls would come out on top in fistic encounters over the county seat question John's informant is evidently away off, but if John really wants to start the game with a series of fistic bouts the Gazette is informed that one W. J. Kelley stands ready to take up the Red Lake Falls side in a contest with the News editor. It is gently rumored that this Kelley drew "first blood" on friend John once before, and it is likely if such is the case that John couldn't be induced to back up his assertions on the mat. What about it John, do you want to engage in such a contest?

Advice About Eggs.

A writer in the Delineator gives some sensible advice about eggs. There is a general impression that eggs, acknowledged to be a complete food, may be safely eaten on all occasions. On the contrary, as the writer alluded to points out, invalids and young children should never be given eggs unless they are very fresh. Persons suffering from billiousness, gastritis and several other troubles find difficulty in digesting even fresh eggs. Some physicians declare that the slightest tendency toward rheumatism makes eggs undesirable. The white of eggs whipped to a froth with a little water is a good thing to give fever patients, as a rule, but the physician should be consulted before even this is given to a sick person.

Elevated Rivers.

The most elevated river in the world is the Desaguadero, in Bolivia. It is of a considerable depth, and its whole length, from the village Desaguadero, at the south extremity of Titicaca, to the north end of the lake Aullagas, is about 180 miles. The average elevation of the valley or tableland of Desaguadero above the level of the sea is about 13,000 feet. The river whose source lies highest is the Indus, which rises on the north of the Kailas Parbat mountain, in Tibet, 22,000 feet above sea level.

MAJESTIC SCENERY.

CURIOUS ROCK FORMATIONS ON THE COLUMBIA RIVER.

The Pillars of Hercules, Two Picturesque Basaltic Columns, Rise From the Oregon Side of the Stream. Towering Mountain Peaks.

The person who gave the name Pillars of Hercules to two picturesque basaltic columns rising from the edge of the Columbia river, in the Cascade range, on the Oregon side of the river, chose a name that was peculiarly appropriate. One of the interesting nuts which the geologists in this country have had to crack has been when and how the majestic Columbia burst through the basaltic Cascade range and found its way to the foaming margin of the Northern Pacific ocean. Who knows if the mighty Hercules—who, according to the ancient Greeks, when returning from the western kingdom of Geryon tore asunder the European and African continents in order that the waters of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean might mingle—did not go beyond Erythia, Geryon's island kingdom, and perform a like service for the Columbia river? It certainly would have been a feat worthy of his prowess. The Columbia river, after pursuing its placid way across the arid wastes of land on the eastern side of the Cascade range for nearly 200 miles, approaches the stately row of mountain peaks and pushes through between the towering peaks, Mounts Hood and Adams. After descending in a boiling cascade, from which it is said that the range of peaks derives its name, the Columbia, or, as it has often been called, the Oregon, rolls between ever widening banks to the white bulwark erected by the turbulent sea across its mouth.

One with a good strong arm could throw a stone across the river at the point where it enters the portals of the mountains. Literally the river has turned itself on edge in order to squeeze through. Some distance below this point the river pours over a succession of rugged ledges; then it smilingly passes on its way to the sea. The scenery in this cut through the mountains is thought by some to rival in sublimity that to be found anywhere in the world. Pinnacles of volcanic rock tower toward the heavens. On them have lodged seeds carried thither by the wind or birds. From these seeds trees have germinated. These cling to the rocks with a remarkable tenacity, and some of them, one would think, have a precarious living. On the very summit of one of these Pillars of Hercules a single representative of the evergreen trees which abound on the western slope of the Cascades elevates its foliage with all the impudent audacity and farcical diminutiveness of a clown's stovepipe hat. There it stands as securely fastened and its foliage as rakishly inclined as the hat on the clown's brow. What depth of soil it has in which to plant its roots doubtless not many know, for the ascent of the column has probably been accomplished by few. It is said that in the early days of commerce on the Columbia, when sailing ships plowed their way up the stream into the heart of the country, the yardarms would often become entangled in the branches of the trees which overhung the water. To the sailors after their long sojourn at sea it was like entering paradise. Beautiful waterfalls add to the charm of the scene. They come pouring as if from the sky over precipices 800 feet high and, hidden in mist, plunge into the serene bosom of the great river.

There are a number of other striking formations of basaltic columns besides the Pillars of Hercules. There are battlemented castles, rounded domes and a thousand rocks of other fantastic shapes. One group of pinnacles, down which numerous small streams descend, is called Cape Horn. Dominating the scene everywhere through this region are the two extinct volcanoes, snowcapped warders of the pass, Mount Adams on the north and Mount Hood on the south.

The Indians have a legend as to the origin of the obstructions to navigation which form the cascades. They say that the two earth giants, the mountains, jealous of each other's power, once quarreled furiously. They belched forth fire and smoke and hurled great stones at each other. Some of these stones passed across the river, while many others fell into the stream. In the fiery conflict a roof of rock which spanned the river was broken into fragments. The lodging of all these fragments and stones in the stream created the cascades.

The white man has several theories. One is that the ledge of solid rock over which the current sweeps was deposited by a great rockslide down the sides of the gorge. These mountain sides are wildernesses of broken crags extending to the summits, 3,000 feet high. The ledge is crowned with large bowlders so great that the massy body of water cannot move them.—New York Tribune.

EVERYBODY WANTS A TIP.

Experience of an American Woman While Visiting Venice.

One of the things that most astonish you with regard to the working class Italian is the perfect frankness with which he shows his desire for a tip. No false modesty obscures it. You may sometimes fear that you will forget it. Let such fears forever rest. He won't let you. He will follow you, asking you if you have your parasol when he sees it in your hand or if you know the way out when he has just told it to you. The whole poor population of Venice is absolutely half in its exhibition of a desire for any small sum of money the passerby may throw it. The children, one and all, make a demand for a soldino as a matter of course. It is a sort of greeting to every foreigner casually as a phrase of general usage.

Coming from the bath you fee the girl who has charge of the bathhouses. If you don't she has a dozen ways of making herself disagreeable next time you come. And do not allay your troubled anticipations by the thought she may not recognize you. One glimpse of a face fixes it in her memory for months. After that you fee the woman who takes care of your purse and jewelry. If you fee her enough she drags out from some inner recess a cheap mirror which distorts your countenance and allows you to look into it and see how truly hideous the human visage can be made to appear. Before the bath you have to fee the old woman who gives you your bathing suit. If you neglect her the next time you come she will give you a suit that doesn't fit you or is full of holes.

When you go out on the terrasse for a black coffee, which costs 10 cents, you fee the waiter. When you get into your gondola you fee the old man who draws it close to the steps with a hooked stick and offers you his withered old arm to lean on. When you get out of your gondola at the hotel you fee another old man with a hooked stick and a withered arm. And then at dinner, if you haven't just feed the waiter he will be cross, and up in your room afterward if the femme de chambre has not recently had a tip she will refuse to answer the bell.—San Francisco Argonaut.

WISDOM'S WHISPERS.

It's lucky we don't know how unlucky we may be.

It is difficult to take a woman by surprise in a love affair.

Some people are cranks simply because you can't turn them.

Some men secure all the glory attached to whatever part they assume.

A woman may know very little and yet have a way that carries conviction.

Where He Made His Money.

Years ago a gentleman settled in the south of England and became very popular in the neighborhood. The county families could never discover how he had made his money, but were satisfied by his solemn assurance that it was not in trade. Nothing could exceed the ordinary gravity of his demeanor, which, indeed, caused him to be placed on the commission of peace, but now and then, without any apparent provocation, he would burst into such a laugh as no one ever heard before except in one place.

Where they could have heard it puzzled the county families for five and twenty years, but at last he was betrayed unconsciously by his own grandchild, who after a visit to a traveling circus innocently exclaimed, "Why, grandpa laughs just like the clown!"—James Payn.

Horses In the Time of Homer.

The horses used in Homer's time were war horses. The warriors were drawn in chariots. The art of riding was known, but it is alluded to as something unusual. Ulysses at the time of his shipwreck, "bestrode a plank, like a horseman on a big steed." There are reasons for believing that the practice of riding was much later than that of driving, and the myth of the centaur, where, according to Shakespeare, "man is incorpsed and deminatured with the beast," probably originated at an early period when the appearance of a man on horseback was a novel sight.

A Snub For Moliere.

A remarkable incident is reported for a suburban theater in Paris. The play was "Tartuffe," and at the end of the fourth act the manager of the company came in front of the curtain and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we shall not go any further with this piece, for the fifth act is unworthy of Moliere." How the audience took this announcement is not stated. Perhaps they went home and read the fifth act critically in the seclusion of the library.

Then He Sulked.

"Mrs. Guschley remarked to me that it must be pleasant to be married to a clever man," said Proudley's wife.

"And what did you say?" queried Proudley.

"I told her, of course, that I didn't know; that I had only been married once."

WHY TRAVEL ABROAD?

An American Should Give His First Study to His Home Land.

When Payne wrote "There's No Place Like Home," he gave poetic expression to the love he bore toward the ingle nook more precious than "temples or palaces." What flowers of rhetoric could approach in power of assertion these five little monosyllabic words, "There's No Place Like Home"—to gainsay which were impossible!

It is the great privilege of Americans to be able with no hyperbole to apply them to travel, for what is there in any part of the habitable globe more fraught with interest, instruction, education, refreshment of mind and body and uplifting of soul than nature has provided, with hand so lavish, for the delectation of those having the good fortune to dwell in this goodly land?

Would he see a Riviera? We have several on the shores of the azure waters both of the gulf and the Pacific, far distancing that laved by the Mediterranean.

Does he pine for snow capped mountains? Let him repair to the plains where Pike's Peak, Mount Logan and our other great elevations rear their hoary summits into cloudland!

Would he witness a majestic cataract? There is but one without a rival, the imperial Niagara—in the chain of our great lakes, most turbulent of links.

Neither Nile, Niger nor Ganges, great rivers though they are, are comparable to our own Mississippi, well named "The Father of Waters." Our peerless Hudson excels in picturesque effects the vaunted Rhine.

What of the beauties of the Golden Gate, on whose shores sits enthroned queenly San Francisco, pronounced peerless among cities by a much traveled European prince of imperial blood?

Where is there, even in miniature, anything to vie with that earthly paradise, the valley of the Yosemite; what to compare with the deep and rugged gorge through which passes to the sea the impetuous Colorado river?

The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, one of the world's wonders, is as yet but partially explored.

Why, then, travel abroad, while all these and vastly more than can be enumerated remain unseen at home?

"Are not Alana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" said Naaman the Syrian of old when ordered by the prophet to bathe himself in the Jordan for healing. Who can help admiring his pride of country and robust patriotism? Most worthy are they of emulation.

Be it for health or recreation, there is no grander travel field than that we have at home.—Travel.

The Rainy Day.

A well known artist [illegible] received a letter from a chap who has regularly made it a practice to borrow money of him. In this letter the chap who is always in financial difficulties surprised [illegible] an amendment by saying:

"This time I have decided to reverse the usual order of things, and, instead of borrowing from you, I inclose herewith $50, which I am going to ask that you will lay aside for me for a rainy day."

But the artist couldn't find any remittance in the letter. He searched for it on the floor, under the table—in fact, everywhere he thought he might have dropped it. Then quite accidentally he turned over the sheet on which the letter was written and discovered this postscript:

"I've just looked out of the window and find it's raining like the very deuce!"—Collier's.

A Story of Sir Robert Ball.

Sir Robert Ball, the noted British astronomer, on one occasion went to a remote town in Ireland to lecture on his favorite topic. Arriving at the station he looked for the expected conveyance, but found none. After all the other passengers had disappeared a man stepped up and said, "Maybe you're Sir Robert Ball?" On receiving an affirmative reply the man hastily apologized, saying, "Sure, your honor, I'm sorry I kept you waiting, but I was tould to look for an intellectual gintleman." Sir Robert thought that under the circumstances it would be better not to inquire what was the man's idea of intellectuality.

Old Time Railway Travel.

Third class passenger coaches in England used to be coupled on next to the engine. The travelers came in for terrible treatment when any accident occurred. At times the engine was driven tender first, in which case frozen hands could be warmed at its smokestack. The passengers were packed, seventy of them, into a truck eighteen feet in length by seven and a half in width. There was no roof and not, as a rule, proper protection at the sides.

Marital Persiflage.

"I must confess," remarked Mrs. Crabbe, "I don't believe there ever was a really perfect man." "Well," replied Mr. Crabbe, "Adam would have been perfect, I suppose, if Eve had only been made first." "How do you mean?" "Well, she would have bossed the job of making Adam."—Philadelphia Press.

The Thing to Do.

Johnson—He said I was an addle pated jackass. What do you advise me to do about it? Jackson—See a good veterinary.—Leslie's Weekly.

Something Lacking.

"I can shave myself as well as any barber."

"Ah, but you can't talk to yourself while you're doing it!"

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal.—Moore.

A Story of Brahms.

A rather celebrated composer asked to be allowed to play his very latest composition to Brahms, and did so with tremendous vigor, the perspiration streaming down his face as he pounded the piano. Brahms at the end of the performance picked up a sheet of the manuscript and, feeling it between his finger and thumb, enthusiastically exclaimed: "I say, where do you get your music paper? It's first rate!"

SEEDING IN PROGRESS IN WESTERN CANADA.

Mild Weather Is Bringing Thousands of Settlers.

The splendid yields of wheat, oats and barley produced by the farmers of Western Canada and the excellent prices received for the same, have been the means of giving an increased interest throughout the United States. As a result the inquiries made of the Agents of the Canadian Government have nearly doubled over those of the same period last year. Railroad companies are putting on increased carrying capacity to meet the demand made upon them for carrying passengers and freight. Everything points to a most prosperous year. There is room for hundreds of thousands additional settlers, much new land having been opened up for settlement this year.

It is quite interesting to look through the letters received from the Americans who have settled in Western Canada during the past few years, and considering the large number it is surprising how few there are who have not succeeded. An extract from a letter written by Mr. Geo. M. Griswold, of Red Deer, Alta., formerly of Grever, Montana, written on the 2d of January, is as follows:

"I am located one and one-half miles from a beautiful lake ten miles long, where there is church, school, three stores, creamery and two post offices. The fine stock, both cattle (cows and steers), horses, hogs and sheep are rolling fat, grazing in pasture to-day, just a little snow, hardly enough for good sleighing, as we just had a Chinook which has melted the roads and laid bare the fields and pasture. There are fine wheat, oats, barley and flax raised here, also winter wheat and timothy hay for export to British Columbia. This is a mixed farming and dairy country. This is the right time to get a foothold in the Canadian West, as it was some years ago in the United States. We are free from wind gumbo and alkali here and have fine, clear, soft well and spring water at a depth of from 5 to 25 feet, and lots of open ever flowing springs."

Telegraphic advices from Medicine Hat say that seeding has commenced at Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, and other points. At the former place the temperature moderated gradually until on the 19th the maximum was 45 and the minimum 26. Thermometer readings since then have been as follows: 20th, 47 and 38; 21st, 54 and 34; 22d, 56 and 39; 23d, 48 and 40; 24th, 48 and 26.

During the last few days in February considerable plowing was done near Lethbridge. P. A. Pulley, a recent arrival from Montana, plowed and harrowed 15 acres and E. Laliborty about the same amount. Rev. Coulter White has also been harrowing his farm. All report the ground frost free and in excellent condition. Bricklaying has also begun in town. At Hartney, further east, on the 25th of February the sun was warm and bright, wheeled carriages were in use and the plowed fields look as if they are ready for the press drills. There is every appearance that spring has arrived, but farmers do not wish to be deceived by appearances and consequently have not commenced to use their bluestone and seed wheat.

An Ex-Sheriff Talks.

Scott City, Kan., March 20th.—(Special)—Almost every newspaper tells of cures of the most deadly of kidney diseases by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism and Bladder troubles, in fact any disease that is of the kidneys or caused by disordered kidneys is readily cured by this great American remedy.

But it is in curing the earlier stages of kidney complaint that Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing their greatest work. They are preventing thousands of cases of Bright's disease and other deadly ailments by curing Kidney Disease when it first shows its presence in the body.

Speaking of this work Ex-Sheriff James Scott of Scott County, says:

"I have used eight boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and must say that they are just the thing for Kidney Disease. We have tried many kidney medicines but Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best of all."

Last spring and summer I used Dr. Pusheck's-Kuro with marvelous results. I regard this remedy as the wonder of the age. For years I have suffered with Nervousness, and when I got up mornings would be dizzy and for moments would have blind staggers. I have been under the care of four physicians: their treatment did not do me a particle of good. I have used three packages of Pusheck's-Kuro and am now a well and happy woman. Pusheck's-Kuro has created new blood and flesh for me; since using it I have gained 30 pounds. I lose no opportunity to recommend it to my many friends here. Very respectfully,

Mrs. W. Oury.

SOUTHERN CONDITIONS AND POSSIBILITIES.

In no part of the United States has there been such wonderful Commercial, Industrial and Agricultural development as along the lines of the Illinois Central and the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroads in the States of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, within the past ten years. Cities and towns have doubled their population. Splendid business blocks have been erected. Farm lands have more than doubled in value. Hundreds of industries have been established and as a result there is an unprecedented demand for

Day Laborers, Skilled Workmen, and especially Farm Tenants.

Parties with small capital, seeking an opportunity to purchase a farm home; farmers who would prefer to rent for a couple of years before purchasing; and day laborers in fields or factories should address a postal card to Mr. J. F. Merry, Asst. General Passenger Agent, Dubuque, Iowa, who will promptly mail printed matter concerning the territory above described, and give specific replies to all inquiries.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Counterfeiters.

Three men charged with counterfeiting 25 cent pieces were brought to Duluth and were incarcerated in the county jail, where they will be held to the next United States grand jury. There names are Phillip Conuers, Harry Burton and Warran W. Moore.

The men were arrested at Deer river, in Itasca county, and a large quantity of the bogus money was found in the premises they are said to have been occupying. A complete outfit of molds and dies also were found. When confronted by the officers who have been on the trail of the alleged counterfeiters operating in the northern part of the state, they protested their innocence.

The arrest was effected by Deputy United States Marshal Tuffs assisted by secret service men.

Pheasants.

S. F. Fullerton, executive agent of the game and fish commission, began to make preparations for the establishment of a pheasant hatchery at Willow Brook fish hatchery, St. Paul. Orders were placed for the purchase of fifty ring-neck pheasants with which to start the hatchery.

This is the first venture that the commission has made in attempting to stock the woods of Minnesota with game birds, and should it prove successful, other species may be added. The pheasant is very prolific, laying over sixty eggs a year, and it is thought that at the end of the first year some of them may be placed in the woods.

G. A. R.

At the final session of the Grand Army of the Republic in the old capitol building in St. Paul the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

C. F. McDonald, St. Cloud, commander; James O. Pierce, Minneapolis, senior vice commander; E. F. Barret, Le Sueur, junior vice commander; D. A. Tawney, St. Paul, chaplain; J. F. Locke, Long Prairie, surgeon; council of administration, E. F. Kenrick, St. Paul; J. O. Miline, Duluth; A. W. Guild, Minneapolis; C. F. Greening, Grand Meadow; J. A. Norris, Sauk Center; O. S. Clark and E. N. Leavens were appointed by the new commander to succeed themselves as adjutant and quartermaster generals.

Will Use Water.

Water from Minnehaha Falls will be used in christening the battleship Minnesota.

Governor Johnson so announced. Miss Rose Marie Schaller, the university student, who is to christen the battleship, called on the governor and discussed the subject. Both had received numerous letters from temperance advocates, urging that water instead of wine be used for the christening.

They decided that unless there is too strenuous objection from the shipbuilders, who will be in charge of the ceremony, a bottle will be broken containing pure water from the historic Minnehaha.

Incendiary.

The citizens of Owatonna are incensed over the alleged attempt to burn the Metropolitan theater in that city. Smoke was discovered issuing from the doors and the windows and the alarm was given just in time to save the building from destruction.

Chief M. Twiford of the fire department in a statement declares that the work is that of incendiaries, who have some motive destroying the building. He states that when he arrived at the building he discovered a quantity of kerosene sprinkled about the floor underneath the stage.

Killed by Cars.

Fred Rackow, a deaf and dumb man, was run down and instantly killed in Winona, by a Milwaukee switch train. Olaf Hovelson, one of the trainmen, tried to pull the man from the track but was unable to do so and Hovelson had difficulty in saving his own life. Rackow was struck by the drawbar and his neck fell acrosss the rail. The wheels passed over it severing his head srom his trunk. Once before he had a narrow escape from death in the same place and almost the same manner. He was a laborer and is survived by a wife and a number of grown children.

William Salane is held up and robbed while near the public market in St. Paul.

The public examiner authorized the State bank of Dunbar to do business, capital stock, $16,000.

Many members of the university senior class who are preparing to teach are already filling their applications with various school boards throughout the state.

There is much talk about the shortage of this winter's lumber cut on account of the early thaw, and some authorities claim the cut is reduced more than 50 per cent. This is very much too great an estimate, however. In fact, there will be little shortage, and probably 75 per cent of the winter's cut is in shape. The winter cut is less of a factor than it was when railroad and summer logging was considered.

The state historical society may request the war department not to replace the cement coat recently scraped from the old round tower at Fort Snelling.

WOMEN NOT TRUTHFUL

This Statement Has Been Unjustly Made, Because Modest Women Evade Questions Asked By Male Physicians.

Mrs. J. H. Farmer
Mrs. Ella Lee

An eminent physician says that "Women are not truthful; they will lie to their physician." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex.

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked, even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women.

Is it any wonder, then, that women continue to suffer and that doctors fail to cure female diseases when they cannot get the proper information to work on?

This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham. To her they can and do give every symptom, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients, through her correspondence with them than the physician who personally questions them.

If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

The fact that this great boon, which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in.

Mrs. Ella Lee, Frankford, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I want to thank you for what your medicine has done for me.

"Three years ago I had inflammation of the ovaries and ulcers on my womb. I was under the doctor's care for about three months, and the only time I was not in pain was when under the influence of morphine. The doctor finally said I never would be better, and would be an invalid the rest of my life. I had given up in despair, but one evening I came across one of your advertisements and decided to write you for advice. I did so and commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began to improve at once, and to-day I am a well woman, and I know it is all due to your advice and medicine.

Mrs. J. H. Farmer of 2809 Elliott Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot thank you enough for what your advice and medicines have done for me. They have done me more good than all the doctors I ever had.

"For the last eight years I have suffered with female troubles; was very weak; had nervous prostration, and could not do my work; but I am happy to say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made a different woman of me. I am in perfect health and have gained in weight from 98 pounds to 122 pounds."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record for actual cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS with Pusheck's Kuro is that it does what no other medicine can do. It affects the grand trio—the Stomach, the Blood, and the Nerves—that controls and regulates the whole body—it corrects the digestion and assimilation of food; keeps up the body, and corrects, regulates and strengthens the nerves. This explains why one medicine permanently cures so many apparently different diseases.—Other remedies work on one organ only, and cannot effect a complete cure. Progress of Hostilities Between Russia and Japan—Doings at Washington—Items of Interest from All Over the World.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

That the Russian retreat toward Harbin has been blocked is the official announcement made by Linevitch, who in a message to St. Petersburg announces the appearance of Japanese cavalry and infantry in front of the advance posts of the retiring Russians.

The Russian retreat may be continued to Tsitsihar, 300 miles west of Harbin, according to reports from the front. Meanwhile the Russians have taken a temporary stand north of Tie pass.

Revised figures of the Japanese losses at the battle of Mukden places the number at 50,000, and revised estimates of the Russian losses from the commencement of the battle of Mukden and ending with the fighting at Tie pass place the total at 175,000 killed, wounded or captured.

The women and children are reported to be leaving Harbin and the business houses are closing.

Paris bankers renewed negotiations for a Russian loan, and their action is taken as a sign that peace between Russia and Japan is at hand. This is supported by the intimations of officials.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

BILL FIXING PAY OF INSURANCE COMMISSIONER IS CONSIDERED.

SENATE BUSY WITH CODE.

The End in Sight—Time for the Introduction of Bills to Cease Now Reached.

St. Paul, March 23.—An indication that the session is in its last stages is to be found in the fact that no bills can be introduced after next Saturday, the constitution prescribing that none shall be introduced during the latter twenty days. After that day it will require a written request from the governor to entitle new bills to any consideration whatever.

While the senate is passing the time as best it may until the judiciary committee shall have concluded consideration of the revised code, an event fixed by Chairman Somerville for some day this week, the lower house is grinding away with great rapidity and as a result of two sessions daily it has already passed and sent up to the senate almost a score of very important measures. It is no exaggeration to say that the present house of representatives does business faster than any which has sat in the capitol for a dozen years past. This is not due to the superiority of the individual members over those of the past so much as it is to the absence of talkative opposition when important bills come up for final action.

An example of this was furnished yesterday when, by almost unanimous vote, that body passed the Peterson bill, imposing a franchise tax and creating the office of state tax commissioner. Only two years ago the same measure took up many days of time. It was then known as the Haugland bill. It is an important measure providing that the governor appoint a tax commissioner at an annual salary of $3,500, who shall have entire supervision of the levying of taxes in the state. This official is to report to each legislature the result of his observations and make such legislative recommendations as he may deem necessary. The franchise tax is to be paid by all public service corporations and the amount to be paid is to be arrived at by ascertaining the market value of stocks and bonds and deducting therefrom the value of real estate and other property as listed for taxation. This measure is almost certain to meet strenuous opposition in the senate, where it met death two years ago.

Road and Bridge Tax.

The passage by the house of the bill of the road and bridge committee creating a state highway commission and increasing the tax from 1-20th to ¼th of a mill was another evidence of business-like qualities.

Still another important measure adopted was that introduced by S. D. Peterson, prohibiting telegraph companies from charging more than 25 cents for each ten words between points in Minnesota.

More important than any of these perhaps was the Smith bill, providing for the holding of a convention for the purpose of revising the constitution of the state. All these measures went through with little or no opposition at yesterday's session.

The Lund bill, wiping out state banks, was passed by a narrow majority. As the bill related to banking, it required a two-thirds vote, and for a time it looked as though it might fall by the wayside.

Another bill of sensational character which was passed with the others was that introduced by Representative W. I. Nolan, providing the whipping post cure for wife-beaters. The author of this bill made the claim that it was introduced and urged as being in line with sentiments expressed by President Roosevelt.

Railway Rates.

The Gandrud bill, prohibiting railway companies from raising rates without the consent of the railroad and warehouse commission was passed, and the now famous Horton bill, placing control of the new state capitol building in the hands of the state capitol commission for the next two years, came under the wire a winner. Last, but not least, the W. A. Nolan bill, requiring theaters and halls of amusement in Minnesota to provide a fire-proof curtain in front of the stage, was given approval.

It will be understood by anyone that the passage of the above bills in one day comes very nearly breaking the legislative record in Minnesota.

Representative Ware is again to the front with a bill to regulate railways. This time he is joint author with Representative Anderegg of a bill which is, as nearly as possible, a copy of the measure recently introduced in Wisconsin, known as the LaFollette bill. The measure is one of the most sweeping character and very voluminous. It proposes an entire change in the railway commission law. The bill gives the commission power to investigate and adjust freight and passenger rates on all railroads and gives it control over the charges of express companies. It requires complete annual statements, and oftener if desired, from railroad companies of those to whom passes are issued and for what reason. Power to investigate alleged discriminations of whatever nature are conferred on the commission and to make regulations to suppress the evils. The commission is also given authority to regulate demurrage charges and the movements of freights. The bill is made effective Aug. 1, 1905. While the Wisconsin bill creates an appointive railroad commission, no change in the present Minnesota method of electing its commissioners is contemplated by the Ware-Anderegg bill.

The senate passed the Ward anti-bucketshop bill.

Governor's Secretary.

In committee on the whole the senate recommended favorably the Cole bill placing the governor's private secretary upon a salary of $3,600 per year and providing that all fees be covered into the state treasury. The senate killed the Schain bill providing for the appointment of county assessors in all counties having more than 10,000 inhabitants.

A bill offered by Senator Barker does away with old time caucuses and primaries, and provides that all delegates to county conventions shall be nominated at a primary election to be held the third Tuesday in June. The county convention is to be held the following Tuesday to elected delegates to the state convention. The primary elections to choose delegates to the county conventions to nominate county officers shall be held at the same time and place and conducted by the same officers as already provided for the other primaries. Delegates cannot give proxies, vacancies being filled by the other delegates.

Senator Laybourn is the author of a bill which would attempt to carry out recommendations made by Gov. Johnson in his inaugural message. It prohibits the consolidation or merger of insurance companies organized under the laws of Minnesota until after a commission consisting of the governor, the insurance commissioner and the attorney general shall have decided that the interests of policyholders are fully looked after.

The special committee of the house, which has been investigating fire insurance rates, has at last agreed upon the form of a bill which, when introduced, will cover points to be made in its report. The committee reached the conclusion that an anti-compact law would be valueless, and therefore provides in its bill that the office of state fire marshal be created? That officer and his deputies shall investigate suspicious or incendiary fires, as well as all complaints of discriminations in fire rates, making an exhaustive report to the insurance commissioner. He is also to begin the accumulation of a complete record of conditions prevailing in every community of the state so that in the end the state will have a set of records for the benefit of the general public which will be just as complete as those possessed by the fire underwriters. The measure imposes an additional tax of ¼ of 1 per cent on fire insurance premiums collected in the state, for the maintenance of the department.

Last Day on Bills.

St. Paul, March 27.—Saturday was the last day on which bills may be introduced in the legislature, and it is well that it is so. Never in the history of the state have more bills of importance been introduced, even if consideration of the revised code should be passed over, and the latter in itself is almost enough to keep the members busy for ninety days. Owing to the fact that the house rid itself of the code several weeks ago it has been in better position to attend to other business and today it has disposed of nearly half of the more important measures, and prospects are fair that very little will be left unconsidered when it adjourns. The senate, on the contrary, will not be able, with the best of intentions, to begin to take care of the bills with which it will be flooded by the lower house. The judiciary committee will not complete its report upon the code in time to have anything done with it before Tuesday next, at the earliest, and it is likely that the date for its consideration will be set for an even later day, and when that does come to the front the indications now are that debate will be almost unlimited, and an attempt is likely, in certain quarters, to prevent its final passage by tactics of delay. There are divergent opinions expressed by well posted senators about the chances of passing the code at this session. Many, and the lieutenant governor is one, are quoted as saying that they doubt its passage, while floor leaders like Senator Somerville, chairman of the judiciary committee, and Senator Lord, chairman of the rules committee, seem to believe that it will get through. Gossip has it that in case opponents of the bill resort to dilatory methods and succeed, the governor will call an extra session to begin the day following adjournment. This is mere rumor, however, for the governor himself is not saying a word, though it is known that he inclines to the belief that the code can be adopted at this session just as well as ever.

In committee of the whole the house recommended for passage the Wells bill prohibiting option trading and bucket-shopping generally. The bill is the most stringent of all its kind considered by the legislature and it is claimed that if enacted into law it will drive the Minneapolis chamber of commerce out of business.

Quite a breeze was created in the senate over the report of the finance committee's report on the Cole bill. The bill originally provided for a salary of $5,000 for the insurance commissioner, the employment of an actuary and the turning of all fees received by the insurance department into the state treasury. The majority report of the committee made the salary of the commissioner $4,500 and cut off the actuary. Hot words were passed and Senator Laybourn, who presented the majority report, alleged that Chairman Brower, who handed in the minority report, had tried to juggle with the committee. The latter became angry, and after the report of the majority had been sustained by the senate, Mr. Brower gave notice that he would move for the appointment of a special committee to whom should be referred all bills for the increase of the salaries of officials.

[illegible] Divorce Problem.

Representative Joseph Mannix, of Hennepin, himself a bachelor, has a solution of the divorce problem and has introduced a bill in which his ideas are embodied. He would have a commission of three, one learned in the law, appointed by the governor, to examine divorce laws in the various states and report to the governor in four months. The governor is then to confer with other chief executives of the union by calling a congress to meet at Washington, D. C., to consider uniformity of divorce laws. The governor and his commission are to be Minnesota's delegates. An appropriation of $600 is called for by the bill.

The house committee on general legislation has finally decided to report favorably the Perley bill removing the state university and normal schools from the jurisdiction of the state board of control. As amended the bill leaves the matters of fuel and insurance in the hands of the board of control and the latter is also to let contracts for new buildings.

After a strenuous session of more than two hours, at which the house considered the Johnson bill, establishing county schools of agriculture and economics as a special order, the bill won out, with 12 votes more than necessary for its passage. The bill carries an appropriation of $20,000.

Anti-Pass Bill.

The senate railroad committee returned an unfavorable report upon the Peterson anti-pass bill, which also prohibited railways from charging more than 2 cents a mile for passenger traffic, but Senators Cole, Thompson and Jepson brought in a minority report recommending that the bill be placed upon general orders and considered by the senate. The bill had been amended to make the rate 2½ cents a mile, but that failed to save it. Some of the senators went so far as to attempt to justify the custom of giving passes, while others explained their hostility to the measure by saying that they were in favor of the abolition of passes, but that they thought it unjust to the railways to ask them to reduce passenger rates. The author of the bill made the point that by wiping out deadhead business the companies could afford to make a reduction, but the senate supported the majority of the committee by a vote of 34 to 26, and the bill was killed.

The house committee on public accounts and expenditures, which has just completed an investigation of the charges made by ex-Public Examiner S. T. Johnson against Former Auditor R. C. Dunn and Auditor Iverson, has completed that work and will find, so it is said, that while a change in bookkeeping methods is desirable in the office of the state auditor, no wrong-doing can be alleged against either Dunn or Iverson, and that the state lost no money by any transaction of those two officials.

The special committee appointed to investigate the matter of railway rates, headed by Senator Eberhart, has concluded the work of investigation and is now trying to agree upon a report. It is said that an agreement is impossible, and that possibly three different reports will be turned in. Little of value was unearthed by the committee.

Increased Pay.

House members are having a merry time with the Smith bill which increases the pay of legislators from a per diem of $5 to $500 annually. It is generally felt that members do not receive sufficient recompense, and although the bill provides that it is not to take effect until after the expiration of the terms of the present members there are many who fear criticism if the bill should get through. Thursday the bill came up for passage and lacked three votes. Friday it was up again on a motion to reconsider and lacked but one vote. Representative Smith gave notice that he would again move to reconsider, and the end is yet to come.

Senator Wilson is the author of a bill which makes the term of the governor and the lieutenant four years and makes both officials ineligible for re-election.

Senator McGill is the author of a bill raising the salaries of the state treasurer, state auditor and secretary of state to $5,000 annually.

The house has passed the bill introduced by Representative Lennon at the request of the commercial travelers of the state, providing for the licensing of all hotels and lodging houses, and calling for the appointment of an inspector at a salary of $1,200 and expenses.

MORE BOMBS ARE THROWN.

CHIEF OF POLICE OF WARSAW WOUNDED WHILE RIDING ON THE STREET.

The Second Bomb Thrower Escapes after a Chase and Shooting a Policeman Dead.

Warsaw, March 27.—A bomb was thrown into the carriage of Baron von Nolken, chief of police of Warsaw, at 8 o'clock last evening. Baron von Nolken's injuries are serious, but it is thought he will recover.

According to latest information, the attack on Baron von Nolken was the result of an elaborate conspiracy of the revolutionary party.

Shortly before 8 o'clock last night an elegantly dressed man went to the police station at Praga, a large suburb of Warsaw, on the Vistula, and threw a bomb into a room of the station where the men assembled before going on duty. Six policemen were wounded and the furniture, as well as one wall, was destroyed.

The bomb thrower, in trying to escape, met a policeman and shot twice, wounding the officer in the stomach.

The prisoner himself was wounded and has been placed in the hospital. He is a Jew, but his identification has not yet been discovered.

A telephone message was immediately sent to Baron von Nolken, accompanied by a police official, immediately took a carriage and started for Praga.

When passing the castle where the governor general lives, a man standing on the pavement threw a bomb at the carriage.

Baron von Nolken, who was sitting on the side nearest the assailant, received the full charge of the bomb, while his companion escaped unhurt. The coachman was thrown from the box and the carriage was smashed.

Baron von Nolken was removed to the city hall and doctors were summoned, who found he had received injuries on the head, neck, arm and leg, which are believed to be serious.

St. Petersburg, [illegible] peasant movement in [illegible] west continues to spread.

There has been a renewal of the burning and destruction of property in the Chinigoff government, the peasants attacking especially property of M. Tereschtenko, a rich sugar refiner who has nearly 100,000 acres planted to seed.

Several rich landlords have been murdered.

Disorders have broken out at Yalta in the Crimea, where shops along the quay and in the bazar have been pillaged.

Jews are much alarmed at the renewal of anti-Semetic demonstrations of Kishineff. The government is taking active measures to prevent outbreaks.

A revolutionary movement of considerable proportions is making itself felt in connection with the industrial disturbances in the region around Siedlco, Bielsk, Vladslavsk, Rodin and Lukvo, south and southeast of Warsaw.

Back to the Pen.

Minneapolis, March 27.—Chris Norbeck, the detective who was sent to Stillwater for three years, charged with complicity in the "grafting" schemes of the Ames administration, will have to face the prison doors again and serve out his term.

He was arrested in a saloon at 7th and Jackson streets, St. Paul, helplessly drunk, by Patrolman Hennessy. He was not recognized and was hustled to the central station like any common drunk.

The prison authorities were communicated with and notice was given to hold him, as drunkenness is a violation of the parole upon which Norbeck was released July 13, 1904. Norbeck was sentenced to three years' imprisonment Oct. 30, 1902.

A Vast Army.

St. Petersburg, March 27.—Stung by the wholesale criticisim lately heaped upon the waa office for its unpreparedness and incapacity in providing the Manchurian army with men, guns and munitions, the army organ lays bare what has been done since the opening of hostilities, giving the exact figures.

From this it appears that up to March 12 the war office had dispatched 13,408 officers, 761,467 men, 146,408 horses, 1521 guns and 716,321 tons of munitions and supplies to the front, declaring the transportations strained the Siberian railroad to its utmost capacity. Only 300,000 men are left.

Seattle, March 27.—Many thousands ordinary letters, all of the second class matter and all of the registered mail was destroyed by fire and water in the Great Northern wreck in Idaho.

This mail came from St. Paul and the East.

It was intended for distribution in the state of Washington.

MADNESS IN PLANTS.

Mexican Weeds That When Used Will Drive Men Crazy.

Marihuana is a weed used by people of the lower class and sometimes by soldiers, but those who make larger use of it are prisoners sentenced to long terms. The use of the weed and its sale, especially in barracks and prisons, are very severely punished, yet it has many adepts, and Indian women cultivate it because they sell it at rather high prices.

The dry leaves of marihuana, alone or mixed with tobacco, make the smoker wilder than a wild beast. It is said that immediately after the first three or four drafts of smoke smokers begin to feel a slight headache; then they see everything moving, and finally they lose all control of their mental faculties. Everything, the smokers say, takes the shape of a monster, and men look like devils. They begin to fight, and of course everything smashed is a monster "killed." But there are imaginary beings whom the wild man cannot kill, and these inspire fear until the man is panic stricken and runs.

Not long ago a man who had smoked a marihuana cigarette attacked and killed a policeman and badly wounded three others. Six policemen were needed to disarm him and march him to the police station, where he had to be put into a straitjacket. Such occurrences are frequent.

There are other plants equally dangerous, among them the tolyache, a kind of loco weed. The seeds of this plant boiled and drunk as tea will make a person insane. Among some classes of Mexico it is stated that Carlotta, the empress of Mexico, lost her mind because she was given tolvache in a refreshment.

There is in the state of Michoacan another plant the effects of which upon the human organism are very curious. The plant grows wildly in some parts of Michoacan, and natives have observed that whenever they traverse a field where there were many of such plants they lose all notion of places. For this reason when a person reaches a place where there are many of these plants he forgets where he is going, where the place is and even where he is and what he is doing there. It takes from three to four hours for a person affected by the smell of the plant to recover the full control of his mental faculties.

Another very curious plant is the one called de las carreras in some places where it grows. When a person drinks a brew of the leaves or seeds of the plant he feels an impulse to run and will run until he drops dead or exhausted.—Mexican Herald.

A Dream With a Moral.

A rich lady dreamed that she went to heaven and there saw a mansion being built. "Whom is that for?" she asked of the guide.

"For your gardener."

"But he lives in the tiniest cottage on earth, with barely room for his family. He might live better if he did not give away so much to the miserably poor folks."

Farther on she saw a tiny cottage being built. "And whom is that for?" she asked.

"That is for you."

"But I have lived in a mansion on earth. I would not know how to live in a cottage."

The words she heard in reply were full of meaning. "The Master Builder is doing his best with the material that is being sent up."

Then she awoke, resolving to lay up treasure in heaven.—Chicago Post.

The Englishman's Morning Tub.

Until the beginning of the seventeenth century English princes and other babes were immersed three times in the font when christened. The last Prince of Wales who was submitted to this ordeal appears to have been Arthur, the son of Henry II., who died in 1502 at the age of sixteen. The abolition of the practice was strongly objected to upon sanitary grounds by Sir John Floyer, a celebrated physician, who died in 1734. "Immersion," he says, "would prevent many hereditary diseases," and "the English will return to it when physic has given them a clear proof that cold baths are both safe and useful." So our morning tub is the outcome of royal immersion.—London Mail.

Freshness of Youth.

He was a respectable looking man, and, judging from his appearance, he was a butcher by trade, and this belief was verified a few minutes later. He carried a white apron under his arm, and as he entered a car a huge cleaver dropped from the bundle to the floor. A youth who had not reached the age of discretion sank out merrily. "Say, mister, you dropped your pocket knife." The passengers laughed, but they could not help but think that the youth took a long chance on kidding a man with a cleaver.—Albany Journal.

BOATING ON THE NILE.

The Best Pilots Run Aground Two or Three Times a Day.

Navigation on the Nile is not so complicated a matter as upon the north Atlantic, writes Alonzo Clarke Robinson in Outing. To run at full speed upon a sand bar is an occurrence of such frequency as hardly to elicit a comment from the passengers. The crew take more interest because they are obliged to push the boat off again with poles, and this entails a great amount of shouting and some work. The Nile below the first cataract is a fairly broad, muddy river, flowing between deposed banks varying from six to eight to twenty to thirty feet in height. Its surface is interrupted everywhere by sand spits and islands upon which are to be seen thousands of birds. The channel, if such it can be called, winds from one side to the other and changes completely with every flood; hence even the best pilots run aground two or three times a day. It is, of course, impossible to proceed at night, and each day's voyage comes to an end wherever darkness happens to overtake one. The boat's nose is simply run plump on the bank, two men leap out and drive stakes to which to make fast, and there you are for the night. A very simple and effective method, without any ostentation and requiring very little knowledge of mathematics; it has also the advantage of variety. Sometimes one finds oneself alone beneath the wonderful Egyptian moon lighting up the river, the distant cliffs and the silent, empty plain, or perhaps one stops near some little native village, in which case the bank is lined with silent, curious figures, who crouch for hours wrapped in their white cloth coverings. Once we tied up beside a lonely brick kiln. The sight was a weird one. The red flare of the furnace, fed with sugar cane, cast intermittent flashes of light into the night, in and out of which moved black half naked natives, while overhead was the cloudless, star lit sky of Egypt.

OUR INAUGURAL OATH.

It Is the Shortest and Simplest Taken by Any Ruler.

The oath of office taken by the incoming president of the United States is the shortest and the simplest required of any ruler on earth. It is prescribed by the constitution and is as follows:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and, to the best of my ability, protect, preserve and defend the constitution of the United States."

This oath is slowly repeated by the president elect after the chief justice of the supreme court, in the presence of the public upon a platform erected in front of the main door on the eastern side of the capitol. While the oath is being repeated the president elect and the chief justice face each other and hold with their right hands between them a Bible furnished by some person interested or especially procured for the occasion, which becomes the property of the president after it has been appropriately inscribed and sealed by the chief clerk of the supreme court.

At the close of the oath the president elect bows his head and kisses the open page of the book, and it has been customary for him or for his wife or a friend to select some appropriate passage at which the book shall be opened and the verse upon which he shall press his lips. Sometimes, when those interested forget or neglect to choose a passage, the Bible is opened at random, but the clerk of the supreme court is always careful to note and mark the exact place where the lips touched the page.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Horseshoe Legend.

Here is an explanation of the old horseshoe superstition: St. Dunstan was a skilled farrier. One day while at work in his forge the devil entered in disguise and requested Dunstan to shoe his "single hoof." The saint, although he recognized his malign customer, acceded, but caused him so much pain during the operation that Satan begged him to desist. This St. Dunstan did, but only after he had made the evil one promise that neither he nor any of the lesser evil spirits, his servants, would ever molest the inmates of a house where the horseshoe was displayed.

A Servile House of Lords.

When King Henry VIII.'s name was spoken in his presence in the house of lords every peer prostrated himself with Asiatic servility. An entry in the records of the house gives the substance of a speech delivered by the chancellor on Jan. 16, 1541, in which the king's goodness and wisdom are extolled, and it tells us that whenever his majesty was mentioned, "which happened often," all the lords prostrated themselves, bowing to the ground as one man.

Force of the Future.

Cut off the future, and man is the most timid of creatures. The demons and dragons are too terrible for him to face and attack. But spread before him the illimitable future, and he will dare all things, certain of victory at last. Any night, however filled with weeping, can be endured by one who knows that joy is coming in the morning.

CUSTOMS IN MOROCCO.

The Scene at the Slave Market In Marrakish.

[illegible] we are talking [illegible] writes a traveler [illegible] like their [illegible] from a respectable [illegible] them we must seem no better than savages. In the first place, we sit [illegible] not on the ground. We [illegible] which, as every [illegible] believe [illegible] is a wicked act and defiles. [illegible] since bread is from Allah and [illegible] broken with the hand, but never touched with a knife. Then we [illegible] not know how to eat with our fingers, but use knives and forks and spoons that after mere washing are common property. We do not have water poured out over our fingers before the meal begins—the preliminary wash in the tent is invisible and does not count—and we do not say 'Bismillah' before we start eating. Our daily bathing seems to puzzle them greatly. I do not notice that little Larbi and his brother Kasem ever tempt the sea to wash or drown them. Yet they look healthy enough and are full of dignity."

Vividly delineated, too, by the same writer are the scenes in the slave market at Marrakish. "The various booths where the salesmen keep their slaves, of all ages and both sexes, are carefully screened from sight until the market opens. Then one at a time these booths empty themselves of their contents and men, women and children are marched around the inclosure, the auctioneer crying out the latest bid, and the slave owner pointing out the best features of his articles for sale.

"They are all gorgeously attired and decked out to show them off to the best advantage. One by one the youngest and the fairest and the fittest are chosen until at the end of the long hot day only a few aged and weary and worn are left. They have tramped round and round the market all day long, but they are old and therefore not wanted."

A GREEDY CORMORANT.

He Devoured Two Pounds of Stones as Part of a Meal.

"When I was a keeper in the National Zoological park in Washington I observed a remarkable example of the well known greediness of the cormorant.

Four little cormorants came to the zoo and were placed in a cage in which dogs had once been kept. Outside was a pebbly yard in which the dogs had exercised. The cormorants waddled about this yard and seemed to be having a fine time until one morning I noticed that one of them was sitting on the ground unable to rise. He did not waddle up to get his meal of whole fish, each usually about half as long as his own body, and as the others came rushing toward me to get their share I knew that he was ill. I went into the cage and lifted him up. What was my amazement to hear something grating and clanking inside of him! And he seemed surprisingly heavy. I at once called the head keeper, who decided to investigate by means of a surgical operation.

He took out two pounds of stones, one of which was four inches long, two and a half inches wide and about half an inch thick! The poor chap seemed to feel relieved. In a few days he became convalescent, ate his food regularly and seemed to be doing well. Then that hooked bill reached under the feathers and tore out some of the surgeon's stitches, which were undoubtedly irritating, as the wound was beginning to heal. As a result of this interference the wound opened, and, as the weather was hot, the patient died five days after the operation.—St. Nicholas.

Longfellow.

Conspicuous among the multitude of famous and interesting persons whom Moncure D. Conway mentions in his autobiography is the poet Longfellow.

At the time Mr. Conway was studying in Cambridge in 1853 Longfellow was the professor of poetry in Harvard university, and it is plain that the affection and reverence the poet then inspired in the young student have survived the half century that has passed.

"Longfellow's personality was potent among us," says Mr. Conway. "His modesty, his amiable man to man manners toward the young, the absence of airs or mannerisms, his transparent veracity of mind and respect for all sincere opinions, were very engaging. He was universally beloved."

In Praise of Cockneys.

Cockneys are the best natured people under the sun. It is notorious that a big London crowd is of all crowds in the world the most harmless and the easiest to manage. But see them also in their ordinary collections, outside the gallery door of a popular theater or crowding in the carriages of an excursion train—what fun and kindness and wholesome give and take! A deliberately rude or offensive cockney is hardly to be met.—G. S. Street in Pall Mall Gazette.

A rather celebrated composer asked to be allowed to play his very latest composition to Brahms, and did so with tremendous vigor, the perspiration streaming down his face as he pounded the piano. Effects of Prosperity.

In the six years of the country's greatest prosperity, from 1897 to 1903, average prices of breadstuffs advanced 65 per cent., meats 23.1 per cent., dairy and garden products 50.1 per cent. and clothing 24.1. All these were products of the farmer and stockman who profited more than any other class of the community by these advances. The miner benefited 42.1 per cent. by that advance in the average price of metals. The only decrease in the average prices of commodities in that period was in railway freight rates, which decreased from .798 per ton-mile in 1897 to .763 in 1903, a loss of 4.4 per cent. The report of the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that the average increase in the pay of railroad employes in that period was a trifle above 8.5 per cent.

The Battles Being Fought

between Russia and Japan bring out great examples of individual heroism. A 480 ACRE FARM YIELDS 25 PER CENT. PROFIT A YEAR.

What a Mercer County (Ohio) Farmer Received from One Year's Crop.

Extracts from an interesting letter from P. H. Rynhard, of Starbuck, Manitoba, Canada, gives an excellent idea of the prosperity of those who have gone from the United States to Canada. He says:

"I bought, August, 1903, 480 acres of land, paying $12,000 for it. We threshed 2,973 bushels of wheat and between 1,200 and 1,300 bushels of oats and barley from 200 acres. But part of the wheat went down before filling, and was not harvested except for hay. The crop was worth at threshing time $3,000. Besides 120 acres laying idle, except a timothy meadow, which is not included in this estimate. Counting the value of the product and the increase of value of land will pay me more than 25 per cent. on the investment. Two brothers in the same neighborhood bought 160 acres each six years ago. They have not done a single thing to this land except to fence it and break and cultivate about one-half of it. Harvested last year 28 bushels wheat per acre. This year 27 bushels per acre. They can get any day $25 per acre. These are only a few of many hundreds of such chances. It looks like boasting, but truth is justifiable, and the world ought to know it, especially the home-seeker. I know of quite a few farmers that have made fortunes in from 10 to 20 years, retired with from $20,000 to $100,000.

Writing concerning another district in the Canadian West, S. L. Short says:

"Dear Sir:—I have to inform you that I have just returned from the Carrot River Country in Saskatchewan, where I located land of the very finest black vegetable loam, which I am proud of, and will move in the spring. Farmers are still plowing there. A mild climate and beautiful country to behold. Cattle are fat and running outside. Wood and water good. Saw oats weighing 42 pounds to bushel. Potatoes large and well ripened; also wheat that brought there 82 cents. The country exceeded my expectations. Saw oats in stock, thicker on the ground than appears in many of the illustrations sent out in descriptive pamphlets. I have been in many western states, but the soil excels any I ever saw."

The Canadian Government Agents at different points report that the inquiries for literature and railroad rates, etc., to Western Canada are the greatest in the history of their work.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Wolf Bounties.

Wolf bounties for the last month show that the business of killing of wolves in Minnesota is becoming scientific and lucrative. The returns from the counties of the money paid out for bounties indicate that the persons who make a practice of slaughtering wolves for the bounties are able to distinguish a full grown wolf from a cub, and rarely kill a cub, which bring only $1, when by leaving it at large for a few months it will bring them $7.50.

A list of warrants drawn by the state auditor shows that out of 560 applications for bounties there were only fifteen cubs, all of which were killed in Todd county. The report shows $4,096 was paid out for bounties during the month.

Todd county had 118 applications and received $787.50; St. Louis 52, $390; Goodhue, 31, $233.50, Filmore 42, $315. Ramsey had one and Hennepin does not appear on the list.

No Fakirs Allowed.

The Minnesota state fair management has joined Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois in a movement to bar bearded women, snake charmers, muscle dancers, fakirs of all sorts, in fact all monstrosities from future fairs.

Representatives of the state organizations were in session in De Moines. They plan to form a circuit for the betterment of those organizations to compose it.

The decision to bar fakirs is said to be the culmination of a movement started two years ago. The scheme has been accepted by the six managements and will become effective next year.

More Swamp Land.

Minnesota is about to get another allotment of federal swamp lands located within the state borders. The selection of 43,127 acres of federal lands located in Kittson and Roseau counties has been allowed by the surveyor general for the government, and is duly approved by the state auditor's department. The papers will now go to the governor who in turn will request that a patent be granted by the United States land commissioner at Washington, to the state of Minnesota. This selection is made under the swamp land grant provisions of the old law of 1860.

The Child's Friend.

J. W. Olson, in a circular letter sent out to the county and city superintendents of schools, calls attention to the fact that April 2 is the hundreth anniversary of the birthday of Hans Christian Anderson, and suggests that his name be commemorated in some way by the school children of the state. The state superintendent says in his letter:

"April 2, 1905, should be a day memorable to childhood the world over. It is the centennial birthday of Hans Christian Anderson, 'the friend of the children,' whose tales charm and interest them as they charmed and interested their mothers and fathers before them."

Can't Get to Work.

Newly appointed boiler inspectors in half of the districts of the state have found barren honor up to the present time. They have received commissions from the governor bearing the great seal of the state, but they have been unable to get to work inspecting boilers and, more important still, collecting fees.

The reason for the trouble is that over half of the inspectors whose terms of office expired at the close of last year have refused to turn over the records of their office to the newly appointed inspectors.

Activity in the Range.

As the season advances and the beginning of navigation approaches, the preparations for a record-breaking ore output increase. Mine after mine that has been idle for more or less time gets into shape for production, and as fast as men are found they are set at work. More and more stripping contracts are let upon the Mesaba range, and more and more do the developments indicate that the year will see the total ore moved up to 30,000,000 tons.

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.

Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

3 DONT'S
Don't boil it too long.
Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving.
Don't use water that has been boiled before.

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st. With Eggs. Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.)
(Lion-head on every package.)
(Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS AT HOME AND ABROAD IN CONDENSED FORM.

THE WAR IN THE FAR EAST

Progress of Hostilities Between Russia and Japan—Doings at Washington—Items of Interest from All Over the World.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

Russia has indirectly made known to Japan the negative conditions upon which peace may be concluded, namely, no cession of territory and no indemnity, leaving Japan to determine whether negotiations can be begun upon that basis.

Neither Russia nor Japan have asked President Roosevelt to assist them in ending the war. So far as the Washington government is aware Emperor Nicholas has not yet weakened in his announced decision "to prosecute the war to the bitter end."

Ambassador Jusserand of France visited President Roosevelt and afterward announced that there is no prospect of peace, both Russia and Japan desiring to continue the war.

The czar is reported to have said that if he signs peace he cannot remain the czar. This remark may mean that he will abdicate or call on the people to share the responsibilities of government.

The Russian imperial commission which has been considering the question of prosecuting the war, favors a continuation of the war, finding nothing in the present situation either financial or military to prevent its prosecution.

Gen. Kuropatkin blames defeat at Mukden on ten generals, among them Bilderling.

The Japanese again advanced, the Russian rear guard falling back to 40 miles below Gunshu pass.

Russian officers report that the value of the supplies abandoned and burned at Mukden was $1,750,000.

The new Japanese war loan is heavily oversubscribed in the financial centers of the United States, while the rush for the bonds is even greater in London.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

BILL FIXING PAY OF INSURANCE COMMISSIONER IS CONSIDERED.

SENATE BUSY WITH CODE.

The House Takes Its Last Vacation Before Adjournment Which Comes on April 18.

St. Paul, March 30.—Yesterday was a field day in the house. Five bills seeking to change or amend the primary election system were considered as a special order, and after a spirited debate of more than two hours a vote was forced by opponents of the various measures and all, without distinction, were decently interred and are without hope of resurrection for at least two years. First in order was Representative Lund's bill, which was a straight test of sentiment in the house on the primary system. The measure provided in plain language for the extension of the primary method of nominations to the nomination of candidates for state office. The roll call revealed about two votes against to one in favor. Representative Rider had a bill of complicated structure which provided for the primary system as applied to the selection of delegates to the state convention. Mr. Rider saw the doom approaching and tried to stave it off by offering a motion to have the bill referred for amendment, but was unsuccessful. Following came the bill offered by Representative Ole Peterson. That gentleman saved time by moving its indefinite postponement. Representative Selb took the same action with his bill, but Representative Burdett Thayer made a fight for his measure, which merely provided for legal safeguards about the caucus. This measure was framed by R. C. Dunn, late candidate for governor, but it appeared to the members that it did not include the larger cities in all its provisions. It received 31 affirmative votes, as compared with 65 cast against it. The author wanted to reconsider it and offer amendments, but the house was in savage mood and it went the way of the others. This action means that no legislation of this character can be had this session.

Omnibus Bill.

Saturday last Chairman Roberts, of the house appropriations committee, introduced [illegible] bill, and, as might have been expected, it carried much smaller amounts than had been hoped for by the various interests interested. The condition of the state treasury is urged as the reason for keeping down the appropriations. Any marked enlargement would necessitate an increase in the tax levy. Among the items carried by the bill were:

State university, main building	$250,000
Home for wives and widows of old soldiers	100,000
Maintenance of same, per year	10,000
Maintenance of soldiers' home (increase)	10,000
Monument Vicksburg National Park	30,000
Itasca State Park	15,000
To state drainage commission	25,000
Anoka asylum	65,000
Hastings asylum	40,000
Fergus Falls asylum	5,000
Rochester asylum	5,000
St. Peter asylum	10,000
St. Cloud reformatory	35,000
Governor's contingent fund	11,200
Treasurer's office	5,800
Auditor's office	25,000
Railway commission	6,000
Supreme court	3,750
Publication of the laws	40,000
Publication Minnesota Reports	34,000

In addition the sum of $15,000 is given the Glenwood fish hatchery, and $50,000 is appropriated for the completion of the administration building at the St. Cloud reformatory. For state high school aid $50,000 is appropriated and each of the presidents of the state normal schools is allowed an increase of $500 annually.

First Veto.

One of the chief topics of interest is the veto of the Horton bill by Gov. Johnson. The bill provided that the state capitol commission should have charge of the state capitol during the next two years. The governor has always, heretofore, had this matter under his charge, and in his veto message Gov. Johnson practically says that the passage of such a measure would be distasteful to him as a direct reflection upon either his capability or his honesty. The dispute has brought about considerable partisan feeling, each side claiming that the other wants control of the building for the petty patronage involved. The veto message was read in the senate yesterday and laid on the table for future action.

Senator Peterson's bill providing for the holding of a constitutional convention has passed the senate. A similar bill has been agreed to by the house, and one of the other will doubtless become law.

Another important bill passed by the senate was the Somerville inheritance tax bill. It differs from the house measure in that it imposes twice as high a tax.

The Stone bill, requiring railways to issue transferable mileage, has been killed in the house. The bill did not attempt to regulate the price at which the books should be sold and the argument was made that under such regulations the railways would doubtless charge the full rate. Representative Ware has a couple of bills along the same line, one of which after being referred to the judiciary committee, was declared unconstitutional, in that it was impossible to compel one road to sell transportation over another.

The house committee on appropriations has decided that it is worth while to experiment with the state free employment bureau idea and recommends an appropriation of $1,750 for the maintenance of one in one of the large cities during the next year. The labor commissioner asked an appropriation of $5,000.

Unconstitutional.

The house judiciary committee has declared unconstitutional the Dorsey bill, which prohibits corporations from contributing to campaign funds. It was held that such a law would absolutely deprive the Minneapolis Voter's League of its charter rights.

Representative Ofsthun would create a separate office of the state superintendent of banks, limiting his duties to the examination of state banks, building and loan associations, savings and loan companies and railroad corporations.

A bill by Mr. Roberts would abolish the state board of pardons.

Representative Adams fathers a bill to give the clerk of the supreme court a salary of $3,500 annually, all fees to be paid to the state.

Representative J. A. Gates introduced a bill providing that at the expiration of the terms of the present members of the state board of control, their successors shall be chosen by popular vote.

Another bill by Mr. Adams makes it a misdemeanor for commission men to accept an order for the purchase or sale of stocks, bonds or grain and to report that he has executed such order, when in fact he has not.

No More Vacations.

St. Paul, April 1.—Both houses of the legislature adjourned over from Friday until Monday morning and the members will resume business next week with the determination to take no more vacations until the final adjournment on the 18th inst. It cannot be said that the business of the session is in an encouraging condition. The lower house has been working diligently and has ground out scores of measures which have been sent to the senate. The latter body, seemingly careless of results, has jogged along leisurely and so far has confined itself to forenoon sessions. Hundreds of house bills are hung up in senate committees, and matters are made worse by reason of the fact that the code is not yet acted upon by the senate. The judiciary committee has at last completed its consideration of the document, and it is in the hands of the printer, with prospects of being on the desks of the senators Monday forenoon, but no program of action upon it has yet been agreed upon. It looks to an outsider that the senate is in condition that it cannot possibly do justice to the business which is before it in the two remaining weeks. Either the code will suffer scant attention, or else other important legislation sent up from the house will have to be forced aside.

There is more or less feeling among the house members because of the conditions stated above. House members with bills in which they are interested have been watching the senate jealously and many are ready to believe that the easy-going senate is anything but worried over the prospect of the death of house measures. Should this feeling increase the result would be retaliation on the part of the house and the consequent death of as many senate measures as possible.

Horton Bill.

The most interesting event of the legislative week was the passage by both houses of the Horton bill, placing control of the new state capitol in the hands of the state capitol commission, over the veto of Gov. Johnson. In both houses the bill was made a party measure and caucauses of republican members were called. The republican senators fell into line with one or two exceptions, but in the house many protested and only seven votes more than were necessary were secured for the action. The bill is now a law, however, and the capitol commission will have full charge of the building for the coming two years.

At last there is evidence that possibly some action will be taken to divorce the university and the state normal schools from the state board of control. The house has passed the Perley bill, which is aimed to accomplish that result. As it stands the bill concedes to the board of control the right to buy fuel and to supervise the construction of new buildings. [illegible]

The house has passed the [illegible] bill, changing the [illegible] of [illegible] county to Clover county.

The senate also passed the Somerville inheritance tax measure and the bill regulating the use of voting machines. It killed the committee bill to regulate private banks.

Passenger Fare.

The Ware bill fixing 2½ cents per mile as the maximum passenger charge which can be made by railroads in Minnesota was approved by the house in committee of the whole after the author had amended it to cut out all other subject matter. The house refused to pass the senate bill introduced by Senator Coller, memorializing congress to repeal the Nelson bankruptcy law.

The house has asked for a committee on conference in the Roberts bill providing for wide open tax laws. The senate made several amendments, including one reducing from $300 to $200 the amount of exemption which can be allowed. Upon this latter point the lower house feels inclined to insist.

Representative Bjorge made a hard, but unsuccessful fight to secure the passage of his bill making county superintendents elective. The supporters of the measure argued in vain that it was demanded by the educational interests of the state.

The Hugo bill, providing that the state auditor may lease mineral lands underlying lakes or bodies of water, was killed by the house in committee of the whole.

The house committee on corporations has approved the bill placing telegraph and telephone companies under the jurisdiction of the state railway and warehouse commission, and the bill has been sent to the judiciary committee to pass upon its constitutionality.

The house committee on agriculture has approved the Hickey bill changing membership in the state agricultural society, after amending it to read that county commissioners of counties not now represented may select one member of the society. The original bill called for the appointment of three members from each of such counties by the governor.

The house judiciary committee has recommended favorably the Perley bill removing the $5,000 limitation of damages to be recovered for death and leaving the amount to be fixed by the jury.

The senate committee on taxes and tax laws has approved the McGowan bill exempting from taxation such portions of real estate as are covered by mortgages.

The special joint committee which has been investigating railroad rates has been unable to agree upon a report and it is thought likely that a majority and minority report may be turned in and a number of bills introduced by members of the committee calculated to remedy evils and discriminations alleged.

Appropriations.

More than a hundred bills calling for appropriations for road and bridge purposes have been introduced in the house and nearly as many in the senate. In the aggregate these bills call for an appropriation of about $200,000. Inasmuch as there is only about $50,000 in the fund the house sub-committee is having a hard time arranging the usual omnibus bill, and many communities will be doomed to disappointment.

The committee which has been considering the advisability of purchasing or building a residence for the governor has had several offers of desirable buildings, but it is reported that a recommendation will be made that a site be purchased and a suitable building erected.

The house committee on general legislation, after thorough consideration has recommended for passage the Rockne-Ofsthun bill which is expected, if enacted into law, to restrain the operation of trusts or combinations of trade in Minnesota.

WARSAW POLICE AND JEWS CLASH.

A MOB OF 1,000, MOSTLY JEWS CARRYING RED FLAGS IS FIRED UPON.

Four Men are Killed and Forty Injured. Several of the Wounded Will Probably Die.

Warsaw, April 3.—A serious conflict occurred at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening in Dsika street, where a Jewish socialist society, known as the Bund, had organized a demonstration. The troops, which came to disperse the gathering, fired into the crowd, killing four persons and wounding forty others.

Other disturbances are reported to have occurred. The streets had been patrolled throughout the day, the authorities having anticipated trouble.

The trouble in Dzika street began when, under the pretext of holding a memorial meeting for a late Jewish socialist leader, a crowd of 1,000, mostly Jews, carrying red flags, marched into the street and was met by a mixed police and military patrol of twenty.

The police declare the Socialists fired revolvers ot them, the leaders inciting the mob to attack the patrol, which thereupon, fired several volleys into the crowd.

Four men were killed and at least forty wounded.

The crowd removed all but nine of the wounded, two of whom were women.

It is expected that several of the wounded will die.

The dead and wounded are all Jews.

Gunshu, Pass, April 3.—General Mischenko has moved forward into close touch with the Japanese and keeps up constant shirmishing. Gen. Mistchenko, when he learned of the beginning of the panic during the retreat from Mukden, though an unhealed wound forbade his walking, drove in a carriage to his [illegible] and resumed his command, which he has since retained, though he is unable to ride [illegible] which are beginning to [illegible]

Menace to Health.

Winona, Minn., April 3.—The heath of the residents near Lake Winona is threatened by the large number of dead fish which have come to the serface and are rotting on the banks. On account of the tons of ice last winter tons of fish were smothered and their carcasses have now come to the surface. The gulls, which usually conconsume this carrion, have gone north and the result is that the shores of the lake are filled with fish. The local board of health have been asked to take some action, and the city may be called upon to provide some means by which to dispose of this menace to health.

Victim of Bomb.

Lodz, Poland, April 3.—Police Commissioner Szabalovicz, of the second d strict, was seriously injured by a bomb which was thrown at him in the street.

The police commissioner had been summoned by telephone to come to the office of the chief of police and started on foot, followed by a policeman.

The former noticed at the corner of Konstantinowsk and Ziwaski streets a poorly clad man, carrying a basket.

As Szabajovicz approached, the man suddenly hurled a bomb, which exploded with terrific force, blowing off the commissioner's feet and severely wounding him in the breast. It is feared that his injuries will prove fatal.

Prairies Fire Swept.

Omaha, Neb., April 3.—Reports received from Bonesteel, S. D., and other points on the Rosebud reservation tell of serious prairie fires that are sweeping across the reservation. The country is extremely dry and serious results are feared unless the flames are checked.

Many homes and thousands of dollars' worth of hay were destroyed.

Peter Yerly, caught in flames, rushed into a pond to extinguish the burning clothing after his hair had been burned off.

In a home containing eight children, one was fatally burned and the entire family narrowly escaped death.

Notified.

St. Paul, April 3.—Word has been received by Minnesota members of congress that President Roosevelt has decided to call an extra session of congress to convene Oct. 16 It was expected that the session would open about Oct. 1, but the date has been postponed because several senators will be absent in the Philippines until the middle of October.

Minnesota members of congress say that the official call has not been issued, but there is an understanding between the president and the leaders of the house and the senate that unless something comes up to prevent, the session will begin Oct. 16.

REFORM IN ENGLAND.

Considerable Progress Made In Temperance Since Shakespeare's Day.

John Bull sober is the defense of London Tit-Bits. It admits that John is no total abstainer, but it avers that he is not the champion guzzler of the world. He drinks an average of 500 glasses of beer a year, but your Belgian drinks 710. For every glass of wine he drinks the Frenchman drinks fifty-six, and for every gallon of spirits that John takes the Dane takes seven. This is encouraging. It shows progress in sobriety since Shakespeare's time. In "Othello" we have this:

> Cassio—'Fore God, an excellent song!
>
> Iago—I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting. Your Dane, your German and your swag bellied Hollander [Belgian] are nothing to your English.
>
> Cassio—Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?
> Iago—Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

This is good evidence, and had Tit Bits used German instead of Frenchman in its comparison the parallel would have been exact. As it is, it would seem that since Iago belittled poor Cassio and made him lose his reputation the Englishman has become less potent in potting. It is well for him if it be so, for the measure of drinking is no bad gauge of a nation's progress. It is well known that the decadence of France is intimately connected with the use of alcohol. Whether as a cause or effect, the increase in the consumption of alcohol in France goes with the decline of physique and the dwindling of stationary population. Improvement in manners and increase in population and the attainment of a higher standard of living keep pace with decrease in the use of alcohol.

AMERICA'S DRINKS.

Consumption of Spirits Decrease Considerably—That of Beer Grows.

During the year which ended June 30, 1903, the average American used 46.72 gills of distilled spirits, 577.28 gills of malt liquors and 15.36 gills of wine, making a total of 639.36 gills, or 1.75 gills for each day of that year. Really, that does not seem to show that he is altogether given over to guzzling alcoholic drinks, says the New York Globe. Besides, he certainly did not drink all of the spirits he used.

Nor does he seem to be using so much strong liquor now as he used years ago, for in the year 1871 he made away with 51.84 gills of distilled spirits, and it is fair to assume that much more spirits are used now in mechanics, arts and science than in that olden time. Or while he uses 2½ gills more in the year than he used thirty-three years ago. But the influence of the German has been strong with the American; therefore, he used 283 gills more of beer in the year 1903 than he used in 1871, and it would be difficult to convince folk that he used much of that in mechanical works, however much of it may have gone into mechanics. A third of a century ago he used only .71 of a gill of alcoholic liquids a day, and all the increase of 1.04 gills a day is beer.

CHESTNUTS A DRINK CURE.

Nature's Remedy Vouched For by a Philadelphia Specialist.

"There should be less drunkenness at this season of the year than at any other time," said a specialist in nervous disorders in an interview printed recently in the Philadelphia Record. "It is not generally known—in fact, I claim the honor of the discovery—that roasted chestnuts are a good antidote for liquor.

"The average man who drinks under high nervous pressure, not for the sake of sociability, but because the alcohol stimulates him, is the one whose nervous system is most quickly undermined. He may never get drunk, but there is a constant demand for overstimulation that works damage in the end. No sooner does the effect of one drink wear off than there is the craving for another.

"Now, if that man would eat a few roasted chestnuts instead of taking another drink when the feeling comes on him he would find that the substance of the nuts, having quickly absorbed the liquor already in his system, had appreciably decreased his longing for more alcoholic stimulant. It isn't a theory. I know it to be true."

Ireland's Apostle of Temperance.

Father Theobald Mathew, Ireland's apostle of temperance, born in 1790, had a career which is the inspiration of all Irish Catholic total abstinence societies today. His birthday, Oct. 10, is annually observed by such societies throughout the world. Father Mathew is credited with having personally administered the pledge to over 5,000,000 people. In three years he reduced the consumption of spirits in Ireland by one-half. He was received with profound respect in England and Scotland, and during his two years' visit to America he made a tour of twenty-five states, preaching to Catholics the doctrine of total abstinence. Father Mathew was one of the very few persons accorded a formal reception by the United States senate.

Antialcoholic Campaign In Italy.

The first antialcohol congress ever held in Italy took place recently at Venice, the principal address being given by M. Luzzato of the University of Padua. The following resolution was passed: "The Federation of the Antialcoholic Leagues affirms that abstinence from every alcoholic drink is the surest and most logical means for securing to man his normal condition and the well being of the individual, the family and society. It is the best means of fighting against alcohol."

LOVE WAS THE BEST

The young women around the tea table had discussed the reigning tenor, touched delicately on the last scandal and were now busy with Jack Rodney's name and money. A decision of the court had given his inheritance to another heir, and then he had gone into Wall street and been caught on the wrong side of the market.

"I can't picture it," said Sally Littlejohn, balancing her little gold spoon. "What will become of him? The spoiled darling! Why, he will have to go to work!"

"Work!" said Julia Montressor. "With those aristocratic hands? What sort of work? Why, what will he do?"

"The only thing he can do—stop living."

"Oh, Bab! How horrid of you! Jack Rodney, the dear, splendid fellow! Has any one seen him? I wonder what he is doing now?" said Sally.

"Walking on his uppers, don't they call it?" said Bab.

"Every one else was letting Will Luys reap what he sowed, but Jack made good all the misappropriation isn't that the next term? And it was Jack's yacht that went cruising in the Mediterranean and had princes on board for guests it was his steamer that took those children from Seven alleys down the harbor every afternoon all the hot summer"—

"Where is Jack? Does any one know?" said Sally.

"Going to Texas, ranching. He has cleared up everything and starts at once, some one said. He'd like it if it were play, the poor fellow!"

"Oh, it is really getting dark!" exclaimed Arabella. "We must be going. Why, Felicia, how white you are! I should think you were ready to faint yourself!"

"The sudden light," murmured Felicia.

It was while the last dinner guests that night were still saying tender nothings to Bab that a slender shape slipped swiftly down the steps and passed along in the shadow of the houses [illegible] herself. Felicia shrank behind her veil from every passerby. A half [illegible] walk, and she ran up some steps to make sure of the number, rang the doorbell, said something explanatory to the man who answered it, passed in and followed him to the door [illegible] of the broad, low stairway [illegible].

A man sat there with his head bowed upon his arms as they lay along the table [illegible] dejection. He [illegible] look up when the door opened [illegible] closed. But the girl crossed [illegible] quickly and, standing behind [illegible] with her arms laid across his shoulder.

"I am not a dream, Jack," she said, bending lower, her soft, cold cheek touching his. "I am Felicia."

For one moment there were silence and rapture here. And then the transfer men came for the luggage.

"And this parcel, too," said Felicia.

"Felicia!" he exclaimed.

"This parcel," she repeated. "You know I cannot go back after coming here," she said when they were alone again. "I have burned my ships behind me."

"Do you mean it?" he exclaimed joyously. And then his tone fell. "I thought—oh, yes, certainly. I must take you home before my train leaves."

"You will take me home? My home is with you, Jack."

"You don't know what you say," he answered her. "Oh, no. I cannot accept the sacrifice!" the eager gleam of his eyes belying his words.

"Jack," she murmured, "the sacrifice in my coming here unasked!"

"Don't make it so hard for me!" he exclaimed. "An hour ago it was the darkness of despair. I was going to bury myself in the ranch, as if it were a grave. Now I shall go out in that new life, radiant with the happy knowledge and my hope. And even if I should never prosper enough to come for you," he said after a moment, taking a step toward her, "if you should weary in the long waiting and give some other man the love I have won—well, I could bear it perhaps, remembering and living again in this night's joy."

"Some other man!" she exclaimed, unclasping his arms and looking for the hat and jacket that had been thrown aside. "I am going with you, Jack. If you can live summer and winter in a tent in Texas, I can too. I have the fit clothes in that parcel. I have my jewels here. They were my mother's and are mine, and I have the right to take them, and their price will hinder my being a burden."

It was a year after that Felicia sat one night in the refulgent moonlight of the high prairie after a day of heat tempered by the high gulf breeze over 300 miles of flowers.

"Are you sorry I came?" she said.

"Are you?"

"Do you know it seems to me precisely as if we were living on an outskirt of the holy land, with flocks and herds and the fig and pomegranate and the tender grape giving a good smell?" she said.

"Are you sure you never regret?" he asked.

"Regret! Well, I confess I should like to have heard Bab read out our marriage notice at breakfast—and Bab so bitter the day before for fear of it! But regret those days of littleness and idleness and gossip, the confining clothes and cramping life—

"I—I miss my father," she said, and her lip quivered.

"But even," she said presently, "if he never forgives us or comes to see us, and if poor Bab should never come down here and learn what it is to live, I shall be sure, my dear, that love is best."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Peppis, Peeples or What?

A correspondent (an American, we presume) writes to ask how he shall pronounce the name of the excellent diarist we occasionally quote. "Do you," he asks, "call Pepys 'Peppis' or 'Peepies' or 'Chumley' or what?" Even among contemporary London talkers there is disagreement, but the question should be settled by one Mr. James Carcasse, whom Pepys kindly took in his boat to view the great fire and who returned the compliment by a somewhat virulent set of verses in his volume "Lucida Intervalla."

Get thee behind me, then, dumb devil, begone,
The Lord hath Ephthatha said to my tongue.
Him I must praise who open'd hath my lips,
Sent me from navy to the ark by Pepys.

The rhythm is dreadful, but the rhyme is conclusive, and the man who rowed in the same boat with the diarist called him "Pipps."—London Chronicle.

[An accepted American dictionary authority also gives Peps as the correct pronunciation of his name.—Ed.]

They Hunger For Praise.

"Praise is sweet," remarked a certain toiler, "yet is seems to be against the rule of many business houses. Perhaps they fear you'll demand a raise if they compliment your work. Why, even a man friend of mine, who is engaged in window decoration, says he wants to be told if his work is satisfactory. He dreams of it all night when it doesn't give him a nightmare, and he works at it all day. He longs to be told when it is effective, but he has to be content with the fact that, as he puts it, he'd be fired if it were not satisfactory. As for me, I design these doll dresses and other dainty things and also arrange them for display. I long for praise when I feel that my labors have been crowned with success. But, alas, my firm also pursues the clam policy—perhaps it is the best policy—in spite of the fact that I'd work the skin off my fingers to try to exceed my best work if only that were praised."—Philadelphia Record.

Sensitive Horses.

The horse does not like a nervous, fidgety, fussy or irritable man. He is too nervous and irritable himself. "Why is it," one teamster was heard to ask another, "that Phin's horses are always gaunt? Phin feeds them well." "Yes," was the reply, "but he's like a wasp around a horse." A well known owner of race horses, not at all a sentimental person, recently made an order forbidding his employees to talk in loud tones or to swear in the stable. "I have never yet seen a good mannered horse," he says, "that was being sworn at all the time. It hurts the feelings of a sensitive horse, and I'll keep my word good to discharge any man in my employ if I catch him swearing within the hearing of any horse in this stable."—Country Life In America.

They Moved.

A Boston trolley car was taking on a load of women, and the conductor frantically urged his gentle passengers to "move up;" but, as usual, his behests were not obeyed. "Now, move up, ladies; please do move up!" he cried. No one stirred an inch. "I say, ladies, move up! The motorman is a great deal better looking man than I am!" The ladies swept forward en masse.

Lovely Liverpool Lasses.

Can you or your readers give any explanation of the remarkably heavy percentage of splendidly handsome ladies to be seen in Liverpool's city thoroughfares? When I say handsome, I refer not only to facial beauty, but also to symmetry of form and perfect physique. Walk from the Central station via Lord street to, say, the Landing stage, any day in the week, and you will behold a phalanx of superb womanhood. I am a Manchester man by birth and sentiment, but I must confess our city can produce nothing to compare with Liverpool's battalions of tall, lovely girls.—St. James' Gazette.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

STOP! WOMEN,

AND CONSIDER THE

ALL-IMPORTANT

FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with woman's diseases covers a great many years.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month with my periods. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have ovarian and womb trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do. I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Sts., Benning P.O., Washington, D.C.

Second letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After following carefully your advice, and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimonial, that others may know their value and what you have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Streets, Benning P. O., Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

On the Trail with a Fish Brand Pommel Slicker

"I followed the trail from Texas to Montana with a FISH BRAND Slicker, used for an overcoat when cold, a wind coat when windy, a rain coat when it rained, and for a cover at night if we got to bed, and I will say that I have gotten more comfort out of your slicker than any other one article that I ever owned."

Who Owns the Railroads?

H. T. Newcomb, of the District of Columbia Bar, has compiled statistics showing that 5,174,718 depositors in savings banks of six eastern states are directly interested in the joint ownership of $442,354,086 of steam railroad securities, that insurance companies doing business in Massachusetts hold $845,889,038 of steam railroad stocks and bonds, and 74 educational institutions depend on $47,468,327 invested in similar securities for a portion of their income. Other fiduciary institutions own enough railroad securities to bring such holdings up to more than a billion and a half dollars, about one-sixth of the entire capital invested in railroad property. These investments represent the savings of the masses, there being twenty million holders of life insurance policies in the country, as many more of fire insurance policies, and an even greater number of depositors in banking and trust institutions, where investments are largely in railroad securities.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Railway Taxes.

Minnesota receives from the thirty-three railroads operating in the state as gross earnings for the year 1904, $1,911,184 43, as against $1,971,622.67, for the previous year, a decrease of $60,478.24. The gross earnings of the companies for last year amounted to $64,596,903.05, and for the year before, $66 800,130.55, a falling off of $2,203,127.50.

The Great Northern had the largest gross earnings of any of the companies in the state. Its total income aggregated $17,323,144 87, but its earnings for 1903 were $17,803 537.03. Its taxes for last year amounted to $519,694.35, against $534,106 11.

The Northern Pacific comes second to the Great Northern. Its earnings amounted $11,253,757.23, as compared with $11,401,432.60. Its taxes for last year amount to $337,612.72, and for 1903, 342,042.98.

The third on the list is the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. Its earnings, instead of falling off, like the of most of the roads in the state, showed an increase. Last year it took in $9,214,038.19, and the year before $9,033,643. Its taxes last year were $276,421.15, as compared with $271,009.27.

State Fair Attractions.

To make the amusement side of the state fair of 1905 the most complete in the history of the institution, was the key note of the discussion of the board of managers at a meeting held at the state fair grounds.

The board heard propositions from various fireworks men, and amusement bureaus and though little was actually decided upon enough was heard to give basis for decision in the near future on attractions which shall eclipse anything ever seen before at a Minnesota state fair. It is certain that the fireworks spectacle of the evening will be the largest and most magnificant yet produced.

Liberati, the famous band leader, met the board, and was forthwith engaged to bring his great military band to Minnesota for fair week. This insures high-class music by a band of international reputation.

Buys Own Watch Back.

While returning from St. Paul, Dr. J. A. Dunn jumped from a train in the Great Northern yards in St. Cloud, intending to take a short cut home. He hardly had gone a hundred feet, when he was confronted by a gang of six men who first held him up and then relieved him of a gold watch and of about $5 or $10 in money. The victim was so anxious for the return of the watch that he offered the thieves some money which they had overlooked for the return of the ticker. The proposition was accepted and the doctor continues to wear the watch though he is out of pocket about $15 as a result of his experience.

Will Harness Taylor's Falls.

"More power to ye," is the greeting of the Minneapolis General Electric company to the vast manufacturing interests of the Twin Cities in a project of magnificent proportions that has just been undertaken.

After romping and rioting at will for untold centuries Taylor's falls, in the St. Croix river, is now to be taken firmly in hand by the Minneapolis company and made to assist sober old St. Anthony in performing the industrial labor of Minneapolis and St. Paul which in the long period of his service has finally outgrown his capacity. Three million dollars will be spent.

Many Nickels.

Eigty-five million nickels and then some must have been contributed by passengers on the street cars of St. Paul and Minneapolis last year to make up the $4,369,408 20 shown as the collections from that source in the company's report for 1904. This report which was given out contains much matter of interest in regard to the financial affairs of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, and the operation of the system.

Food Articles.

The examination of food articles by the state Dairy and food department during the past week covered 135 samples, of which 96 were classed as legal and 39 as illegal. Ten out of forty-one samples of vinegar were below standard in acetic acid, and eight samples of catsup out of twenty-two were found colored artificially. Only two samples of maple surup out of eight were found pure, the rest being mixed with cane sugar or glucose.

News Notes.

Soo earnings for the third week in March made a surprising increase, showing a gain equal to 59 per cent.

Thieves raided the first Presbyterian church, Minneapolis, and stole about $10. The police think boys in the neighborhood committed the theft.

Harry S. Mitchell of Minneapolis, is the successful one among the Minnesota candidates for the Cecil Rhodes scolarship at Oxford.

John Beverly Jones, a fourteen-year-old Duluth lad, who shot and killed his companion, Peter Thompson, was rearrested and charged with manslaughter in the second degree.

The police are trying to solve the mystery surrounding what is supposed to have been a crime committed upon the person of Mrs. Emma Schmidt, aged 50. On Saturday her unconscious form was found on the tracks of the Great Northern a mile west of St. Cloud by a farmer. Her head was covered with bad contusions.

The lockup at White Bear burned and five prisoners narrowly escaped cremation.

Mrs. W. Brown of Duluth with a yawn, and the yawn, like some smiles, refused to come off, breaking her jaw.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

A GREAT MEDICINE

BRINGS HEALTH TO THREE MEMBERS OF SAME FAMILY.

Cures a Wife's Debility After Malaria, a Husband's Rheumatism, a Daughter's Nervous Prostration.

"I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many people," said Mrs. Gossett, "because I have seen such good results, time after time, right in my own family. There are three of us who have no doubt about their merits. We do not need to take anybody's word on the subject for our own experience has taught us how well they deserve praise.

"It was just about ten years ago that I first read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and bought my first box. I was at that time all run down, weak, nervous and without ambition. I had been doctoring all summer for malaria and stomach trouble. Everybody thought I was going into consumption, as my mother had died of that disease.

"Thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I am now alive and hearty. I began to improve as soon as I began to take them, and when I had taken three boxes I was a well woman. Everyone wonders how I keep so well and am able to care for my home and six children without help. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills explain it.

"My oldest girl's health began to fail when she was about fourteen. She was nervous, complained of sharp pains in her head, would get deathly sick and have to leave the school room to get fresh air to revive her. I gave some pills to her. She took only a few boxes, but they cured her troubles, and caused her to develop into a perfect picture of health. Then my husband took them for rheumatism and found that they would cure that too. So you see we have all got great good from using them, and that is why we recommend them to others."

Mrs. Minnie E. Gossett lives at Uhrichsville, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, and is well known, as she has resided in the same neighborhood for more than eighteen years. Her story shows that a medicine which makes the blood sound and the nerves strong, overcomes a variety of diseases and should be found in every household. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists everywhere. They have cured anaemia, and all forms of weakness, also the most stubborn cases of dyspepsia and rheumatism. They are indispensable for growing girls.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

THE SENATE PASSES THE BILL TAKING UNIVERSITY FROM BOARD OF CONTROL.

The Senate Passes the Revised Code, the Same to Go Into Effect on December 1, 1905.

St. Paul, April 6.—Ten of the fifteen members of the house committee on public accounts and expenditures affixed their signatures to the report made by Chairman Dowling in the investigation which has just been made regarding charges contained in reports of Former Public Examiner Johnson, reflecting upon the administrations of State Auditor Iverson and his predecessor, Robert C. Dunn. The report, in brief, exonerates both those gentlemen from any wrong doing, though it admits that both men went beyond the strict requirements of the law in making various settlements in timber matters. The report expresses the belief that Messrs. Iverson and Dunn at all times acted as they thought for the best interests of the state and that by reason of their use of discretionary power the state not only did not lose any money, but rather profited thereby. Three members of the committee disagreed with the majority and declare they will hand in a minority report. Two members of the committee were not present when the report was adopted. The report slightly censures Examiner Johnson for his failure to employ men technically skilled in the work while making examination of the books of the auditor's office. The report was voluminous, and an effort was made by Mr. Rockne to have it laid on the table without reading, and action delayed until it had been printed, but Chairman Dowling blocked the attempt to get such a resolution adopted.

On motion of Representative Wichman, the house took the Ware 2½ cent passenger fare bill and sent it back to the railroad committee. Mr. Wichman declared that his reason for asking this was that the Ware bill might conflict with the report to be made by the Eberhart investigating committee and he wanted both measures to be considered together. Mr. Ware was taken unawares, but says he will have the bill back in the house again in twenty-four hours.

Board of Control.

After a contest lasting through the last three sessions of the legislature, the state university and normal schools have at last secured the passage of a bill releasing them from the supervision of the state board of control. Yesterday the senate passed the Perley house bill, with 46 votes in its favor. Earlier in the session the senate defeated a bill which carried the same intent. The Perley bill, however, was framed so that the board of control shall have the purchasing of fuel and the letting of contracts for the construction of new buildings.

One of the events of the session was the appearance of United States Senator Knute Nelson before the house and senate in joint session Monday. Mr. Nelson was governor of the state when work upon the new state capitol building was initiated and appointed the commission which constructed the building. His visit was the first he had made to the new building and in his address to the members he congratulated them upon its artistic beauty and convenient arrangement. He discussed briefly matters of national importance, assuring his hearers that the current report to the effect that the relations between the president and the United States senate were very badly straind had been greatly exaggerated. That there was some friction, he admitted. In his address he declared that the time was ripe for laws calculated to properly regulate railway corporations, and expressed the belief that such action could be expected at the next session of congress.

Attorney General Young has expressed the belief that the Dorsey bill, prohibiting corporations from contributing to political candidates or party campaign funds, can be made constitutional by amending it to include only such corporations as are formed for pecuniary profit. This will exempt from its operations such associations as the Minneapolis Voters' League, and Representative Dorsey has given notice that he will amend his bill as suggested and resubmit it.

State Insurance Commissioner.

The senate has passed the bill increasing the salary of the state insurance commissioner from $2,500 to $4,500 and providing that all fees received by the department shall be turned in to the state treasury. While this measure is an ostensible raise in salary, it in reality is the reverse, inasmuch as the fees have heretofore given the commissioner an annual income of fully $20,000.

Both houses, under suspension of the rules, unanimously adopted a memorial to congress asking that the 225,000 acres of Chippewa forest reserve lands be opened to settlement. This action is important to that section of the state in the vicinity of Cass Lake, inasmuch as it will doubtless carry great weight with congress. Residents of that section of the state have been conducting a vigorous fight against the creation of a reserve in their community, but all efforts to influence the national government have thus far proved failures.

Senator Schaller is the author of a bill which provides that the state railway and warehouse commission may prosecute cases before the interstate commerce commission when complaints are properly made by Minnesota citizens.

The Lund house bill abolishing private banks was reported for indefinite postponement by the majority of the senate banking committee, but the minority report asking that it be advanced to general orders was adopted by a vote of 32 to 18, thus reversing the attitude of the senate, which some time ago killed an exactly similar bill offered by Senator Eberhart.

Senator Fitzpatrick, by reason of nothing else than his own eloquence, succeeded in saving the life of his bill providing for separate elections for judges. The elections committee had reported it for indefinite postponement, whereupon Mr. Fitzpatrick made one of the best oratorical efforts of the session and the bill was placed on general orders.

Private Secretary's Salary.

The senate passed the Cole bill placing the governor's private secretary upon a salary basis and providing that all fees shall be paid into the state treasury, first amending it so that it will take effect Jan. 1, 1907. The senate has also passed the Gandrud bill requiring railways to make reports of accidents, and the Thompson automobile bill.

The house has adopted the bill of its immigration committee providing for a bureau of immigration connected with the state auditor's office. That official is authorized to employ necessary help and to spend money advertising state lands. It is expected that about $10,000 annually will be allowed for this department in case the bill finally becomes a law.

Revised Code Passes.

St. Paul, April 10.—Yesterday the senate, by a vote of 44 to 9 passed House File 48, generally known as the revised code, and by this action the final adoption of the document by the legislature is practically assured. It has already passed the house and it now remains for the appointment of committees on conference. It is now believed that the managers have things in such shape that a general agreement will be reached in a few days and the bill finally passed. It is necessary that the passage take place some time before the close of the session in order that the enrolling clerks may have time in which to reduce it to writing.

The house leaders held a caucus Thursday evening and agreed to stand by the report of the majority of the committee on public accounts and expenditures relating to the investigation of the office of state auditor under the regime of Messrs. Dunn and Iverson. As a result the report was adopted Friday without roll call, Representative Jefferson making a speech in protest. The report of the minority severely criticised both Dunn and Iverson and recommended that much of the matter contained in the charges made by Former State Examiner Johnson be referred to the attorney general for action.

Increased Salaries.

Officials looking for increased salaries can secure very little comfort from the report made by the special house committee to whom all bills of that character were referred. One increase is recommended, that of the fire warden, from $1,200 to $1,500 annually. Two reductions are advised, that of the private secretary to the governor to $3,500 annually, and that of the public examiner to $3,500 annually. Both these officials are now in receipt of large fees, which are now recommended to be turned into the state treasury.

Railway Rates.

The long looked for report of the Eberhart special committee to investigate railway rates was presented in both houses Thursday, and consisted of a majority and minority report, the latter being signed by Representatives Washburn, Nolan Gandrud, the balance of the members assenting to the report written by Senator Eberhart. The two reports do not vary greatly, the only essential difference being in the fact that the minority recommend giving the state railway and warehouse commission the power to fix rates and have them enforced at once. Both documents are of great length and discuss at great length the subject under consideration. Boiled down, the reports recommend:

Memorial to congress for a law increasing the powers of the interstate commerce commission.

That congress be memorialized to pass a law abolishing private car lines.

Enactment of a law that no tariff rate, switching charge, or terminal charge be changed without consent of state railway commission.

Penalties against railroads granting rebates in any form; individuals to be made liable for acceptance of rebates.

That the railway commission be instructed to readjust tariffs on classified freight so as to prevent a difference of more than 5 per cent between distance and distributing tariffs.

A general investigation of express charges and that the railway commission should compel express companies to give benefit of long and short haul [illegible].

That the state railway commission be instructed to make investigation of distance tariffs in other states and compare same with tariffs in Minnesota and make complete report thereon.

That the state railway commission be authorized to appear before the interstate commerce commission in behalf of private complaints.

Both reports indorse the idea of reciprocal demurrage, and say that classifications should be placed in the hands of the state railway and warehouse commission, it having been ascertained that a number of changes in classifications in the past few years have resulted in raising rates. A strictly distance tariff is considered inadvisable, it being contended that such legislation would operate against the larger centers of population, and the latter, it is urged, furnish a market for producers which cannot be duplicated in any state in which a distance tariff is in operation. It is found that rebates complained of are largely interstate, that private car lines injure shippers greatly, that freight rates are much higher in Minnesota that in Iowa and Illinois, that "midnight" tariffs should be abolished.

The reports will not be acted on by the legislature for some time.

The Ware bill prohibiting railways from charging more than 2½ cents a mile for passenger tariff surprised many by passing the house with 7 more than the necessary votes. The bill had a hard time. It was originally drawn to include provisions for mileage books to be sold for 2 cents a mile and requiring all roads to sell interchangeable books. This was held to be unconstitutional. It was then amended to suit the requirements of the judiciary committee and placed on the calendar. With few members present in the house, its enemies succeeded in taking it from the calendar and sent it back to the railroad committee. From there it was rescued and finally went through with flying colors.

Oils.

The investigation of the house committee on illuminating oils into the history of the Minnesota inspection department, resulted in interesting developments the other day, when Former Inspector F. C. Schiffman testified that the net income of the office was about $16,000 annually. Mr. Schiffman, however, declared that he did not get all that, but that it was divided among the members of the "oil board" and used for campaign purposes. He would not give the names of others who participated in the fund, and declared that the only reason he was made oil inspector by Gov. Van Sant was because it was believed he would divide the "pelf" more honestly than other candidates for the position. The committee is now trying to decide whether or not to declare Mr. Schiffman in contempt for his refusal to answer its questions fully.

Friends of the state board of control defeated the attempt in the house to pass the bill compelling the board to make public all bids.

The Jacobson county option bill is dead.

The attempt of Representative Adams to abolish the state printing commission and place contracts through the board of control was a failure.

The bill to appoint a commission to report upon the advisability of a state hospital for crippled children has been passed by both houses.

The Ofsthun bill creating a new officer to be known as state bank examiner, has been killed.

The bill extending the Torrens system of land transfers to all counties in the state has been killed in the senate.

Making Farm Machinery.

The special committee appointed to investigate the advisability of establishing at the state prison a plant for the manufacture of farm machinery commends the idea and advises that the subject be turned over to the state board of control for a more complete investigation.

The signature of the governor is all that is needed to make law of the Erickson bill abolishing the bucket shop business in Minnesota.

One of the most important measures of the session, the bill creating a state highway commission, has been passed by both houses.

The Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill had an extended hearing before the railroad committee of the senate yesterday, at which the railway attorneys completed their case and a final hearing was set for today.

BIG SEA BATTLE IS IMMINENT.

PART OF ADMIRAL ROJESTVENSKY'S FLEET IS NOW IN THE CHINA SEA.

Russian Cruisers Believed to Have Sailed from Vladivostok. Togo Between the two Fleets.

Singapore, April 10.—Fifty-one ships of Vice Admiral Rojestvensk's second Pacific squadron passed here Saturday.

The most important fighting vessels of the squadron, including the battleships Kniaz Zouvaroff, Alexander II, Borodino and Orel, with their complement of cruisers, torpedoboat destroyers, etc., did not arrive and their whereabouts is totally unknown.

Under the commercial flag were the volunteer steamers Voronez, Kief, Yaroslav, Tamboff Vladimir and Orel; the Russian Navigation company's steamers Meteor, Jupitor and Mercury; The East Asiastic company's steamers Korea and Kaitai; the North Baltic company's steamer Kulas Gortchakoff, one salvage ship and fifteen colliers.

A French steamer arrived here yesterday with a sailor belonging to the Admiral Nakhimoff, who fell overboard and was picked up off after having been twelve hours in the water.

St. Petersburg, April 10.—There is reason to believe that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's entrance into the China sea has been followed by orders for the cruisers Gromoboi, Rossia and Bogatyr, which have been ready for some time at Vladivostok, to put to sea.

Whether it is the intention to send them south immediately or to hold them in the vicinity of Vladivostok is not known.

Their appearance outside the roadstead of Vladivostok would constitute a potential threat against Admiral Togo's rear which will compel the retention in or dispatch of a number of heavy fighting ships back to Japanese waters.

LAUNCHED.

The Battleship Minnesota Successfully Glides into the Water at Newport News.

Newport News, Va., April 10.—The battleship Minnesota was successfully launched at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company Saturday.

The vessel was christened by Miss Rose Marie Schaller, daughter of State Senator Schaller, of Hastings, Minn.

Her maids of honor were Miss Constance Day of St. Paul and Miss Lilian MacMillan of Minneapolis.

At exactly 11:25 the last stroke of the saws which severed the restraining blocks was heard, and the ship began to move down the ways.

Miss Schaller, at the word of President Orcutt, seizing in both hands the bottle of American champagne, dashed it against the red bows of the ship and said in a clear voice:

"I christen thee Minnesota."

Then she and her maids of honor, and the others on the launching platform, began to cheer and applaud.

President Orcutt congratulated and thanked Misses Schaller, Day and MacMillan upon the successful completion of that part of the ceremony.

Ore Trains Are Running.

Ashland, Wis, April 10.—An ore train of forty-five cars pulled into Ashland from Bessemer and Ironwood, Mich., the advance gun of at least 3,000,000 tons of iron ore which will be shipped from Ashland during the coming season. The new Chicago & North-Western ore dock, largest in the lakes, is nearly completed. An immense amount of ore has been put in the stock piles on the Gogebic and Menominee iron ranges. Although today's ore train is the first regular ore train, many cars have arrived on mixed freights. The Wisconsin docks will begin filling their pockets with ore this week.

Attempts Suicide.

Fargo, N. D., April 10.—While in his cell here awaiting his return to Bismarck, after his sentence, John Rooney, murderer, attempted suicide by severing an artery in his wrist with a pen knife which he had secured in some mysterious manner. Dispite the loss of considerable blood, he was not seriously hurt. The prisoner declares he will never hang and will starve himself to death if there is no other opportunity to suicide.

Small Pox Closes Schools.

St. James, Minn., April 10.—The public schools of Butterfield, seven miles from St. James, have been closed on account of smallpox. A child from the country in attendance on the schools came down with the disease, evidently catching it from his father, who has just returned from the pineries.

NOVEL RESCUE WORK

SALVATION ARMY'S NEW METHOD OF DEALING WITH DRUNKARDS.

System Already Successfully Tried In Germany—Carrying Stretchers, Soldiers Pick Up Drunks and Carry Them to Stations For Treatment.

In the past there has been but one haven for the helplessly intoxicated person who sinks to slumber with his head pillowed on a paving stone—the cell of the police station nearest to the patrolman who fails to awaken any response to the tattoo beaten on the inebriated one's feet. Now, thanks to the tireless efforts of the Salvation Army to uplift the fallen, under which head the chronic drunk who falls recumbent in an alcoholic stupor surely comes, there will be another and more promising harbor, says the New York correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. General Booth's followers in this country have decided to borrow an idea that has been successfully tried by the army in Germany and establish a drunkards' rescue brigade.

An interesting scene enacted recently at the Salvation Army headquarters, West Fourteenth street, New York, depicted the manner in which the new brigade will work. The army leaders undertake no new work without the most careful preparation and a thorough drilling of the men into whose hands the crusade is to be intrusted.

"Drunks," said one of the leaders of the new brigade, "present a problem separate and distinct from all others in our work. You can't instill reason into a whisky sodden brain. It is useless to talk of heaven and the angels to a maudlin individual who receives your well meant efforts with a vacant stare and cuts them short by falling in a heap on the sidewalk. And yet something ought to be done for such a person for the sake of wives and mothers and children if not for the drunkard himself. There is a way out of every difficulty, but we had our own troubles when we tried to see day light in this one. The German Salvationists led the way with the drunkards' rescue brigade."

The officer paused to exhibit a picture in one of the publications of the movement. It showed a corps of uniformed Salvationists equipped apparently for firemen's work. They carried stretchers, ropes, lanterns, ladders and other paraphernalia. It was explained that these were the members of the original drunkards' rescue corps, established in Germany for the purpose of hunting out intoxicated men and transporting them to the nearest army station.

"We have not reached the perfection that they have in Germany," continued the army man, "but in time we shall get there. At present we are instructing our men how to improvise stretchers by the method employed in first aid to injured lectures. The other paraphernalia we shall add later. The first lesson we teach our rescuers is that the drunkard must be treated very much as a man who has met with an accident in the street and is as powerless to help himself as a baby. They must seek him out, lift him up and carry him in as a wounded man is carried in from the field of battle.

"When the inert body is brought in the man will be cared for until he recovers consciousness. Then our chance will have come. Then will be the time to talk of reclamation and the better way of sobriety. Sober, healthy and penitent, the rescued one will be in a fitting mood for the reception of advice It will make him feel in a better frame of mind to be told that Christ died to save drunkards than to hear the ultimatum, 'Ten dollars or ten days.' Now I will show you how our drunkards' rescue brigade will work."

The object lesson was given on the roof of the Salvation Army headquarters. Under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Miles a squad of Salvationists who are in training for the work were shown how to approach a recumbent inebriate, the latter impersonated by one of the band; how to judge of his condition by his pulse and his appearance and how to administer an emetic in the case of a drunk who has apparently succumbed to knockout drops or who is in the last stage of collapse from the effect of bad whisky.

"Now take off your coats," said Colonel Miles to two of the men, "and I will show you how to make a stretcher to carry the man in."

With the coats and a couple of poles produced from somewhere (broom handles would do, it was explained, if nothing else was available) a passable stretcher was made. The sleeves of the coats were passed through opposite ends of the poles and the tails pinned in the middle with strong safety pins. On this stretcher the supposed drunk was tenderly laid, and with four of the rescuers at the pole handles and Colonel Miles at the head with a lantern the procession made for the imaginary reception room for drunkards.

"Now," continued the lecturer, "we do not allow the efforts at curing the drunkard of his unwholesome appetite to rest with a mere talk when he is sober. We are believers in the gold cure, and we have a clinic in operation at our Chatham square establishment. Here daily rescued drunkards may be seen taking the little jab that helps them to overcome the thirst for rum.

"We have already tried this idea for rescuing drunkards in some of the towns where our work is established and have found it to answer admirably. It is the only reasonable way to save a drunkard.

"We have had some very touching letters from relatives and wives of men whom we have rescued in this practical way. Such letters are the best possible indorsement of our new plan to save the whisky sodden ones."

THE INSURANCE INSPECTOR.

His Duty to Find Out How Much Liquor Applicants Drink.

Not much is known by the general public, says the Brooklyn Eagle, nor indeed by the applicant for life insurance himself, about the inspector employed by all large companies. This man is charged with the duty of examining the application and determining the truth of the statements made therein concerning the style of life and personal habits of the applicant. As might be imagined, the inspector encounters many queer examples of inaccuracy, ranging from the statement carelessly made without due thought to that which is purposely intended to deceive. His work is entirely apart from that of the company's medical examiner and has largely to do with the question of drink, though it covers many other matters.

Insurance companies are not total abstinence societies, but theoretically the safe limit of risk is not over three ounces of whisky or its equivalent a day. Agents know this, or are supposed to, but in their enthusiasm to write as much insurance as possible they frequently accept any statement made by the applicant, who in answer to the question as to how many drinks he takes in a day is just as apt as not to reply, "Oh, about a dozen."

As an excuse for sending in such an application the agent says that it is understood that one man may safely drink more than another and that the size of the drink also makes a difference. Here comes in the work of the inspector. He must find out what the applicant's drink measures on the average, but it may be said that "a dozen drinks a day" of whatever size are far too many for the inspector, who indeed generally sends in an unfavorable report on a very much smaller number.

It is the practice of these inspectors to make the rounds of the saloons every little while to ask barkeepers how many drinks are contained in a bottle of whisky. This number varies curiously in different localities, but a fair average may be taken as from twelve to eighteen in each bottle. The bottle being a quart or near it, this means that the average drink is scarcely ever less than two ounces and sometimes more. The company's objection to take a man who drinks during the day is that, while his drinks may at first be very small and may not increase in number, the size of each is very likely to become greater to a point which renders the risk unsafe in a few years.

MISSISSIPPI'S BANE.

Judge Miller Lays Her Awful Murder Record to Whisky.

Judge D. N. Miller's charge to the grand jury of Hinds county has aroused widespread interest in Mississippi. The eminent jurist made the plain charge that Mississippi leads all the states in the Union in the number of homicides committed this year.

"I took occasion to keep account of the murders committed in Mississippi in six months," said Judge Miller to the grand jury. "During that time 200 men were killed. It is reasonable to suppose that the same ratio has been kept up since then.

"We lead the states regardless of population in the number of murders committed. No people can continue to enjoy prosperity with this carnival of crime going on.

"The cause for this terrible state of affairs is the fact that the people of Mississippi have too much money with which to gamble and to buy whisky.

"The value of negro labor has never been so high, and the negro feels, because he knows his boss will protect him, that he can kill another negro. As long as a negro feels that he can take the life of another negro and his boss will protect him, he will kill with impunity."

ANTITREATING LEAGUE.

Application For Leave to Incorporate Filed at Springfield, Ill.

An application for leave to incorporate a society to be known as the Antitreating League of America was recently filed with the secretary of state of Illinois at Springfield. The applicants for the license, who were also named as the first board of directors, were Reed M. Hindman, Albert K. Draper, Arthur B. McCold and W. H. Kinney of Chicago and H. L. Draper of Benton Harbor, Mich.

The application sets forth that the society has for its object the promoting of temperance "by agreeing to refrain from the pernicious general custom of treating one another or others to any intoxicating liquors in barrooms and to decline acceptance of all such so called courtesies from others;" also that it "is formed for the mutual benefit of the members of the association by promoting sociability, advancement and brotherly love and protecting and assisting our comembers by providing for relief in case of injury or death by accident to any member."

Alcoholism In German Schools.

An interesting investigation on the prevalence of alcoholism among school children in Germany has recently been published. Its author, Dr. Goldfield, is medical officer of the public schools of Schoenburg, a suburb of Berlin, and his examination included 967 children, 470 of whom were in a boys' school and 497 in a girls' school. Of these 496, or 51.3 per cent, were accustomed to drink from one to two glasses of beer daily, while 299, or 30.9 per cent, took spirits more or less frequently. The favorite beverage was malt beer, but all kinds of beer and various kinds of spirits were taken, the sweeter liquors being preferred by the girls. Dr. Goldfield was informed by the teachers that the children addicted to the use of spirits were especially lazy, absentminded and inclined to lying.—Harper's Weekly.

FARE OF THE GREAT.

The Favorite Dishes of Some Famous Men and Women.

Queen Victoria is said to have given mutton the preference in the line of meats, and was nowise offended if offered "the cold shoulder."

Queen Elizabeth was very fond of roast goose. She was dining on this when the good news was brought her on Michaelmas day that the Spanish fleet had been driven back. And ever since that fowl has been to the English feast of St. Michael what the turkey is to our Thanksgiving day.

Henry VIII. was extremely fond of beans and imported a Dutch gardener to raise them, as in his day they were only used by the upper classes—"a dish to set before the king."

Napoleon's favorite dish was bean salad, much cheaper in his time, but equally good.

Louis XV. was "extravagantly" fond of a dish made of the eggs of various birds, which cost $150.

George Eliot, while at Brookbank, used frequently to walk over to the farm where she purchased her vegetables and chat with the farmer's wife on gardening and buttermaking, who was somewhat surprised at the great novelist's conversation on such homely topics and afterward remarked, "It were wonderful, just wonderful, the sight o' green peas that I send down to that gentleman and lady every week." This was the summer "Middlemarch" was written.

George Sand not only liked sauces, but excelled in making them.

Lincoln, in the days when he did his own marketing, often stopped at a certain shop for his favorite—gingerbread. He used to say, "It swells up and makes me feel as if I had had something."

Stonewall Jackson delighted in buckwheat cakes in season and out of season.

Ralph Waldo Emerson was fond of pie, especially that made of plums, which he called the fruit of paradise.

Dr. Holmes, on the contrary, said of the peach, "When nature has delivered it to us in its perfection we forget all the lesser fruits, and if not found by the river of life an earth born spirit might be forgiven for missing it."

Charles Summer's private secretary tells of the statesman's sweet tooth for chocolate creams.

Andrew Jackson surrendered to ice cream at first taste when Mrs. Alexander Hamilton introduced it into Washington and swore his usual oath, "By the Eternal!" he would have it at the White House, and he did—at the next reception.

Washington was noted for his fondness for hickory nuts, and the amount he could consume.—What to Eat.

An authority on horses says the gray will live the longest and that roans come next in order. Blacks seldom live to be over twenty, and creams rarely exceed fifteen.

Didn't Know I Had Kidney Trouble

I had tried so many remedies without their having benefited me that I was about discouraged but in a few days after taking your wonderful Swamp-Root I began to feel better.

I was out of health and run down generally; had no appetite, was dizzy and suffered with headache most of the time. I did not know that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, but somehow felt they might be, and I began taking Swamp-Root, as above stated. There is such a pleasant taste to Swamp-Root, and it goes right to the spot and drives disease out of the system. It has cured me, making me stronger and better in every way, and I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers.

Gratefully yours,

MRS. A. L. WALKER, 331 East Linden St., Atlanta, Ga.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering and fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; make your head ache and back ache, cause indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, make you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

How to Find Out

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

EDITORIAL NOTICE.—So successful is Swamp-Root in promptly curing even the most distressing cases, that to Prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. The value and success of Swamp-Root is so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle.

In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say that you read this generous offer in this paper.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The doctors told me my kidneys were affected and prescribed medicines for me, but I found that it was only a waste of time and money to take them, and began to fear that I would never get well. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. Within a week after I began using them I was so much better that I decided to keep up the treatment, and when I had used a little over two boxes I was entirely well. I have now enjoyed the best of health for more than four months, and words can but poorly express my gratitude."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Manufactures at the Fair.

One of the important features of the state fair of 1905 will be the department of Minnesota Manufactures. This year the exhibit will be broadened in order that all Minnesota manufacturors may take space and exhibit their products, although preference will be given for "live exhibits," that is, exhibits showing process of manufacture, either of the entire article or of some part of the goods exhibited."

This decision is the result of a recent conference between William E. Lee, superintendent of the manufactures building, and a committee of the Northwestern Manufacturers' association.

The association will co-operate with Mr. Lee in bringing out a good show, and it is expected that the building will be well filled with interesting and instructive exhibits. No charge is made either for space or power, and each exhibitor will be furnished with free admission to the fair grounds for himself and the person in charge of the exhibit. At night the building will be well lighted, and it is expected that no less than 250,000 people will visit it during fair week. This will offer an exceptional opportutity to manufacturers to bring their goods to the attention of the people of the Northwest.

A New Industry.

A business comparatively new to northern Minnesota is the getting out of ship's timber for the building of ocean vessels at Atlantic points. The industry started but a few years ago in this state and is increasing with each year, because timber of the proper sort is lacking in the states to the east. E. C. Edgerly, representing a shipbuilding firm at Auburn, Maine, says:

"We do not bother with the mast and regular long construction timber, but devote our attention to getting out corner braces and for this purpose it is necessary to use the roots of trees, the main trunk, aside from a foot or two at the butt, not being called into use at all. Tamarack is best suited for the purpose, and as the stumps of trees are as suitable as the trees themselves, provided the roots are intact, there is an almost unlimited field here in Minnesota for us to work in. All we have to do is to follow in the tracks of the tie cutter and use what they leave. The stump, or a portion of it, is taken from the ground, and the crooked piece is then hued into shape, later being hauled to a railroad and shipped to Auburn, Maine, where it goes through a planning mill and is made ready for the market."

To Raise Lake Level.

The Itasca state park commission, composed of the governor and the attorney general, had a conference with Mr. Bullard, superintendent of the park. A number of the property owners on the lake had asked to have the level of the lake raised so that they could float their logs. Mr. Bullard stated that the lake is now considerably below its normal level and to raise it eighteen inches would do no harm to the state reservation. There is a dam below the lake and the level can thus easily be raised. The application was granted.

Killed by Cars.

Miss Mary Harmel, daughter of Carl Harmel, a farmer, residing five miles north of Faribault, was instantly killed by the southbound Chicago Rock Island passenger train.

Miss Harmel was walking beside the track when the train approached. The engineer gave his signal, but when the train was within twenty feet of the young woman she stepped onto the the track. She was thrown about twenty feet and instantly killed.

Work of Burglars.

While the family were attending grand opera in the Twin Cities a gang of burglars entered and plundered the residence of A. D. La Due in Luverne. Over 100 pieces of solid silverware, a beaverskin coat and a ladies' seal jacket were among the booty. The robbery was committed last week.

The raid, it is believed, was made by an organized gang which of late has committed frequent depredations in that vicinity.

Owing to the fact that the measures of economy will be necessary to raise enough money to recruit nine new companies in Minnesota before 1909, under the provisions of the Dick bill, recently passed by congress, national guard officials are considering the plan of shortening the period of encampment of each regiment at Lake City this year to eight days instead of ten days.

BUT WHERE'S THE MAN?

Even the Widower with Nine Children Was Not Immediately at Hand.

Thomas Hunter, the president of the New York normal college, was addressing a band of young women, according to the Kansas City Journal.

"Young women," said Mr. Hunter, "make excellent teachers. I know young women whose genius in this work is as wonderful as the genius of a great painter. Such young women, of course, are rare. But good teachers, extremely good teachers, are not rare. Anyone can become a good teacher who likes the work.

"But if you dislike the work, turn to anything else but teaching. We cannot succeed ever in what we hate.

"Bad teachers, when we find them, are persons who dislike the work. They are like the young girl in the country town who said to one of her friends:

"'Yes, I am going to take up teaching.'

"The friend looked amazed.

"'You?' she exclaimed. 'You a schoolteacher? Why, I'd rather marry a widower with nine children.'

"'So would I,' said the other. 'But where is the widower?'"

In the Spring.

Lowndes, Mo., April 4th.—Mrs. H. C. Harty, of this place, says:

"For years I was in very bad health. Every spring I would get so low that I was unable to do my own work. I seemed to be worse in the spring than any other time of the year. I was very weak and miserable and had much pain in my back and head. I saw Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised last spring and began treatment of them and they have certainly done me more good than anything I have ever used.

"I was all right last spring and felt better than I have for over ten years. I am fifty years of age and am stronger to-day than I have been for many years and I give Dodd's Kidney Pills credit for the wonderful improvement."

The statement of Mrs. Harty is only one of a great many where Dodd's Kidney Pills have proven themselves to be the very best spring medicine. They are unsurpassed as a tonic and are the only medicine used in thousands of families.

ITCHING SCALP HUMOUR.

Suffered Tortures Until Cured by Cuticura—Scratched Day and Night.

"My scalp was covered with little pimples and I suffered tortures from the itching. I was scratching all day and night, and I could get no rest. I washed my head with hot water and Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment as a dressing. One box of the ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap cured me. Now my head is entirely clear and my hair is growing splendidly. I have used Cuticura Soap ever since, and shall never be without it. (Signed) Ada C. Smith, 309 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J."

WORTH REMEMBERING.

There are three entirely different kinds of ingredients used in making the three different varieties of baking powders on the market, viz: (1) Mineral-Acid or Alum, (2) Bone-Acid or Phosphate, and (3) Cream of Tartar made from grapes. It is important, from the standpoint of health, to know something about these ingredients, and which kind is used in your baking powder.

(1) Mineral-Acid, or Alum, is made from a kind of clay. This is mixed with diluted oil of vitriol and from this solution a product is obtained which is alum. Alum is cheap; costs about two cents a pound, and baking powder made with this Mineral-Acid sells from 10 to 25c. a pound.

(2) Bone-Acid, or Phosphate, is the basis of phosphate baking powders and the process is fully described in the patents issued to a large manufacturer of a phosphate powder. The U. S. Patent Office Report gives a full and exact description, but the following extract is enough:

"Burned bones, after being ground, are put into freshly diluted oil of vitriol and with continual stirring and in the following proportion," etc.

From this Bone-Acid phosphate baking powders are made; such powders sell from 20 to 30 cents a pound.

(3) Cream of Tartar exists in all ripe grapes, and flows with the juice from the press in the manufacture of wine. After the wine is drawn off the tartar is scraped from the cask, boiled with water, and crystals of Cream of Tartar, white and very pure, separate and are collected. It differs in no respect from the form in which it originally existed in the grape. Cream of Tartar, then, while the most expensive, is the only ingredient that should be used in a baking powder to act upon the soda, as its wholesomeness is beyond question. Cream of Tartar baking powders sell at about 40 to 50 cents a pound.

Such are the facts, and every one, careful of the health of the family, should remember this rule:—Baking powders selling from 10 to 25 cents a pound are made of Mineral-Acids; those selling from 20 to 30 cents of Bone-Acid; and those from 40 to 50 cents of Cream of Tartar made from grapes.

Dyspepsia of Women

ABSOLUTELY NEEDLESS AGONY

Caused by Uterine Disorders and Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. M. Wright

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by a derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes a disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar uterine-tonic effects also.

As proof of this theory we call attention to the case of Mrs. Maggie Wright, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was completely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after everything else had failed. She writes:

"For two years I suffered with dyspepsia which so degenerated my entire system that I was unable to attend to my daily duties. I felt weak and nervous, and nothing that I ate tasted good and it caused a disturbance in my stomach. I tried different dyspepsia cures, but nothing seemed to help me. I was advised to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and was happily surprised to find that it acted like a fine tonic, and in a few days I began to enjoy and properly digest my food. My recovery was rapid, and in five weeks I was a well woman. I have recommended it to many suffering women."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement, or has such a record of cures of female troubles, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

THE REVISED CODE BECOMES A LAW. LAST DAYS ARE VERY BUSY ONES.

The Anti-Pass Bill Stirs up Rumpus in the House and is Lost on a Vote that was a Tie.

St. Paul, April 13.—The Ware anti-pass bill created a rumpus in the house yesterday when it came up for final action. Notwithstanding the fact that the house was under call and every member supposed to be in his seat and voting, 35 of the 119 members are not recorded. The vote was 42 in favor and 42 against, and the bill was lost. The author of the bill made a hard fight and even submitted cheerfully when an amendment by Representative Fosseen, of Minneapolis, was attached, putting the law into immediate effect, but he was unsuccessful. The measure had had a hard road to travel. It had been before the railway committee more than the customary length of time and when it finally reached the floor of the house its enemies succeeded in sending it back to the committee, where it was expected to die. It was resurrected, however, and a sort of bargain entered into by which it was agreed that it was to be indefinitely postponed in case the Smith bill, increasing the salaries of the members of the legislature, should become a law. Double dealing on the part of some of the bill's opponents was alleged by Mr. Ware, however, and it was brought to a vote avowedly for the purpose of placing the members on record. The majority of those opposing the bill claimed that without railway passes they could not afford to serve in the legislature when the salary was no more than $500 a term.

Two governors appeared before both houses yesterday and delivered brief addresses. Gov. Sarles, of North Dakota, accompanied by the North Dakota capitol commission, were in the city and called upon Gov. Johnson, and the party were invited to become the guests of the legislature. The remarks were all of a felicitous nature.

The final hearing upon the Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill was given by the senate railroad committee Monday afternoon. Few measures which have appeared before the legislature have attracted more attention or been more strenuously opposed by the railways. Practically every company doing business in the state has been represented at the numerous hearings by their ablest attorneys, while the bill has been championed by Representative Nolan, its author, George S. Loftus and D. J. Cannon, representing the Minnesota Municipal League and the Receivers' and Shippers' Association of Minnesota, and others. The general opinion is that the bill will either be greatly amended by the committee or that a substitute submitted to take its place. The friends of the bill make the claim that they have enough pledged votes to put it through the senate in substantially the same shape as passed by the house.

The Fanning bill, imposing a gross earnings tax upon sleeping car companies, has run the gauntlet of committee of the whole in the house and stands a fair chance of reaching the senate. The bill has been amended to make the companies pay a rate equal to the average rate paid on other property in the state.

A resolution offered by Representative Mannix, of Minneapolis, requesting the governor to appoint a commission of five to investigate and recommend to the next legislature a plan for a suitable celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Minnesota's statehood in the year 1908, was adopted under suspension of the rules.

Revised Code.

The joint committee which is considering the revised code is making rapid progress and members say that no difficulty will be experienced in agreeing upon the various points in dispute. The committee has already agreed to recommend that the new code does not go into effect until March 1, 1906. As fixed at present, it would become operative Dec. 1, next. It was found that more time was needed for editing and annotating. The house conferees acceded to the senate game and fish law amendment, one of the serious points of variance, while the senate accepts the house drainage law. Two bills providing for editing and printing the code when it is enacted into law were introduced in the senate by Mr. Wilson yesterday and passed under suspension of the rules. The code itself will probably be reported back from conference today and there is no doubt but that both houses will pass the bill with little delay.

Owing to the exceedingly heavy drafts upon the funds of the state, caused by unexpected and unforeseen circumstances, it has been decided by the joint subcommittee on appropriations to increase the state tax levy slightly for the ensuing two years. This action was not decided upon, however, until after the members of the committee had consulted with Gov. Johnson and the latter had given his assent.

The senate drainage bill has been passed by the house and will become a law when signed by the governor. The bill is a codification of existing laws, with such additions and amendments as have been suggested by experience. It authorizes county commissioners to order ditches and provides that state and railway lands shall bear their share of the necessary tax.

Sioux Treaty.

A commission consisting of Gen. James H. Baker, Azro A. Stone and L. F. Hubbard is created by a bill introduced by Senator Johnson and passed by both houses. The commission is to survey and locate the exact spot in Nicollet county, on the Minnesota river, where Alexander Ramsey negotiated the Traverse des Sioux treaty. It is expected in the future to mark the spot with a suitable monument.

Greek letter societies in the public schools of the state are not favored by the members of the lower house, who recommended the Rachie bill to pass. The bill originally prohibited such societies, not only in the public schools, but in the state university. The latter was finally exempted from the operations of the measure.

The senate has passed the Thorpe bill providing that railways shall not increase their tariff charges without first securing the consent of the state railroad and warehouse commission.

Senator Morgan created a scene on the floor of the senate last Saturday morning be denouncing in the strongest possible language the joint resolution previously passed by both houses memorializing congress to open for settlement 225,000 acres of the Chippewa Indian reservation. Mr. Morgan contended that the aim of the legislation proposed was to give the lumbermen an opportunity to strip the lands of their timber.

In committee of the whole the house approved the Ramsland bill, which provides that no more mineral leases or contracts upon state lands shall be issued until otherwise provided by the legislature. The bills intended to give time for the investigation which has been ordered at the hands of the governor, the state auditor and the attorney general, who are to report two years hence.

Closing Days.

St. Paul, April 17.—The closing days of the legislative session are full of interest and excitement. Bills which have been held back for one purpose or another are now being pushed to the front and the man with the woodchuck is keeping both eyes wide open, waiting for a favorable moment to spring a simple motion to take up such a bill and pass it under suspension of the rules. There has been more or less of a political tinge in some of the proceedings heretofore, but there are indications that the closing days will witness one of the most bitter political battles of the year.

The contest has been brought about by the friends of former State Auditor Dunn, who has just been acquitted by the legislature of the charges lodged against him by former Public Examiner S. T. Johnson. Mr. Dunn had his acts investigated by the house committee on public accounts and expenditures. After that investigation had been concluded the committee turned about and began investigating Mr. Johnson's record as state public examiner. The result, as embodied in the report made to the house Friday, is sensational in the extreme. The investigation was conducted by a subcommittee of the public accounts body, consisting of Chairman Dowling and Messrs. Timberlake, Thayer, Bouck and Mork.

Public Examiner.

The report is quite lengthy, covering a great many points in detail. It alleges that Mr. Johnson, while public examiner, was negligent in the discharge of the duties of his office. It is found that hardly an officer of the state was subjected to an examination during his term in office. A long list of names of state banks are submitted with the assertion that they had not been examined during the years named. Vouchers examined in the department have the appearance of having had the amounts raised. Excessive charges are said to have been made by Mr. Johnson and collected by him from the state for his personal expenses, and he is accused of having approved illegal charges made by his employes.

The report was listened to with great interest and ordered printed in the journal. It is expected that the late public examiner and his friends will vigorously contest the adoption of the report.

Owing to the considerable increase found necessary in the making of appropriations this year the subcommittee on appropriations decided that for the coming year an increase of ½ mill in the tax levy will be necessary and accordingly the customary tax levy bill introduced provides for a levy of 1½ mills, as compared with 1 mill during the past two years. It is estimated that this will bring in $1,200,000 during the coming year. In 1907 the rate is again reduced to 1 mill and the revenue is estimated at $1,000,000.

The committee appointed to investigate the advisability of purchasing or constructing a mansion for the use of the governor of the state has reported in favor of the purchase of the residence of the late Gen. Stone, at a price of $25,000. It is not expected that the legislature will find time to give any further consideration to the subject, however.

Once more the senate has gone on record as opposed to any legislation calculated to abolish private banks in Minnesota and by a vote of 34 to 25, eight less than necessary for passage, killed the Lund house bill. An attempt to amend the bill so that it would not affect existing private banks was a failure.

The Stone senate bill, making interchangeable mileage books good for the use of any party holding them, is now up to the governor for his signature.

The senate has appointed a committee of conference on the bill fixing the salary of the insurance commissioner. The senate originally fixed the salary at $5,000, but the house amended to make it $3,500 after the expiration of the term of the present incumbent.

Gov. Johnson sent in his second veto message, disapproving the Gjertsen bill establishing a state board of [illegible] examiners.

Revised Code a Law.

The revised code is at last the law of the state, or rather, it needs only the signature of the governor to make it so. That Gov. Johnson will approve the bill no one doubts. The passage of this important measure through both houses was forced by the argument that there was no time for delay. It was pointed out that the enrolling of such an enormous legislative document, the biggest bill ever enacted into law in Minnesota, in fact, would require the services of as many persons as could be employed and that several days would be necessary. The need for speed was therefore self-evident, inasmuch as the session comes to an end tomorrow. The passage in the house was accomplished by a vote of 111 to 2, but there were many who voted for the bill after putting up a strong fight for delay of twenty-four hours in which to give it proper examination. In the senate there was no discussion and it went through by a vote of 54 to 3. It will take effect March 1, 1906.

W. I. Nolan's bill providing whipping post punishment for men who beat or assault their wives, after passing the lower house, came to grief in the senate, where the unfavorable report of the judiciary committee was adopted without dissent.

The Rachie bill, abolishing fraternities or sororities in high schools, was killed in the house when it came to the final vote.

Both houses have passed the Flower bill permitting the city of St. Paul to issue bonds to the amount of $150,000 for the purpose of constructing a new bridge across the Mississippi river at Fort Snelling.

The house has passed the Johnson bill imposing a gross earnings tax of 4 per cent upon business done by express companies in Minnesota. The bill provides that the tax shall be paid upon the proportion of interstate business done and will add considerable to the revenues of the state.

The house has killed Senator Alley's bill which was intended to do away with capital punishment in the future.

The passage of the Frater bill, establishing a third state fish hatchery, in the senate was one of the surprises of the past week.

The amended Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill is to come up in the senate Saturday as a special order. The attempt Friday to have the original bill included in the special order, which failed by the lack of 3 votes, is said to have been made by the friends of the original measure for the purpose of testing their strength. The effort will be made to strike out all after the enacting clause of the substitute bill and amend by substituting a bill more satisfactory to the friends of the measure.

Road and Bridge Bill.

The regular omnibus road and bridge appropriation bill was introduced in the house Friday. It carries about $65,000 and will be the last measure of the kind to come before the legislature, owing to the fact that at this session a new law has been adopted establishing a state highway commission, which in future will have charge of such expenditures. The present bill carries appropriations for each county in the state, as follows: Aitkin, $1,100; Anoka, $500; Becker, $1,000; Beltrami, $1,500; Benton, $1,200; Big Stone, $650; Blue Earth, $1,050; Brown, $200; Brown and Nicollet, $1,800; Carlton, $800; Carver, $600; Cass, $200; Cass and Morrison, $1,700; Chippewa, $250; Chippewa and Lac qui Parle, $350; Chisago, $600; Clay, $800; Clearwater, $600; Cook, $500; Cottonwood, $600; Fillmore, $825; Crow Wing, $200; Crow Wing and Morrison, $1,000; Dakota, $1,050; Dodge, $600; Douglas, $900; Faribault, $600; Freeborn, $600; Goodhue, $600; Grant, $500; Hennepin, $1,600; Houston, $800; Hubbard, $1,000; Isanti, $600; Itasca, $1,500; Jackson, $500; Kanabec, $500; Kandiyohi, $600; Kittson, $950; Lac qui Parle, $500; Lake, $800; Le Sueur, $850; Lincoln, $600; Lyon, $650; McLeod, $700; Marshall, $500; Martin, $800; Meeker, $1,000; Mille Lacs, $1,400; Morrison, $250; Mower, $800; Murray, $600; Nicollet, $750; Nobles, $600; Norman, $800; Olmsted, $1,000; Otter Tail, $1,000; Pine, $1,000; Pipestone, $600; Polk, $1,000; Pope, $500; Ramsey, $600; Red Lake, $1,200; Redwood, $600; Renville, $750; Rice, $550; Rock, $500; Roseau, $1,500; St. Louis, $1,400; Scott, $1,050; Scott and Sibley, $300; Sherburne, $650; Sibley, $700; Stearns, $1,000; Steele, $600; Stevens, $600; Swift, $600; Todd, $800; Traverse, $600; Wabasha, $1,000; Wadena, $600; Waseca, $600; Washington, $700; Watonwan, $600; Winona, $1,000; Wilkin, $600; Wright, $600; Yellow Medicine, $600.

A FATAL DUEL WITH KNIVES.

THE FIGHT IS THE SEQUEL OF A PROLONGED SUNDAY CARROUSAL.

John Padua is Stabbed to Death and his Assailant John Stopa is Seriously Wounded.

Minneapolis, April 17.—John Pardula was killed and John Stopa seriously injured in a duel with knives in the hallway of the house at 414 Marshall street northeast at about 11:50 o'clock last night. Pardula was removed to the morgue, while Stopa is at the City hospital, from where he will be removed to the Central station. He is suspected of having killed Pardula, but another man was also arrested as being implicated in the affair.

Besides the two principals, four other men are held as witnesses. They are George Pardula, a brother of the murdered man; Jack Tamashak, an uncle; Joseph Dzicadzina and John Dudzak.

As far as can be learned the fight occurred after an all-day drunk. The dead man, Stopa, George Pardula and Jack Tamashak had been together all afternoon and had visited various saloons. At about 6 o'clock John Pardula had gone to John Povlak's house, 714 Marshall street northeast for supper. The next Povlak heard of him was that he was dead.

John Dudjak, who lives across the street from where the tragedy occurred, was awakened between 11 and 12 o'clock by loud cries, and looking out of the window he saw a number of men in a lively mixup in the hallway of the house opposite. He called his brother and the two ran out to find what the trouble was about, when they saw two men running down Marshall street and disappear between some houses, while Pardula was seen to stagger a few feet up the street and then fall across the sidewalk.

SALOON HELD UP.

Masked Men Enter and Hold Up a Minneapolis Saloon and Secure Cash.

Minneapolis, April 17.—Two masked men entered the saloon of Libowski & Ponaczyk, 701 Marshall street northeast, at 11:30, held up Mr. Ponaczyk and got $55 and a gold watch. They left the place and ran down Seventh avenue in the direction of the river. The saloonkeeper emptied his revolver at them as they ran, but without effect.

Ponaczyk was alone in the saloon when the robbers entered. They drew revolvers on him and commanded him to throw up his hands. The robbers opened the cash register and secured $55 and the gold watch. They also took the gold watch Ponaczyk had in his pocket. He begged so hard to be allowed to retain the watch that they returned it to him.

When the robbers left the place, Ponaczyk got a revolver, which he kept back of the bar, and hastened to the street. He saw the thieves running down the street and fired five shots at them.

Girl is Murdered.

Little Falls, Minn., April 17.—Assaulted and then murdered was the cruel fate met by Miss Annie Kintop, the 19-year-old daughter of Thomas Kintop a farmer living two miles north of Darling, Minnesota. The horrible crime was committed last Monday but the body was not discovered until yesterday.

When found in a swamp within half a mile of Darling the body was completely stripped of all clothing except the shoes.

It was terribly discolored and bruised from the savage attacks of merciless assailants, supposed to be two negroes who were seen about the place prior to the girl's death.

Sentiment in Little Falls, where the dead girl was well known, and at Darling, runs high, and should the criminals be captured a lynching will probably result.

Prisoner Escapes.

Long Prairie, Minn., April 17.—Henry Heck, a prisoner in the county jail here, committed from Staples on the charge of highway robbery, escaped from the building, and no trace of him has yet been discovered. The sheriff had permitted him to go out into the corridor to take a bath, and while the prisoner was thus engaged, the sheriff went to the postoffice for his mail. When he returned the man had gone. The door leading to the jail part of the building was locked, with the key on the outside, as Heck had left it when he departed. The door leads from the jail to the sheriff's office, and the only explanation for the escape is that during the sheriff's absence down town, some one aided the prisoner in his flight by unlocking the door from the outside.

ate per year in advance $1 00.

It is truly astonishing how few rmer's realize the importance protecting farm machinery om water. Each spring thou nds of dollars worth of mach ery is purchased which never ter, during its period of useful ess, is protected from rain or iow. This is a source of great ss to the farmer and can only prevented by providing ade iate shelter for all implements hen you buy a tool, build a shed r it and allow nothing to take s place in that shelter. The use l life of the ordinery farm achin, such as a binder or ower, is increased two thirds three fourths by protecting it om rain or snow. Certainly this reason enough for the building adequate tool houses.

The SUNBEAM's interviewer iled on Congressman Steener on last Wednesday, and friendly sked for his views on timely pics, the Congressman said. I see by the Minneapolis Jour al that two men are held up by e cartoonis't as candidate for resident. Roosevelt as the can late for the bear, and Cleveland that of the game fish-- now let e remark that Roosevelt may be hunter, but the fact that he has ritten books about hunting ould indicate that he may be a sherman but not an angler you now there is a differance be een an angler and a fisherman. n angler is actiss, with an angler is a contest betwcen the wisdom f the fish, and the wisdom of is captor, If a fish desires t ill a fly he intends to commit murder, therefore it is fair to eceive him and the angler will ke advantage of the murderous ropensity of the fish to catch him ow that is fair play is it "a quare deal?" and the smartest ne in the contest wins the bottle, ut that kind of a game can only e played with an artifical fly herefore the only artist in that ne is the fly fisherman who is ntilted to the name of angler. Now Grover Cleveland is a bait sherman, he does not know how o cast a fly and I therefore object to him being classed as a epresentative of the craft. If we, nglers desire to present a candi ate we will do so, but we will ot accept the Minneapolis Jour al as our organ, nor will we ac nowledge Cleveland as our member of our fraternity.

The man to represent us must e a fly fisherman in octur words n angler, an artist, and we have nly two such men in the state. In the words of Isaac Walton, I envy no man because he eates better meat then I do, nor because he has more power and influence than I have. I envy him, and him alone that catches more fish than I do. That remark however, does not relate to murder of fish by bait, traps, and nets, but to catch fish fairly by the angler's art which to my mind is the greatest art in the world.

The Story of a Discovery.

How many valuable inventions have been the result of pure accident, while in other cases men have puzzled their brains with study for a lifetime and brought forth nothing!

It happened one night that a big starch factory on the banks of the Liffey, near Dublin, took fire, and great puddles of starch and water were left outside.

Some calico printers who had been out all night and were quite tipsy came along toward morning, and one of them stumbled into one of the puddles. He found it so sticky that all his clothes stuck to him so fast that he had to stay in bed next morning till his wife soaked them out.

The man knew from his trade that the starch and water had formed a very powerful and valuable gum. He went back to the place of the fire and investigated, and the result was the discovery of the adhesive gum now used in sticking postage stamps and which has made many rich. But temperance lecturers need not know it.—Boston Globe.

MAJESTIC SCENERY.

CURIOUS ROCK FORMATIONS ON THE COLUMBIA RIVER.

The Pillars of Hercules, Two Picturesque Basaltic Columns, Rise From the Oregon Side of the Stream. Towering Mountain Peaks.

The person who gave the name Pillars of Hercules to two picturesque basaltic columns rising from the edge of the Columbia river, in the Cascade range, on the Oregon side of the river, chose a name that was peculiarly appropriate. One of the interesting nuts which the geologists in this country have had to crack has been when and how the majestic Columbia burst through the basaltic Cascade range and found its way to the foaming margin of the Northern Pacific ocean. Who knows if the mighty Hercules—who, according to the ancient Greeks, when returning from the western kingdom of Geryon tore asunder the European and African continents in order that the waters of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean might mingle—did not go beyond Erythia, Geryon's island kingdom, and perform a like service for the Columbia river? It certainly would have been a feat worthy of his prowess. The Columbia river, after pursuing its placid way across the arid wastes of land on the eastern side of the Cascade range for nearly 200 miles, approaches the stately row of mountain peaks and pushes through between the towering peaks, Mounts Hood and Adams. After descending in a boiling cascade, from which it is said that the range of peaks derives its name, the Columbia, or, as it has often been called, the Oregon, rolls between ever widening banks to the white bulwark erected by the turbulent sea across its mouth.

One with a good strong arm could throw a stone across the river at the point where it enters the portals of the mountains. Literally the river has turned itself on edge in order to squeeze through. Some distance below this point the river pours over a succession of rugged ledges; then it smilingly passes on its way to the sea. The scenery in this cut through the mountains is thought by some to rival in sublimity that to be found anywhere in the world. Pinnacles of volcanic rock tower toward the heavens. On them have lodged seeds carried thither by the wind or birds. From these seeds trees have germinated. These cling to the rocks with a remarkable tenacity, and some of them, one would think, have a precarious living. On the very summit of one of these Pillars of Hercules a single representative of the evergreen trees which abound on the Western slope of the Cascades elevates its foliage with all the impudent audacity and farcical diminutiveness of a clown's stovepipe hat. There it stands as securely fastened and its foliage as rakishly inclined as the hat on the clown's brow. What depth of soil it has in which to plant its roots doubtless not many know, for the ascent of the column has probably been accomplished by few. It is said that in the early days of commerce on the Columbia, when sailing ships plowed their way up the stream into the heart of the country, the yardarms would often become entangled in the branches of the trees which overhung the water. To the sailors after their long sojourn at sea it was like entering paradise. Beautiful waterfalls add to the charm of the scene. They come pouring as if from the sky over precipices 800 feet high and, hidden in mist, plunge into the serene bosom of the great river.

There are a number of other striking formations of basaltic columns besides the Pillars of Hercules. There are battlemented castles, rounded domes and a thousand rocks of other fantastic shapes. One group of pinnacles, down which numerous small streams descend, is called Cape Horn. Dominating the scene everywhere through this region are the two extinct volcanoes, snowcapped warders of the pass, Mount Adams on the north and Mount Hood on the south.

The Indians have a legend as to the origin of the obstructions to navigation which form the cascades. They say that the two earth giants, the mountains, jealous of each other's power, once quarreled furiously. They belched forth fire and smoke and hurled great stones at each other. Some of these stones passed across the river, while many others fell into the stream. In the fierce conflict a roof of rock which spann the river was broken into fragments. The lodging of all these fragments and stones in the stream created the cascades.

The white man has several theories. One is that the ledge of solid rock over which the current sweeps was deposited by a great rockslide down the sides of the gorge. These mountain sides are wildernesses of broken crags extending to the summits, 3,000 feet high. The ledge is crowned with large bowlders so great that the massy body of water cannot move them.—New York Tribune.

Tortillas.

Tortillas, the Mexican substitute for wheat bread, are made from selected corn. The kernels are boiled soft in limewater and after being thoroughly washed are rubbed between the hands to remove the outer husk. They are then ground while wet to a soft mass with stones or a peanut butter mill, patted into thin cakes, baked on a dry griddle and eaten while still hot.

The Literal Truth.

Dunns—What do you mean by sending me word that you were not in? Debts—I didn't. I sent you word that I was out. Dunns—Well, and what did you mean by that? Debts—Exactly what I said. I am out of cash.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

ENDURANCE IN DANCING.

Rome has recently entered the arena of odd competitions by promoting a dancing match, the prizes being awarded to the dancers who made the greatest number of steps in a given time. The records made were certainly astounding, for at the close it was found that a woman had actually danced 28,000 steps, while her nearest rival, also a woman, had the creditable score of 21,000 steps. It is a tribute to the terpsichorean superiority of women that the most nimble footed of the men did not reach even 15,000 steps.

In another dancing tournament at Paris M. Vincent and Mlle. Scherin succeeded in waltzing for six hours and three-quarters without a moment's rest, while a Berlin man waltzed for sixteen consecutive hours, from 9 a. m. to 1 o'clock the next morning.

The Simplon "Subway."

The biggest thing in subways just now—next, of course, to Mr. McDonald's—is the Simplon tunnel under the Alps from Brieg to Isella.

The tunnel is twelve miles long and costs about as much per mile as New York's. Instead of running under a Tenderloin it has at one point more than 4,000 feet of solid rock above it.

The New York subway was troubled by underground streams of water. The Simplon work was recently almost stopped by hot water courses in the rock. Whence came they? The mountains above are snowy much of the year and cool always.

The crown of the Simplon tunnel is nearly half a mile above the sea.

Last, but First.

John Lund, former president of the Norwegian house of parliament and a delegate to the recent international peace congress, can write English very well, but occasionally makes a mistake in rhetoric and the pronunciation of words. He made a rather funny break in responding to the address of welcome given by Secretary Hay. Mr. Lund was referring to the action of the United States in promoting the universal peace movement. As he strove to bring out the point of his argument he said, "And last, but not least, first of all, we must interest all nations as much as the United States has been interested."

The Quick Lunch.

Sir William McEwen, a professor of Glasgow university, is an authority for the view that "the quick lunch" is a health destroyer. In an address to the Charing Cross medical school of London he said that people seemed to act as though "food should be thrown into the stomach as a sandwich into the pocket." He complains that "mastication is not taught in schools" and says it is time that "certificates should be given in schools for sound digestion. Instead of doing that we appoint royal commissions to inquire into the causes of physical deterioration of the race."

Carlyle's Courteous Side.

In the "Retrospects" of Professor William Knight of the University of St. Andrews are some interesting anecdotes. Among these is a bit from a letter by Dr. Maclagan, who attended Thomas Carlyle during Carlyle's last years: "My personal experience of Carlyle was this: He was the most courteous man I ever met. Never once did that old man fail to rise up to receive me nor allow me to leave his room without walking to the door with me while he had strength to do so. After death all the ruggedness and the wrinkles disappeared from his face. But for the beard it was like that of a woman, so delicate and beautifully molded it was."

Protect the Back.

People are more likely to catch cold in the back than they are generally aware of, and if neglected it may prove a serious matter. The back, especially between the shoulders, should always be kept well covered, and never lean with your back against anything that is cold. Never sit with the back in a direct draft, and when warming it by the fire do not continue to keep the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do so is debilitating.—Journal of Health.

"Burned" by Cold.

Intense cold, as is well known, burns—if we may use the term—like heat. If a "drop" of air at a temperature of 180 degrees below zero were placed upon the hand it would have the same effect as would the same quantity of molten steel or lead. Every one who has the care of horses ought to know the pain inflicted by placing a frosted bit in a horse's mouth. It burns like hot iron.

Advice About Eggs.

A writer in the Delineator gives some sensible advice about eggs. There is a general impression that eggs, acknowledged to be a complete food, may be safely eaten on all occasions. On the contrary, as the writer alluded to points out, invalids and young children should never be given eggs unless they are very fresh. Persons suffering from biliousness, gastritis and several other troubles find difficulty in digesting even fresh eggs. Some physicians declare that the slightest tendency toward rheumatism makes eggs undesirable. The white of eggs whipped to a froth with a little water is a good thing to give fever patients, as a rule, but the physician should be consulted before even this is given to a sick person.

Elevated Rivers.

The most elevated river in the world is the Desaguadero, in Bolivia. It is of a considerable depth, and its whole length, from the village Desaguadero, at the south extremity of Titicaca, to the north end of the lake Aullagas, is about 180 miles. The average elevation of the valley or tableland of Desaguadero above the level of the sea is about 13,000 feet. The river whose source lies highest is the Indus, which rises on the north of the Kailas Parbat mountain, in Tibet, 22,000 feet above sea level.

How Horace Walpole Dressed.

In the early part of the eighteenth century, says the author of "Social England," a fashionable gentleman ordinarily wore a toupee of curls raised high over his forehead. For daily wear most gentlemen were dressed like George I., dark tie, wig, plain coat, waistcoat and breeches of snuff colored cloth and stockings of the same color; for ceremony, like Horace Walpole, in a lavender suit, the waistcoat embroidered with a little silver or of white silk embroidered in the tambour frame, partridge silk stockings, gold buckles, ruffles, lace frill and powdered wig. The linen for shirts was bought in Holland, costing from 10 to 14 shillings the English ell.

Marie Corelli's first story, "A Romance of Two Worlds," which made her name, was sent to the London publishing house of Bentley. Hall Caine was the principal reader of that house, and his report condemned the book so strenuously that it was rejected. Miss Corelli was deeply discouraged, but after some time she was persuaded to send the manuscript to another publisher. He accepted it eagerly and made a big fortune out of it and out of her later novels.

What Won the Girl.

It was in a subway train. On the lap of a woman, apparently her mother, sat a girl of some eighteen months. Next to them was another mother with her two-year-old son. Each woman petted the other's child, and the boy liked the attention and laughed and crowed. The girl maintained a straight face. She did not fret, nor apparently did she want to cry, but if the word can be used in the case of one so young she was bored. The petting of her own mother and of the other woman clearly had no effect. Then the little boy entered the lists. Edging up to the child he put his arms around her neck and said, "I love 'oo!" Then it was that there broke over the baby's face the first smile that had appeared since the long subway ride from Harlem began. And as for the mothers, the usual and natural comments as to prescience followed.—New York Tribune.

Letters of Marque.

Letters of marque and reprisal, as they were called, were first issued in the time of Edward I. to give leave to retaliate beyond the marches or limits of a country for wrongs suffered at the hands of a power nominally at peace. In this first instance they were aimed at Portugal. About a hundred years later two Hanse towns in Mecklenburg, wishing to relieve their prince, who was beleaguered in Stockholm, issued letters of marque—thieves' letters, as the sufferers called them—to all the rascals of the Baltic, authorizing them to victual the besieged city. This done, they turned themselves into a confederacy of sea robbers known as Victualing brothers, or St. Vitalius' brothers, and rendered the Scandinavian seas unsafe for half a century.

All the News.

A wise editor says: "A man told us the other day that we did not publish all the things that happened. We should say not. In the first place, there is somebody else depending on us for a living. If we printed all that happens we would soon be with the angels. In order to please the people we must print only the nice things said of them and leave the rest to gossip. Yet it's a fact we don't publish all the news. If we did wouldn't it make spicy reading? But it would be for one week only; the next week you would read our obituary. All the news is all right when it's about the other fellow."

Japanese "Silent" Music.

A curious ceremony is performed in Japan by the court musicians at certain Shinto festivals. Both stringed and wind instruments are used, but it is held that no sound should be allowed to fall upon unworthy ears, and, as some of the ears present might be unworthy, all the motions of playing are gone through by the musicians, but not a single sound is heard. This strange custom dates back many generations, but since the advent of civilization has rapidly lost favor.

A New Variety.

A New York woman tells of an experience which she had recently in one of the large department stores. She was looking for some house furnishings and, walking up to one of the floorwalkers, asked where she could see the candelabra.

"All canned goods two counters to the left," answered the official guide briefly.—Harper's Weekly.

Extremes In the Mails.

Extremes sometimes meet in the mails. In a recent pile of exchanges the Yukon News from Dawson, Yukon territory, was in juxtaposition with the Isle of Pines Appeal from Santa Fe, Isle of Pines, and the Freethinker of London lay cheek by jowl with the Christian Intelligencer of New York.—New York Tribune.

Saved It.

Aunt Jane—What a man Henry is to tear and swear! You used to say he never lost his temper. Emily—Yes, that's when he was paying attention to me. Evidently he was saving until after he was married.—Boston Transcript.

PAINFUL PERIODS

Suggestions How to Find Relief from Such Suffering.

Miss Nellie Holmes
Mrs Tillie Hart

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality. If it is painful or irregular something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to a serious derangement of the whole female organism.

More than fifty thousand women have testified in grateful letters to Mrs. Pinkham that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes painful and irregular menstruation.

It provides a safe and sure way of escape from distressing and dangerous weaknesses and diseases.

The two following letters tell so convincingly what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do for women, they cannot fail to bring hope to thousands of sufferers.

Miss Nellie Holmes of 540 N. Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Your medicine is indeed an ideal medicine for women. I suffered misery for years with painful periods, headaches, and bearing-down pains. I consulted two different physicians but failed to get any relief. A friend from the East advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and no longer suffer as I did before. My periods are natural; every ache and pain is gone, and my general health is much improved. I advise all women who suffer to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Tillie Hart, of Larimore, N. D., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I might have have been spared many months of suffering and pain had I only known of the efficacy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sooner; for I have tried so many remedies without help.

"I dreaded the approach of my menstrual period every month, as it meant so much pain and suffering for me, but after I had used the Compound two months I became regular and natural and am now perfectly well and free from pain at my monthly periods. I am very grateful for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound rests upon the well-earned gratitude of American women.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating, (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

SOUTHERN CONDITIONS AND POSSIBILITIES.

In no part of the United States has there been such wonderful Commercial, Industrial and Agricultural development as along the lines of the Illinois Central and the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroads in the States of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, within the past ten years. Cities and towns have doubled their population. Splendid business blocks have been erected. Farm lands have more than doubled in value. Hundreds of industries have been established and as a result there is an unprecedented demand for

Day Laborers, Skilled Workmen, and especially Farm Tenants.

Parties with small capital, seeking an opportunity to purchase a farm home; farmers who would prefer to rent for a couple of years before purchasing; and day laborers in fields or factories should address a postal card to Mr. J. F. Merry, Asst. General Passenger Agent, Dubuque, Iowa, who will promptly mail printed matter concerning the territory above described, and give specific replies to all inquiries.

Applied History.

"Dear dad," wrote the boy from college. "We are studying current history, and I am getting to understand it finely. By the way, my creditors are bothering me considerably, so please send me $200 in addition to my usual allowance."

"My dear son," was the reply. "Your creditors have also been harassing me. I am, therefore, glad that you are so familiar with current history, as you will understand what I mean when I say that, until they are satisfied I will have to take charge of your custom house."—Pittsburg Post.

Hoped It Was True.

"Before you married me," he complained, "you used to say that there wasn't another man like me in the world."

"Yes, and now," replied the wife, "I should not like to think that there was!"—Boston Globe.

In France women can wear trousers by paying ten dollars a year. Consequently, as a rule, they do not care to. Perhaps this is fortunate, considering the American habit of following French fashions.—Boston Globe.

A Wonderful Discovery.

Broadland, S. Dak., March 28.—Quite a sensation has been created here by the publication of the story of G. W. Gray, who after a special treatment for three months was prostrate and helpless and given up to die with Bright's Disease. Bright's Disease has always been considered incurable, but evidently from the story told by Mr. Gray, there is a remedy which will cure it even in the most advanced stages. This is what he says:

"I was helpless as a little babe. My wife and I searched everything and read everything we could find about Bright's Disease, hoping that I would be able to find a remedy. After many failures my wife insisted that I should try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I praise God for the day when I decided to do so, for this remedy met every phase of my case and in a short time I was able to get out of bed, and after a few weeks' treatment I was a strong, well man. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life."

A remedy that will cure Bright's Disease will cure any lesser Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the most wonderful discovery which modern medical research has given to the world.

This is an illustration of English as she is spoke: I once said to a girl: "Will you not marry me?" And she said: "Yes, I will not marry you."—N. Y. Times.

DR. C. PUSHECK,
192 Washington St., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS with Pusheck's Kuro is that it does what no other medicine can do. It affects the grand trio—the Stomach, the Blood, and the Nerves—that controls and regulates the whole body—it corrects the digestion and assimilation of food; keeps up the body, and corrects, regulates and strengthens the nerves. This explains why one medicine permanently cures so many apparently different diseases.—Other remedies work on one organ only, and cannot affect a complete cure. PUSHECK'S KURO regenerates the entire system.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Fee Incomes.

The income of the various fee offices in the state are as follows:

The governor's private secretary received fees for the years of 1903 and 1904, aggregating $8,873, and in addition a yearly salary of $1,500, making an annual compensation of $5,936.50. While this is nearly a thousand a year more than the governor receives, it is less than the office had been supposed to pay, which was all the way from $7,000 to $10,000 a year.

The clerk of the supreme court, who has been supposed to pocket $10,000 a year or more, received $7,717 in 1903 and $7,443 in 1904, out of which he paid the remainder of the staff of his office, leaving him a little over $4,000 net income.

The net income of the surveyors general of logs and lumber for the principal districts are ascertained by the committee as follows:

Minneapolis district	$6.706
Duluth district	6,014
Stillwater district	3,887

No other offices were investigated, everything else being either insignificant or else practically on a salary basis.

The fees of the public examiner amount to $600 a year from the examination of St. Paul city accounts, and $170 a year from building and loan associations, which in addition to his $3,500 salary, make an annual income of $4,270 for the head of the department.

Big Fire.

The Palace livery barn, one of the largest establishments of its kind in the state at Luverne, together with 27 horses and livery equipment, was destroyed by fire. The fire was discovered a few minutes after it started, but spread so rapidly that only six horses and a few buggies were taken out.

The barn was located only fifty feet from Maniton hotel, recently constructed at a cost of $35,000, and for a time it was feared this and all surrounding buildings were doomed. The absence of wind was what saved a widespread conflagration. Plate glass windows across the street were broken and solder on galvanized iron copings on the buildings across the street was melted by the intense heat.

State Census.

Governor Johnson has signed the state census bill and preparations will be made at once for numerations by Secretary of State Peter E. Hanson. Quarters will be selected on the second and third floor of capitol, probably in some of the legislative committee rooms, for a corps of clerks. There will be some 3,000 enumerators named on recommendation of senators and representatives. In towns of 5,000 and over, they will receive $2 a hundred names; In towns of less than 5,000 and not more than 5,000, $2.25 a hundred names; in sparcely settled rural districts 2½ cents a name.

Beat the Ordinance.

The ordinance prohibiting the giving of free lunches by saloonkeepers of Winona was declared invalid ay a jury in the case of Alex Artz declaring him not guilty of the offense. A peculiar defense was advanced. The ordinance provides that the saloonkeepers shall not give away lunches for the purpose of increasing the sale of liquors. By the testimony of three physicians it was shown that a person who ate a lunch would not drink so much, and the jury acquitted the defendant on this technicality.

Refused the Piano.

A gift of a $2,000 mahogany piano for the governor's reception room in the new capitol was refused by Gov. Johnson. S. W. Raudenbush of St. Paul made the offer and said the piano would be constructed especially to conform with the design of the other furniture in the magnificent reception room.

Gov. Johnson said he had no authority to accept the gift as he is not custodian of the capitol building and has no control over the furniture or other equipment of the building.

Suicide.

John Bishop of Gull Lake, one of the old-time residents, died from strychnine. He formerly conducted the Bishop ranch at Gull Lake, one of the most popular summer resorts in Northern Minnesota. It is thought he had brooded over financial matters, having recently disposed of his land and belongings about Gull Lake. He leaves several children, but the wife died several years ago.

News Notes.

Timothy Doyle, twelve years old and living with his parents in St. Paul, had his right leg lacerated at the knee and ankle by a bulldog.

Lewis Auster was discovered dead in a barn of J. H. Sullivan, at Lakeville.

The passenger steamer Fountain City was launched at Stillwater. Miss Irene Hanks, daughter of one of the owners, Benjamin Hanks of South Stillwater, christened the boat, using the traditional bottle of champagne.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Hamre celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day at Faribault.

The independent oil dealers of the Twin Cities carry their fight against the Standard Oil company into the Dakotas.

The Turtle river drive of logs, which will aggregate 25,000,000 feet, will be started in a few days. The logs were landed by the Blakeley & Farley company near the village of Farley. It is estimated that 250 men will be employed on the drive, which is expected to reach Cass Lake July 1.

ALL BROKEN DOWN.

No Sleep—No Appetite—Just a Continual Backache.

Joseph McCauley, of 144 Sholto street, Chicago, Sachem of Tecumseh Lodge, says: "Two years ago my health was completely broken down. My back ached and was so lame that at times I was hardly able to dress myself. I lost my appetite and was unable to sleep. There seemed to be no relief until I took Doan's Kidney Pills; but four boxes of this remedy effected a complete and permanent cure. If suffering humanity knew the value of Doan's Kidney Pills they would use nothing else, as it is the only positive cure I know."

A Heavy Fine.

Under the Elkins law, any railroad company which pays rebates in any form, or any shipper who accepts them, is liable to a fine of from $1,000 to $20,000, upon conviction. It also prohibits the carrying of freight at less than the published tariffs. The Interstate Commerce Commission is empowered to detect and prosecute violators of this statute. President Knapp, of the Commission, states that since this law was passed, rebate paying has been as rare as forgery.

"MY WIFE'S PEOPLE COMING"

"We Have Had a Splendid Winter" in Western Canada.

Canada's inrush this year is wonderfully great and considerably ahead of any previous year. It is always interesting to those who contemplate moving to read expressions of opinion from those living in the country. It is therefore our pleasure to reproduce the following written to an Agent of the Government and forwarded to the Immigration Branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa:

Birch Hills, Sask, Can., Feb. 1, 1905.

Dear Sir: I take pleasure in dropping you a few lines to let you know how we are getting along up here and how we like the place. We have been here close on to a year now and think the place is fine. We have been out every day this winter working in the bush getting out logs for buildings, etc., getting rails for fencing. We have not suffered with the cold as much as we did in Chicago. My little boys are out every day with their sleighs having a good time. The lowest the temperature has been this winter is 34 below and it is very still, no wind.

We had a splendid summer. We put up about 50 tons of hay and will have about 30 tons to sell; hay brings $8.00 per ton now and will be higher in the spring. We have 20 acres broke and ready for crop. We worked on the Can. Nor. Ry. for awhile this summer and am just 3 miles from the R. R. and townsite. The steel is all laid to within 2 miles of the River and we often see the train bringing supplies for the Bridge.

My wife's people are coming up about May. I wish you would write them and if there should be anyone coming to Prince Albert that could do with a half a car let them know. The homesteads are all taken up within 12 miles of us. I often think if this land were only in the States what a rush there would be; it is the richest land and the most productive I ever saw, and the climate is O. K.

I know that people back there that I write to do not believe me when I write them what a splendid winter we are having, they think we are all frozen up. We have only about 8 inches of snow, and there are cattle on the range that have not been rounded up this winter. Day after day the Ther. raises up to 50 and 60, and I don't believe we have had a day this winter that it has stayed at zero. My wife says that we used to think that zero was cold in Chicago. But we don't mind it one bit. Christmas night we went out and drove 5 miles with our 3 little boys, it was 20 below and there was not a whimper from anyone of them. I'd hate to do it in old Chicago.

Well, I guess I will close and you can tell anyone in the U. S. that they cannot do better than come to the Prince Albert District. I remain,

Yours truly,
(Signed) J. D. HEAD.

THE DEATH OF JOE JEFFERSON.

THE EMINENT ACTOR PASSES AWAY AT HIS HOME AT PALM BEACH, FLA.

The End Came After a Day of Unconsciousness. All America will Mourn the Loss of the Dean of the Stage.

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 24.—Joseph Jefferson, the eminent actor, died at his home, "The Reefs," at Palm Beach, at 6:15 last evening.

The end came after a day of unconsciousness and after a heroic struggle of days, which had exhausted his vitality.

At his deathbed were his wife, his sons, Charles B. and Frank Jefferson, his nurse, Miss Mabel Bingham, Dr. R. H. Potter, and his faithful old servant, Carl Kettler.

The end was not a surprise to his family. Ever since his last sinking spell, which came after a rally on Thursday morning, and which was followed by an apparent improvement until Friday, the family has been waiting for the end.

The sickness of Mr. Jefferson, which ended in his death, was contracted, it is believed, while on a visit to his son, Charles B. Jefferson, at Hobe sound, a few miles above Palm Beach, where he went to meet his friend, former President Cleveland.

It is believed that from a slight indisposition in his eating there, he suffered an attack of indigestion.

The body of Mr. Jefferson will be taken to Buzzards Bay on a special, leaving here today, accompanied by all the members of his family.

It will reach New York Wednesday morning and the family hope to reach Buzzards Bay the evening of that day.

New York, April 24.—Mr. Jefferson was president of the Players' club in this city and the news of his death was received with expressions of regret on all sides.

Joseph Jefferson was born in Philadelphia, Feb. 20, 1829, and was looked upon as the dean of the dramatic profession in this country.

Object to Grading.

Minneapolis, April 24.—Complaints regarding the manner in which wheat is graded in Minneapolis and Duluth have been lodged with Governor Johnson. It was not known that such complaints had been made until Governor Johnson hastily called a conference of all the members of the state board of grain appeals whom he could get together.

It is charged that the same wheat which is graded No. 1 northern at Duluth is graded No. 2 northern at Minneapolis and vice versa. It has been suggested by Governor Johnson that the members of the board of grain appeals alternate between Duluth and Minneapolis in the hearing of the cases appealed from the decisions of the inspectors.

Crucified.

Trinidad, Col., April 24.—On the cross, just as the Savior died centuries ago, a fanatical member of the Penitentes is reported to have died.

Several Trinidad people claim to have been among the eyewitnesses, but they agreed among themselves not to talk for publication.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State High School.

The state agricultural high school established at Crookston by the legislature, will be one of the most novel institutions in the country. Superintendent Hoverstad of the state experiment farm, who has had plans for the school under consideration, has given the matter careful attention, and the school from every standpoint will be something unique in the educational line.

The school will be established at the state experiment farm as a part of that institution. Instructors who will teach the classes in the high school will also have charge of various departments on the big farm. The pupils who attend the high school will be given an opportunity to work on the experiment farm for their board and a portion of their expenses. All of the common branches as well as the higher branches which pertain to agriculture and farm work will be taught, and it is expected from time to time that the scope of the work will be increased. Farmers of the valley are enthusiastic over the enterprise, and from present indications the school will not not want for hearty support.

A New Industry.

Thief River Falls promises in the near future to be the center of one of the largest industries in the state, according to the ideas of Northern Minnesota capitalists who are behind an investigation of the wire grass twine manufacturing possibilities at that place. According to cruisers who know every inch of the ground above Thief River and to the east of the town, there is enough wire grass to maintain an enormous wire grass twine plant in Thief River Falls for many years. The twine has been used quite generally in this vicinity during the last two years and has been found to be equal to hemp or sisal in the grain fields of the valley, and much cheaper. Plans are completed for active work toward the organization at Thief River Falls and to manufacture from wire grass twine, cordage, matting, rugs and carpets.

The grass grows to a height of several feet and is woven by the settlers north and east of Thief River Falls to numerous articles of fancy work.

Hold Up Boom.

Mike Anderson and Louis Perkio, settlers on the Floodwood river in the western part of St. Louis county, have held up a driving crew at the point of the rifles and threaten to shoot if they undertake to send logs down from the boom.

The settlers claim that the owners of the logs, Coolidge & Schussler have made no agreement for compensating them for log driving and boom privileges.

A constable sought to serve warrants on the settlers but when he arrived with seven deputies he found Anderson and Perkio entrenched in the latter's house and with eight other men, all armed.

The sheriff of St. Louis county has been requested to come and suppress the settlers.

The Floorwood River Improvement company claims that it has made settlement for the right to drive logs through the Anderson-Perkio lands.

A Statue for Ramsey.

A statue for Alexander Ramsey, the first governor of the territory of Minnesota, and its governor during the civil war, will be placed in national statuary hall in the capitol at Washington.

The house passed Senator McGill's bill naming a commission.

The senate concurred in the house amendment to Senator A. R. McGill's bill providing for a statue of Former Governor Alexander Ramsey to be placed in the statuary hall at the national capitol. The house amendment was the elimination of the $15,000 appropriation. The bill creates a commission consisting of James J. Hill of St. Paul, T. B. Walker of Minneapolis and Congressman James T. McCleary of Mankato to secure the statue.

New Guns.

The artillery division of the national guard soon will be made more formidable from a military standpoint by the receipt of an entirely new set of field equipment. The new guns will be four in number and will be accompanied by all the paraphernalia and equipment for field service.

The issuance of the new guns will be made simultaneously with the shipment of the same class of equipment to all the national guard headquarters. Congress at its last session appropriated $1,500,000 for this purpose. The shipment to the St. Paul and Minneapolis batteries will be made from the Rock Island arsenal.

The Sauk Center Herald tells this pathetic story: A bachelor merchant in a western town slept in the back part of his store. He died last month and it was a week before the people found him. He did'nt dvertise and no one visited his store.

The Plummer Pioneer settles the questron for all time by stating that Red Lake Falls was afraid to have the county seat question come to a vote. Charley ought to know—he gets paid for his ideas.—Red Lake Falls Gazette,

Well Charley ought to get a reasonable compensation for his ideas, as he change them on order.

The recommendation of R. J Montague as register of the U S Land office at Crookston, by congressman Steenerson, will be heartily indorsed by the people of the district, who have the honor of his acquaintance. Mr. Montague is well qualified for the positision, as he has had a long practice as an attorney before the land office,

Our Representatives in the legislature, have done well in the matter of securing state appropriations for improvements in their district. $50,000 was appropriated for drainage and $ 35,000 was for improvements and tile drainage on the experiment farm. Representative Bennett is certainly entitled to great honor for the good work he has done in the legislature the past winter.

THE CLEARWATER WAR.

The editor of the Olberg Journal comes after the Bagley fellow with the following threat which had ought to make them sorry for doing what they could to secure that court house, which the farmer's must pay for.

"Those who have stood by the people in this county in their fight for their sacred privileges, are promised and propheised every thing that is detrimental by Bagley's businessmen, who still laud themselves with the theory that they carry the people in their vest pocket. We lament their lunacy, but are exualtant over the large number of bloody scalps the people of Clearwater county will carry off before their very van of battle. Bagley has thrown down the gauntlet; the people have excepted their challenge. Their open threats to do one individual or individuals of the people is accepted as a challenge to one and all. If the business men at our county seat prefer to carry the fight further, which will now go over to the commerical resourses of the county. The people are ready on deck, to cut Bagley out of three-fourts of all business done by them at the county seat, in line of selling their farm produce, purchasing of all lines of mercantile, clothing and banking business. They have Lengby, Shevlin and Fosston within arms reach tempting to lure this trade and they will, if Bagley people still persist to ride their stubborn mule. The farmers are the class of people in the world which make the wheels turn, and the pockets of all business men jingle with gold; without them, their face grows thin, their stock grows slack, their bank account small, and all at once they find themselves destitute. Why? Because, the farmers have turned upon them, and done their selling and buying elsewhere! It is now up to the business men of Bagley to decide, Slaughter (supposed) and be slaughtered,"

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Cleaning Tinware.

Do not spend hours scouring the tins in the pantry, but put them on to boil in strong borax water. They will come out bright as when new and then require only a thorough washing and drying. Agate ware, iron kettles, dripping pans, spiders, etc., can be made like new by putting them on to boil in lye water. Do not touch the water with the fingers, but scoop out the articles with a wooden spoon and put at once into a tub of clear water to wash away the lye. From this water put each article into a tub of hot soapsuds and wash thoroughly, using a little sand soap on any obstinate spots. Do not leave too long in the lye water, but work quickly.

About the House.

Common whiting mixed with ammonia makes excellent silver polish.

Kerosene brightens brass ornaments and keeps them from tarnishing.

Use a knife to break an egg. The contents of the egg are more easily handled.

Hang up the clothes brushes and the whisk brooms. It needs but a few cents invested in nails and screw eyes.

Lamp wicks are not expensive. It is poor economy to strain the eyes and spend every morning filling lamps when time and eyes can be spared by throwing away the short, blackened wick.

Vegetables as Medicine.

If you are wakeful eat lettuce.

For affections of the skin and for yellow skin eat onions. Onions are also good for colds, coughs and scrofula.

For a torpid liver eat freely of asparagus.

For malaria and general breakdown eat cranberries.

If nervous and irritable eat plenty of celery.

For constipation eat fruits—ripe and healthy fruits. Fresh fruits are good, so are figs and dates. Raisins are beneficial.

Oyster Stuffing.

A delicious oyster stuffing is made by taking two scant teacupfuls of stale breadcrumbs, one-half pint of oysters drained and cut in half. Season with salt, pepper, celery salt, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of sweet cream to moisten the crumbs and one well beaten egg. Mix and fill the fowl or chicken. Garnish the bird before carving with fried oysters and parsley.

PLUM PUDDING.

Plain Directions For Making This Christmas Luxury.

Place in a vessel one pound of beef kidney suet, very dry, free from fibers and chopped very fine; one pound of seeded Malaga raisins; one pound of currants, cleaned and washed in plenty of water; one pound of bread crumbs, sifted through a sieve; a quarter of a pound of lemon peel, chopped very fine; one pound of powdered sugar, four tablespoonfuls of flour, a quarter of an ounce of nutmeg and allspice; a pint of brandy and six eggs.

Mix the whole well together. Dip a strong cloth in cold water and wring it out to extract all the moisture. Spread it open on a table and butter it liberally with butter softened to the consistency of cream. Dredge over with sifted flour and shake the cloth to remove any excess of the flour that failed to adhere to the butter. Lay in the center of the cloth the prepared mixture. Form it in the shape of a ball and raise up the edges of the cloth, bringing the four ends together all around, so as to inclose the preparation well, then tighten and tie firmly.

Have on the fire a high saucepan three-quarters full of water. When this boils plunge in the plum pudding and let it cook for three hours. Then remove it and have it stand for five minutes before cutting the string. Undo the cloth carefully and invert the pudding on a hot dish. Sprinkle it with sugar. Pour over some brandy or rum and set it on fire. Serve immediately with hard sauce.—St. Louis Post.

MODERN MAGAZINES.

The Work That Must Be Done by a Successful Editor.

The poor editor who should be so fatuous as to depend for the contents of his magazine on the driftwood that came in to him would soon be replaced or his magazine would needs go out of business. Not only has the day gone by when editors sat in easy chairs and majestically sifted wheat from chaff in the piles of stuff sent prayerfully to them, but gone, too, is the day when an editor could sit in his office and plan a good magazine out of his inner consciousness. A good magazine today represents the skillful collaboration of several bright, keen men, or men and women, and its make-up is a nice medium between what the editors have reason to think their subscribers want and what they have reason to think their contributors can do best.

It is an important part of good editing nowadays to keep in as close touch as possible with the greatest possible number and variety of persons who write. It is part of an editor's business to keep well informed on all the new books and all his contemporaries among the periodicals—to know (better, perhaps, than the man himself knows) what kind or kinds of work any given man can best do and to have the knowledge filed away in his memory for ready reference. It is part of his business, too, to see and talk with, whenever he can, not only the persons who are trying to write for him, but all persons whose situation in life is at all interesting in a way which ought some day to make them valuable to him.—Clara E. Laughlin in Reader.

TRICOLOR AND COCKADE.

Origin of the Historic Red, White and Blue of France.

Some seventy or eighty years before France was involved in the flames of the revolution—that is, at the epoch of the war of the succession when she was in close alliance with Spain and Bavaria—it was thought desirable to distinguish the allied soldiers by a cockade which combined the colors of the three nations—the white of France, the red of Spain and the blue of Bavaria.

To none of such incidents, however, would it be wise to attribute the origin of the historic tricolor and cockade adopted by revolutionary France. At the outset there seemed a likelihood that green, which Camille Desmoulins had popularized at the Palais Royal, would have become the national color, but men remembered in time that it was that of the livery of the Comte d'Artois, the most unpopular of the Bourbon princes, and it was thereupon discarded.

A proposition was then made to assume the colors of the city of Paris—blue and red, as Dumas reminds us in his "Six Ans Apres." To these was added the white of so many glorious memories, because it had been selected by the national guard—always faithful to the throne and its traditions.

Not until some months after the capture of the Bastille was the tricolor definitely adopted, when Bailly and Lafayette presented it to Louis XVI. in the great hall of the Hotel de Ville, and the convention issued a decree in which it was described as consisting of three colors—"disposees en trois bandes egales, de maniere que le bleu soit attache a la garde du pavillon, le blanc au milieu, et le rouge flottant dans les airs"—that is, in equal vertical sections, with the blue inward, the red outward and the white between.

This is the historic flag which Napoleon's legions, in conjunction with their eagles, bore victoriously from the Seine to the Elbe, the Tagus, the Borodino and the Danube, which they planted victoriously on the walls of almost every European capital.—All the Year Round.

RUSSIAN PROVERBS.

Spin flax if you canst not weave silk.

Dull silver is better than shining brass.

No brass is prouder than that which has lately been coined.

When the avaricious man has sold his forest he wants to sell the trees.

Do not look too long at the holes in your coat, but put patches on them.

When the nightingale's voice was praised the cart horse began to neigh.

The bees gather wax and honey. The avaricious man asks that they should also prepare his mead.

"What a pity to lose my splendid boat!" cried the ferryman as he and his passengers were drowning.

Ivory From the Graves of Elephants.

As a species of rejoinder to the charge that the present consumption of ivory is threatening the elephant with extinction, it has recently been stated that 85 per cent of the supply of ivory is obtained from "elephant cemeteries"—spots met with here and there in the jungle, where elephants have resorted for centuries to die. W. L. Distant, editor of the Zoologist, points out that very few of these spots seem to have been discovered by travelers, and scarcely any record of them is to be found in books of travel.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Secretary.

Miss Isabel Hagner, private secretary of Mrs. Roosevelt, has a fortune ample for all the frivolities of Newport and Tuxedo or for division of her life between Fifth avenue and Belgrave square, but she prefers to follow the useful career she mapped out for herself when with a thinner purse she entered semipublic life. When Miss Hagner came into a handsome inheritance recently she gave no sign of intention to leave her present post.

The "Friday" Ship.

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who, way back in the early years of the republic, determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and, thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill conditioned craft have been received.

Feast of Fools.

The best authorities agree that the origin of the ancient custom of celebrating a feast of fools is unknown. Some identify it with the Roman feast of fools on March 31. But why did the Romans institute the feast of fools? In India March 31 is "the huli festival," when all manner of pranks are played upon the heedless. But, again, where did the Hindoos get it? ADJUSTING A LOSS

Mr. Geo. Singer returned from his reservation farm last Saturday on the request of one E. J. Lawlis, an adjuster for the State Mutal Fire Insurance Co., of St. Paul, who claimed that he had sent for him for the purpose of adjusting the loss by fire on his (Mr. Singer's) farm residence and and store house, which was totally destroyed by fire here on March, 25th. last, which accidentally caught fire by the explosion of a lamp, Had the company been collecting a premium on insurance the position would have been different, but when it came to adjusting a loss, it was a case of bluff and bulldozing from start to finish, by a man who claimed he was drawing a large salary from the company for doing that kind of work. He made no offer to adjust the loss, rebuild the house, or to compensate Mr. Singer for his loss, but when informed that the case could be carried to court, and allow a jury of twelve men to decide the case he laughted and made the following statement, "We don't take the decision of a jury but appeal to the supream court, and we corperations control them." There was other vile and abusive language used by the Gentlemen? in an attempt to bluff Mr. Singer out of any adjustment or settlement for his loss, but he did not succeed in blufing or scaring any one to a perceivable extent, and left for Fosston, the same evening without accomplishing anything, except to injure the repuatition of the company he represented.

On last Wednesdays mail Mr. Singer recieved the following letter from the company which we publish in full.

F. 50,703 St. Paul, Minn., Apr. 25, 1905.
Geo. Singer,
Gully, Minn.,

Dear Sir—

This is to advise you that the State Mutal Fire Insurance Company, disclaims any and all liability arising from an alleged fire or otherwise by virtue of their policy no. F-50705 for reasons that have been undoubtedly indicated to you by E. J. Lawlis, representative of this company. —Yours Respectfully.

L. C. Stebbins.

This transaction speaks for itself. Mr. Singer paid this company about $19.00 insurance and when he meets with a loss the company informs him that they are not indebted to him in any sum whatsoever, We use some space to fully explain this matter, as there is a larg number of our subscribers who are doing buusiness with this company and we have stated the facts as they are, so they will know the position they are in, if their property should be accidently destroyed by fire.

For Growing Girls.

West Pembroke, Me., March 21.—Mrs. A. L. Smith, of this place, says that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for growing girls. Mrs. Smith emphasizes her recommendation by the following experience:

"My daughter was thirteen years old last November, and it is now two years since she was first taken with Crazy Spells that would last a week and would then pass off. In a month she would have the spells again. At these times she would eat very little, and was very yellow, even the whites of her eyes would be yellow.

"The doctors gave us no encouragement, they all said they could not help her. After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she has not had one bad spell. Of course, we continued the treatment until she had used in all about a dozen boxes, and we still give them to her occasionally, when she is not feeling well. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the best medicine for growing girls."

Mothers should heed the advice of Mrs. Smith, for by so doing they may save their daughters much pain and sickness and ensure a healthy, happy future for them.

ANOTHER RECORD IN LAND-HUNTING.

This Spring's Exodus to Canada Greater Than Ever.

It was thought in 1903, when over forty-five thousand people went from the United States to Canada, that the limit of the yearly emigration to the wheat zone of the Continent had been reached. But when in 1904 about as large a number of American citizens signified their intention of becoming settlers on Canadian lands, the general public were prepared for the announcement of large numbers in 1905. No surprise therefore will be caused when it is made known that the predictions of fully fifty thousand more in 1905 are warranted in the fact that the Spring movement Canadaward is greater than it has ever been. The special trains from Omaha, Chicago, St. Paul, Detroit, and other gateways, have been crowded. Many have gone to join friends and relatives who have prepared homes for them, and others have gone relying upon their own resources, satisfied that what others have done can also be done by them. This year much new territory has been opened up by the railroads, which are extending their main lines and throwing out branches in their march across the best grain and grazing lands on the Continent. This new territory has attractions for those desiring to homestead on the one hundred and sixty acres granted each settler by the Canadian Government. Many also take advantage of the opportunity to purchase lands at the low figures at which they are now being offered.

It does not require much thought to convince one that if Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota and other lands, with a value of from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars an acre will give a good living by producing ten to thirteen bushels of wheat to the acre and thirty to fifty bushels of corn to the acre, the lands of Western Canada at seven to ten dollars an acre, producing from twenty to thirty bushels of a superior wheat to the acre, should produce a competence to the ordinary farmer in a very few years. These are the facts as they confront the reader. There are millions of acres of such land in Western Canada in addition to the other millions that are considered to be portion of the biggest and best ranges that ever invited the cattle and horse producer of the North American continent. What is particularly evident in Western Canada is the fact that the wheat lands, adjoining the grazing lands, make farming particularly agreeable and profitable. The agents of the Canadian Government, who are always willing to give information and advice to intending settlers, say that the acreage put under crop this season is greatly in excess of last season.

Lecturing at Berlin, Prof. von Hansemann scouted the idea that cancer is on the increase.

Cannot Reduce a Rate.

It is stated in Washington, that under the Townsend rate bill, if a rate is fixed by the Commission it cannot be lowered by a railroad. Should an emergency arise calling for a decreased rate, the railroads or shippers would have to appeal again to the Commission, there being no latitude allowed, whatever the circumstances. Hitherto a maximum rate has been the rule, but no such concession is made under the proposed legislation.

CONSUMPTION

DRINK MUCH COFFEE.

AMERICANS CONSUME ALMOST HALF OF WORLD'S OUTPUT.

Indigestion and Nervousness of People in the United States Largely Attributable to This Source.

Prof. Virchow attributed the "leanness, nervousness and sallowness" which he found characteristic of Americans to their excessive use of coffee. Physicians, dietary experts and editors of physical culture magazines incessantly din into our ears that we are undermining our own and our children's constitutions by yielding ourselves too completely to the blandishments of this seductive beverage. We heed them not. Instead, we increase the copiousness of our drafts, says the Chicago Tribune.

A recent report of the national bureau of statistics shows that Americans consumed almost half of all the coffee marketed in the world last year. The total quantity marketed was 2,280,000,000 pounds; and of this Americans got 1,053,000,000 pounds. The Germans, who will let nothing supplant their precious beer, bought only 400,000,000 pounds of coffee. The English, preferring alcoholic drinks and tea, imported but 35,000,000 pounds of it, or only one-thirtieth as much as Americans. In 1830 the people of the United States used less than three pounds of coffee per capita. In 1870 they used six pounds per capita. Their average consumption last year was 13.64 pounds.

Medical authorities are pretty well agreed that the constant use of coffee tends to cause indigestion and nervousness. It is a fact, nevertheless, that while the per capita consumption of coffee has been rapidly increasing in this country, the proportion of people who suffer from nervousness and indigestion has been diminishing. If Dickens should visit our shores now to get material for another "Martin Chuzzlewit" he would find that the number of candidates for dyspeptic and cadaverous parts in his cast of characters had markedly decreased.

The improvement in the national physique is due, however, not to the increased consumption of coffee but to the increased consumption of fresh air and the increased use of dumb-bells, boxing gloves, golf links, etc. Americans are getting rid of their bad stomachs and allaying their nerves in spite of their coffee, not because of it. But, at all events, coffee is less deleterious than alcohol.

The consumption of coffee is not a bad index of the national prosperity. A people that spends more than $81,000,000 in a single year for its favorite beverage must be in pretty good shape financially.

CZAR'S DAY OF JUDGMENT.

Has the Most Pregnant Opportunity Ever Offered Any Ruler of a People.

That the welfare of millions should hang upon the will, whim and word of a single individual—and this individual walled away from all real knowledge of the people's condition and natural wishes—is an anachronism of tragic proportions—an anachronism which leads to deplorable assassination on the one side, and on the other to such hideous massacres of the confiding innocent as took place in St. Petersburg on Sunday, the 22nd of January, 1905.

In all the history, says Century, of man no more pregnant opportunity was ever offered to a sovereign than that offered to Czar Nicholas when his people came to him, not with swords and guns, but bearing a petition, carrying the sacred icons, and pictures of the czar, and following a cross. The humblest Turk is protected in presenting a petition to his sultan; but the white czar, the beloved Little Father, allows his petitioning subjects to be slaughtered like mad dogs.

The psychologist and the philosopher can find a score of explanations of the conduct of the troubled, perplexed and wrongly advised czar on that day of judgment for him and for the exploded system of government which he represents. Yet it remains true that, strive as he may to undo the awful effects of his action on the 22nd of January, the doom of the Russian oligarchy was sealed. Through whatever slow or rapid processes, by means of whatever wise concessions or hysterical convulsions, Russia from now on will advance painfully, perhaps with pitiful reactions, toward some modern and rational form of government. The new government may or may not retain imperial forms, as in Japan. The danger is that the blind, brutal, stupid measures of repression, the grinding system of imperial uniformity, may so inflame the people that fearful reprisals and chimerical schemes of reform will take the place of wise and orderly measures, and that the "man on horseback" may, for a time, stand in the path of progress.

She Had It.

A young clergyman, doing his holiday shopping in a New York department store, asked, at the book department, for Carolyn Wells' new collection of parodies by well-known writers.

"Have you 'A Parody Anthology?' " he inquired of the young saleswoman.

"I think we have," she replied glancing at his clerical garb. Turning to another clerk, she asked: "Have we got 'A Parody on Theology?' "—Town and Country.

Joy Ahead.

Jenkins—Aren't you disappointed that your baby was a girl?

Popley—No, indeed. I've just been thinking how much pleasure it will afford me some day to tell some foreign duke or count that he can't have her.—Philadelphia Ledger.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. J. E. Waggoner, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I can most heartily recommend your Castoria to the public as a remedy for children's complaints. I have tried it and found it of great value."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

Dr. F. H. Kyle, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "It affords me pleasure to add my name to the long list of those who have used and now endorse your Castoria. The fact of the ingredients being known through the printing of the formula on the wrapper is one good and sufficient reason for the recommendation of any physician. I know of its good qualities and recommend it cheerfully."

STRIKERS VIOLATE INJUNCTION.

A MOB OF MEN AND BOYS RAID EMPLOYER'S BARN AND STAMPEDE ANIMALS.

All Efforts to End Strike are Futile. Employers Decline to Listen to any Overtures for Arbitration or Compromise.

Chicago, May 1.—Spurning the efforts of the peace commission appointed by Mayor Dunne, the employers Sunday afternoon declared that the strike must end by the unconditional surrender of the strikers.

All hope of a cessation of hostilities and a peaceful settlement of the teamsters' strike was abandoned last night, after a series of conferences in the mayor's office, lasting from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 7:30 in the evening. The peace conference was a failure. Nothing was accomplished and the warring elements are now farther apart than ever.

Unconditional surrender on the part of the striking employes, it is declared, is the only thing that can close the breach between them and the employers. This is the ultimatum of the executive committee of the employers' association, as expressed in emphatic language by the various spokesmen before the peace commission, and as reflected in the defiant manner of the members of the committee.

A mob of 500 men and boys, headed by a number of striking teamsters, raided the main stables of the Employees' Teaming company and stampeded the animals. THE KOCH TRIAL.

The State Introduces Some New Testimony that was Entirely Unexpected by Defense.

Mankato, Minn., April 27.—Local interest in the Koch trial is waxing.

When court opened yesterday morning every seat in the big room was occupied. Dr. Koch was accompanied by his father and his brother William. Mrs. T. E. Zelle, at whose home Gebhardt lived, was in court with Henry and Emma Gebhardt.

Miss Cecelia Mertinka was placed on the stand. Her testimony as to what she heard on the night of the murder when she stood with her companion across the street, from, and directly below, Dr. Gebhardt's office, was substantially the same as that given by Joseph Polta, who proceeded her on the stand. She said that they heard some loud cries or shouts like "somebody in pain" coming from Dr. Gebhardt's office.

Mankato, Minn., April 28.—Chief of Police Adolph Klause, on the witness stand just before noon Thursday, declared that Miss Ida Koch, sister of George R. Koch, had told him that the handkerchief found in Dr. Gebhardt's office on the night of the murder was "one of George's" and that "it was one she had marked with the initials G. R. K."

Joseph Weisenborn, who admitted at the first trial that he "was afraid of the dark," declared in an injured tone that he was a greatly misunderstood man. He admitted time and again under cross-examination that he was not "scared" that night when he went into the office. When asked if it was not true that he had testified at the first trial that he was afraid of the dark, he replied: "Oh, I said that just in fun." The court room laughed uproariously.

Brigadier General Joseph Bobleter of the Minnesota National Guard came over from New Ulm and was called by the state. The important feature of his testimony related to the pencil found near the dead man's side.

On the first day of the trial former Coroner Fritche testified that the pencil lay only about three inches from Dr. Gebhardt's vest pocket, northerly from the body and that it had the appearance of having just fallen out of that pocket.

When Frank Nenno went on the stand the listeners in the court room were given a vivid picture of the terror which the sight of the mutilated body of Dr. Gebhardt created in the hearts of those who first beheld it.

Regarding the time, a point which is all important, Nenno said it was 9:38 or 9:40 when Cavanaugh summoned him from the saloon. He said he had heard Conductor Richardson say it was 9:34.

Mankato, April 29.—The hammer was paramount in the Koch trial yesterday. The state has planned to prove positively that the instrument of death belonged to the Kocks. To do this several new witnesses are in court.

Mr. Abbot, of counsel for Koch, stood in front of the witnessess and held in front of Reinhold Damns, a witness, two carpenter's hammers—one having the right claw broken, the other the left claw—and asked young Dahms to tell the jury which was the Koch hammer.

When Mr. Abbott held the hammer in front of him, Dahms, without hesitation, positively declared that the one which was found in Dr. Gebhardt's office, and which has been in evidence throughout the new trial was the one he had used many times in the six winters he worked as choreboy at the Koch home. This is the hammer that has the right claw broken. At the first trial the members of the Koch family described their missing hammer as having the left claw broken.

Mankato, Minn., May 1.—The first week in the second trial of Dr. George R. Koch of New Ulm for the murder of Dr. L. A. Gebhardt came to a close Saturday night with the state still introducing evidence, placing on the stand two of its star witnesses, Miss Lena Weidermann, who testified that she had seen Dr. Koch in his office one-half hour before the murder was committed, wearing a slouch hat and apparently taking something from the wall and placing it in his pocket; and Mrs. Wilhelmina Dahms, who testified to hearing the sound of running feet on the night of the murder, after she had gone to bed, and of finding bloodstains on her gatepost the next morning.

Hjalmer Hoidale was the first witness called and was questioned closely about the typewriters in the Strickler block, where Dr. Koch and his brother had their offices, and about the ribbons on each machine.

Finally Gen. Child's reached the important part of the young man's testimony.

"Did you ever have a conservation with the defendant about Dr. Gebhardt?"

"Yes, sir, I did. It was some time in October in Koch's laboratory, when only he and I were present."

"What was said in that conver-tion?"

"He said that Gebhardt was a ——— ———."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A New System.

A new system of accounting in the several state offices, which it is believed will reduce to the minimum mistakes and discrepancies in the disbursement of state funds, has just been put into effect in accordance with a law passed by the recent legislature.

Under the new system, the head of each department is required to prepare an abstract in triplicate, showing each item of expenditure, the person to whom it is payable, the amount and the fund. One copy of the abstract is sent to the state auditor, one to the state treasurer, and the third is kept by the head of the department.

The state auditor, under the new system, will issue his warrant covering the entire abstract, and the treasurer issues his check for each separate item. This is practically the same system as is provided in the law relieving the state board of control of the care of the state university and normal schools.

Mr. Richtner climed a ladder to the attic window, but found the bed empty, the child having run down stairs in an attempt to escape.

Aldulterations.

Ten of [illegible] legal, nine were adulterated with wheat products and [illegible] starch. The illegal [illegible] manufactured by New York concerns all the samples of articles sold by Minnesota manufacturers and wholesalers under their own firm names being up to standard.

Office But no Salery.

Although the bill creating a state fire marshal passed the legislature, some question whether provision has been made for the payment of the marshal's salary and expenses for the first year.

The law says that a tax is to be levied to meet such expenses of one-fourth of one per cent on all fire insurance premiums payable "on or before the first of April in each year." Accordingly, there will be no income from the new tax till next April. It is an open question whether any other insurance tax money secured under the old laws, can be used to pay the new state fire marshal.

Freight Rates.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has begun to collect and arrange data to be used in making a readjustment of freight rates in the state, which was ordered by the recent legislature. It is probable that the preliminary work will take several weeks.

The commissioners have not fully decided just what plan to pursue, but the object of the readjustment, as offered by the legislature is, to prepare a uniform schedule of rates, in which the differance between a distance and a distributive tariff for a given distance shall in no case exceed 5 per cent.

EVERYBODY WANTS A TIP.

Experience of an American Woman While Visiting Venice.

One of the things that most astonish you with regard to the working class Italian is the perfect frankness with which he shows his desire for a tip. No false modesty obscures it. You may sometimes fear that you will forget it. Let such fears forever rest. He won't let you. He will follow you, asking you if you have your parasol when he sees it in your hand or if you know the way out when he has just told it to you. The whole poor population of Venice is absolutely naif in its exhibition of a desire for any small sum of money the passerby may throw it. The children, one and all, make a demand for a soldino as a matter of course. It is a sort of greeting to every foreigner usually as a phrase of general usage.

Coming from the bath you fee the girl who has charge of the bathhouses. If you don't she has a dozen ways of making herself disagreeable next time you come. And do not allay your troubled anticipations by the thought she may not recognize you. One glimpse of a face fixes it in her memory for months. After that you fee the woman who takes care of your purse and jewelry. If you fee her enough she drags out from some inner recess a cheap mirror which distorts your countenance and allows you to look into it and see how truly hideous the human visage can be made to appear. Before the bath you have to fee the old woman who gives you your bathing suit. If you neglect her the next time you come she will give you a suit that doesn't fit you or is full of holes.

When you go out on the terrasse for a black coffee, which costs 10 cents, you fee the waiter. When you get into your gondola you fee the old man who draws it close to the steps with a hooked stick and offers you his withered old arm to lean on. When you get out of your gondola at the hotel you fee another old man with a hooked stick and a withered arm. And then at dinner, if you haven't just feed the waiter he will be cross, and up in your room afterward if the femme de chambre has not recently had a tip she will refuse to answer the bell.—San Francisco Argonaut.

WISDOM'S WHISPERS.

It's lucky we don't know how unlucky we may be.

It is difficult to take a woman by surprise in a love affair.

Some people are cranks simply because you can't turn them.

Some men secure all the glory attached to whatever part they assume.

A woman may know very little and yet have a way that carries conviction.

The want of refinement in a man cannot be corrected by the gloss of set phrases.

Some men take on an air of consequence to conceal the weakness of their position.

When a man can hide his thoughts in a smile he holds a powerful weapon of defense.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Where He Made His Money.

Years ago a gentleman settled in the south of England and became very popular in the neighborhood. The county families could never discover how he had made his money, but were satisfied by his solemn assurance that it was not in trade. Nothing could exceed the ordinary gravity of his demeanor, which, indeed, caused him to be placed on the commission of peace, but now and then, without any apparent provocation, he would burst into such a laugh as no one ever heard before except in one place.

Where they could have heard it puzzled the county families for five and twenty years, but at last he was betrayed unconsciously by his own grandchild, who after a visit to a traveling circus innocently exclaimed, "Why, grandpa laughs just like the clown!" —James Payn.

Horses In the Time of Homer.

The horses used in Homer's time were war horses. The warriors were drawn in chariots. The art of riding was known, but it is alluded to as something unusual. Ulysses at the time of his shipwreck "bestrode a plank, like a horseman on a big steed." There are reasons for believing that the practice of riding was much later than that of driving, and the myth of the centaur, where, according to Shakespeare, "man is incorpsed and deminatured with the beast," probably originated at an early period when the appearance of a man on horseback was a novel sight.

A Snub For Moliere.

A remarkable incident is reported for a suburban theater in Paris. The play was "Tartuffe," and at the end of the fourth act the manager of the company came in front of the curtain and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we shall not go any further with this piece, for the fifth act is unworthy of Moliere." How the audience took this announcement is not stated. Perhaps they went home and read the fifth act critically in the seclusion of the library.

WHY TRAVEL ABROAD?

An American Should Give His First Study to His Home Land.

When Payne wrote "There's No Place Like Home," he gave poetic expression to the love he bore toward the ingle nook more precious than "temples or palaces." What flowers of rhetoric could approach in power of assertion these five little monosyllabic words, "There's No Place Like Home"—to gainsay which were impossible!

It is the great privilege of Americans to be able without hyperbole to apply them to travel, for what is there in any part of the habitable globe more fraught with interest, instruction, education, refreshment of mind and body and uplifting of soul than nature has provided, with hand so lavish, for the delectation of those having the good fortune to dwell in this goodly land?

Would he see a Riviera? We have several on the shores of the azure waters both of the gulf and the Pacific, far distancing that laved by the Mediterranean.

Does he pine for snow capped mountains? Let him repair to the plains whence Pike's Peak, Mount Logan and our other great elevations rear their hoary summits into cloudland.

Would he witness a majestic cataract? There is but one without a rival, the imperial Niagara—in the chain of our great lakes, most turbulent of links.

Neither Nile, Niger nor Ganges, great rivers though they are, are comparable to our own Mississippi, well named "The Father of Waters." Our peerless Hudson excels in picturesque effects the vaunted Rhine.

What of the beauties of the Golden Gate, on whose shores sits enthroned queenly San Francisco, pronounced peerless among cities by a much traveled European prince of imperial blood?

Where is there, even in miniature, anything to vie with that earthly paradise, the valley of the Yosemite; what to compare with the deep and rugged gorge through which passes to the sea the impetuous Colorado river?

The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, one of the world's wonders, is as yet but partially explored.

Why, then, travel abroad, while all these and vastly more than can be enumerated remain unseen at home?

"Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" said Naaman the Syrian of old when ordered by the prophet to betake himself to the Jordan for healing. Who can help admiring his pride of country and robust patriotism? Most worthy are they of emulation.

Be it for health or recreation, there is no grander travel field than that we have at home.—Travel.

The Rainy Day.

A well known artist recently received a letter from a chap who has regularly made it a practice to borrow money of him. In this letter the chap who is always in financial difficulties surprised his correspondent by saying:

"This time I have decided to reverse the usual order of things, and, instead of borrowing from you, I inclose herewith $50, which I am going to ask that you will lay aside for me for a rainy day."

But the artist couldn't find any remittance in the letter. He searched for it on the floor, under the table—in fact, everywhere he thought he might have dropped it. Then quite accidentally he turned over the sheet on which the letter was written and discovered this postscript:

"I've just looked out of the window and find it's raining like the very deuce!"—Collier's.

A Story of Sir Robert Ball.

Sir Robert Ball, the noted British astronomer, on one occasion went to a remote town in Ireland to lecture on his favorite topic. Arriving at the station, he looked for the expected conveyance, but found none. After all the other passengers had disappeared a man stepped up and said, "Maybe you're Sir Robert Ball?" On receiving an affirmative reply the man hastily apologized, saying, "Sure, your honor, I'm sorry I kept you waiting, but I was tould to look for an intellectual gintleman." Sir Robert thought that under the circumstances it would be better not to inquire what was the man's idea of intellectuality.

Old Time Railway Travel.

Third class passenger coaches in England used to be coupled on next to the engine. The travelers came in for terrible treatment when any accident occurred. At times the engine was driven tender first, in which case frozen hands could be warmed at its smokestack. The passengers were packed, seventy of them, into a truck eighteen feet in length by seven and a half in width. There was no roof and not, as a rule, proper protection at the sides.

Marital Persiflage.

"I must confess," remarked Mrs. Crabbe, "I don't believe there ever was a really perfect man." "Well," replied Mr. Crabbe, "Adam would have been perfect, I suppose, if Eve had only been made first." "How do you mean?" "Well, she would have bossed the job of making Adam."—Philadelphia Press.

The Thing to Do.

Johnson—He said I was an addle pated jackass. What do you advise me to do about it? Jackson—See a good veterinary.—Leslie's Weekly.

Something Lacking.

"I can shave myself as well as any barber."

"Ah, but you can't talk to yourself while you're doing it!"

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal.—Moore.

BEAVERS IN MONTANA.

The Rare Animal Is Very Tame Where He Is Not Hunted.

The beaver is not shy where he is not hunted and acquires confidence in a friendly watcher sooner than any other animal I know. Strangers or unusual clothes on a person to whom they have become accustomed alarm them, though, like dogs, they can apparently identify an acquaintance by scent.

The beaver's sense of smell is very acute, for he is able to scent a man 200 yards away, and his eyesight is also most keen, but he seems to be dull of hearing when at work, and I have often walked to within a few feet of one while he was cutting wood. However, their method of warning each other of danger is by slapping or "smothering" the water with the long, flat tail which is so characteristic a feature of the animal and which not only helps him in swimming, but is used for carrying mud. If a large animal appears at a place where beavers want to work or feed the latter will often "smother" the water continually, one after another joining in, till the intruder is scared away. I have had a thorough wetting at night while watching a pond through the splashing made by this trick.

I saw my first beavers in the Musselshell river in Montana. At first they dived whenever they became aware of my presence, but after about three months they paid no attention when they scented me, and in six months they would swim around or cut bushes within a few feet of me. In fact, they repeatedly stole my fishing poles cut from green willows until I learned to use dry ones.—Country Life In America.

A TRAINED NURSE

After Years of Experience, Advises Women in Regard to Their Health.

Mrs
Martha
Pohlman

Mrs. Martha Pohlman of 55 Chester Avenue, Newark, N. J., who is a graduate Nurse from the Blockley Training School, at Philadelphia, and for six years Chief Clinic Nurse at the Philadelphia Hospital, writes the letter printed below. She has the advantage of personal experience, besides her professional education, and what she has to say may be absolutely relied upon.

Many other women are afflicted as she was. They can regain health in the same way. It is prudent to heed such advice from such a source.

Mrs, Pohlman writes:

"I am firmly persuaded, after eight years of experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that it is the safest and best medicine for any suffering woman to use.

"Immediately after my marriage I found that my health began to fail me. I became weak and pale, with severe bearing-down pains, fearful backaches and frequent dizzy spells. The doctors prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I would bloat after eating and frequently become nauseated. I had an acrid discharge and pains down through my limbs so I could hardly walk. It was as bad a case of female trouble as I have ever known. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, however, cured me within four months. Since that time I have had occasion to recommend it to a number of patients suffering from all forms of female difficulties, and I find that while it is considered unprofessional to recommend a patent medicine, I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I have found that it cures female ills, where all other medicine fails. It is a grand medicine for sick women."

Money cannot buy such testimony as this—merit alone can produce such results, and the ablest specialists now agree that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most universally successful remedy for all female diseases known to medicine.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles.

The needless suffering of women from diseases peculiar to their sex is terrible to see. The money which they pay to doctors who do not help them is an enormous waste. The pain is cured and the money is saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Experience has proved this.

It is well for women who are ill to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. In her great experience, which covers many years, she has probably had to deal with dozens of cases just like yours. Her advice is free and confidential.

A Remarkable Fact

about "Pusheck's Kuro" is that it does what no other medicine can do. It affects the grand trio—the Stomach, the Blood and the Nerves—that controls and regulates the whole body, every organ and every function. It corrects the digestion and assimilation of food that keeps up the body, it purifies and enriches the Blood, and corrects, regulates and strengthens the nerves. This explains why one medicine permanently cures so many apparently different diseases. Other remedies work on one of the organs only and cannot cure completely; Pusheck's Kuro regenerates the entire system. Good health will assist to happiness and wealth more than anything else. Pusheck's Kuro will help you enjoy health, happiness and long life. This remedy is $1 at Druggists or sent from Dr. Pusheck, Chicago.

A VOICE FROM THE PULPIT.

Rev. Jacob D. Van Doren, of 57 Sixth street, Fond Du Lac, Wis., Presbyterian clergyman, says: "I had attacks of kidney disorders which kept me in the house for days at a time, unable to do anything. What I suffered can hardly be told. Complications set in, the particulars of which I will be pleased to give in a personal interview to any one who requires information. This I can conscientiously say, Doan's Kidney Pills caused a general improvement in my health. They brought great relief by lessening the pain and correcting the action of the kidney secretions."

A Great Discovery.

Clayton, Tex., May 1st.—(Special).—That a genuine cure for Diabetes has been discovered is the opinion of Mr. J. H. Bailey, of this place. Speaking of the matter Mr. Bailey says:

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills is the best remedy for Diabetes and the only one that has ever been discovered that will cure Diabetes."

"I have a genuine case of Diabetes. I have taken seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am still taking them. They have helped me so much that I am now up and able to work some. I believe that if I had conformed strictly to a Diabetes diet I would now have been completely cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured hundreds of cases of Diabetes and never once failed. It is an old saying that what will cure Diabetes will cure any form of Kidney Disease and that's just exactly what Dodd's Kidney Pills do. They cure all kidney diseases from Backache to Bright's Disease.

Indian Head, N. W. T., Jan. 20, 1904.
Immigration Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada:

Am sending you the return of two fields of wheat grown on my home farm last year. These returns are perfectly accurate, and not over estimated.

I summer-fallow about one-third of my farm every year, and afterward take off two crops and summer-fallow again. The summer-fallow is ploughed twice during the summer, first shallow afterwards deep and no weed allowed to grow. The stubble is left as long as possible when cutting the first crop, and is burned the following spring, drilled directly afterwards, and harrowed after drilling. This gives much better result than fall ploughing.

Field No. 1. Quarter-section fallowed 1903, yield 37 bushels per acre. This wheat is netting at present time 88c per bushel.

I am sending you the yield of these two fields which are both in my home farm. I thought they might be interesting reading for you. Had 19,500 bushels of wheat on my different farms, and between 5,000 and 6,000 of oats and barley. I remain, Against Rate Reduction.

Atlanta, Ga.—The recent proposition of J. Pope Brown, chairman of the Georgia railroad commission, to reduce the passenger rate in Georgia from three to two cents per mile was protested against by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors, and unions of the blacksmiths, machinists and telegrapher, boilermakers, railway trainmen, carpenters and joiners, clerks and car men. These organizations employed an attorney especially to represent them, who urged that such a reduction would work against the prosperity of the state and lead to a reduction in the number of railroad employes as well as of their wages. The Travelers' Protective association also protested that a reduction as proposed would result in few trains and poor service.

STATION AT CAPITOL

FINEST ONE EVER CONSTRUCTED IN THIS COUNTRY.

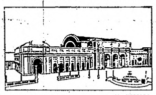
Government to Bear Some of the Expense—To Cost Many Millions—General Plan of This Wonderful Structure.

Washington, D. C., is soon to have a new union station and one which is looked upon by veteran railroaders as the finest ever built in the United States. Over $20,000,000 will be used in the instruction of the depot and in addition to the building, improvements will be made in the tracks and parks which surround these avenues of commerce until, it is believed, the expense will total $25,000,000.

One of the foremost benefits which the public will derive from the new project is the elimination of all grade crossings, as the tracks will run either above or below the streets and it is declared by officials in charge of the work that the station will be completed by the fall of 1906 if no hitch occurs to delay the work. Part of the vast expense involved in the erection of the depot has been borne by the national government, as it is considered that the depot will beautify the city to a great extent. Another reason that the government has consented to bear some of the expense is because of the offer some time ago of two of the railroads to lend assistance to the effort to establish a Mail.

The station will face toward the dome of the capitol, and will be less than half a mile from it. The architectural treatment will be in keeping with its character as the vestibule or gateway to the capital city.

The main building will be 620 feet long and 65 to 120 feet in height. It is being built of white granite. The three entrance arches will each be 50 feet in height and 30 feet in width, and far exceed in scale their Roman prototypes. These central doorways will lead into a vaulted vestibule and thence into the main waiting room. At the end pavilions will be located two 40-foot arched carriage entrances, the last one leading to a suite of apartments for the president of the United States and his guests, and the one at the west end will lead to a general carriage porch, near the ticket and baggage lobby. The central vestibule and the end pavilions are connected by an open-air portico and constitute a continuous covered porch along the front of the entire building.



NEW UNION STATION AT WASHINGTON.

The general waiting room will be one of the finest in the country. It will be 220 feet long by 130 feet wide and covered by a Roman barrel vault 90 feet high that will be decorated with sunken coffers or panels after the manner of the bath of Diocletian. Plenty of natural light will be supplied by semi-circular windows of 30 feet diameter on each side. At the east end of this hall will be grouped the dining room, lunch room and women's waiting room. At the west side and on opposite sides of a lobby 50 feet wide are to be located the ticket offices and baggage checking room, with the smoking room and package room adjacent. Telephone and telegraph booths will be provided in the general waiting room.

The size of the passenger concourse or lobby will by far exceed anything ever built for a similar purpose. It will be 760 feet long by 130 feet wide and be covered by an arched ceiling in a single span decorated with panels and part of which will transmit the light. The lobby will be divided by the usual fence, providing a width of about 80 feet for handling outgoing passengers, while the remaining 50 feet between the fence and ends of tracks will afford ample facilities for the passengers arriving on trains.

Speaking of the project, a man prominent in railroad circles says: "The scheme to build a terminal at the national capital, when it becomes generally known to railroad men throughout the country, will be looked upon as the greatest bit of work that has ever been attempted in the United States. From the diagrams and measurements which are to be used in the construction of the building, it would seem that the Washington promoters have every similar project badly beaten as regards elaborateness and magnificence and if all the plans which are presented are used in the construction, the edifice will without a doubt eclipse anything of the kind ever proposed in this country. Then there is another phase to the matter. The building being at the national capital will naturally attract the attention of statesmen and others in national politics, and in this way attach prestige to the profession, which heretofore, many declare, it has lacked. From what I understand concerning the time to be occupied in the construction of the station, the promoters propose to finish work late next year. I believe this might be done were it not for the various setbacks which are almost certain to occur. Strikes, possible shortage of materials and adverse weather conditions will most certainly delay the work, but taking a reasonable view of the situation, I believe that the entire construction should be finished, at the last, by June, 1907. The project does credit to its promoters, and I hope to see it a success."

FAMOUS ATHLETES PAY GLOWING TRIBUTE TO PE-RU-NA

As a Spring Tonic to Get the System In Good Shape.

"I advise all Athletes who are about to go in training to try a bottle of Pe-ru-na."
—J. W. Glenister.

John Glenister, Champion Swimmer and Only Athlete to Successfully Swim Through the Michigan Whirlpool Rapids.

PE-RU-NA

Renovates, Regulates, Restores a System Depleted By Catarrh.

John W. Glenister, of Providence, R. I., champion long distance swimmer of America, has performed notable feats in this country and England. He has used Peruna as a tonic and gives his opinion of it in the following letter:

New York.
The Peruna Medicine Company,
Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"This spring for the first time I have taken two bottles of Peruna, and, as it has done me a great deal of good, I feel as if I ought to say a good word for its worth.

"During the springtime for the last few years, I have taken several kinds of spring tonics, and have never received any benefit whatever. This year, through the advice of a friend, I have tried Peruna and it has given satisfaction.

"I advise all athletes who are about to go in training to try a bottle, for it certainly gets the system in good shape." Yours truly,
JOHN W. GLENISTER.

ATHLETES realize the importance of keeping in good bodily trim.

The digestion must be good, the circulation perfect, sleep regular and enough of it.

If the slightest catarrhal condition of lungs or stomach is allowed to remain, neither digestion nor sleep will be strength-sustaining.

Those who lead very active lives, like athletes, with good muscular development, find the spring months especially trying.

Athletes everywhere praise Peruna because they, of all men, appreciate the value of a tonic that dispels physical depression.

The vocation of some men may allow them to endure the depressing feelings incident to spring weather, but the athlete must never allow himself to get "under the weather."

He must keep in the "pink of condition" all the time.

In order to do this he must avail himself of a spring tonic upon which he can rely.

Therefore athletes are especially friendly toward Peruna.

Peruna never fails them.

TEAMSTERS LOSE CHICAGO STRIKE.

EMPLOYERS MAKE DELIVERIES ALL OVER CITY WITHOUT OPPOSITION.

This Week will See the Strke Ended or the Greatest Upheaval Ever Witnessed in the History of Chicago.

Chicago, May 8.—The week will bring either an end to the teamsters' strike or one of the worst industrial upheavals in the history of the city.

The present trouble now of two weeks' duration, has reached a point where the business men appear to have gained a decided advantage.

This advantage means that teamsters must either yield or decide to extend the strike by calling out thousands of other workmen engaged in affiliated unions.

Commencing today the business men will increase their efforts to bring the strikers to terms.

Arrangements have been made by every business house involved in the trouble to at least double their force of non-union men during the day.

Last night it was said that all preparations had been made to start out 1,000 wagons manned by non-union men.

Each of these wagons will be guarded by deputy sheriffs or policemen, and each one of these men has received explicit instructions to prevent disturbances.

They are to use every peaceable means in their power to quiet the rioters, but if this means proves unsuccessful, to use revolvers.

Yesterday the seven express companies made deliveries in all parts of the city.

Each of the wagons carried two armed guards and in a single instance, was asserted last night, had any of the wagons met with opposition.

During the day, several of the firms involved in the strike succeed in replenishing their coal supply which in many cases had dwindled down to nearly nothing.

The Chicago Federation of Labor met yesterday and passed resolutions charging the Employers association with conspiracy and asking that the State's attorney start an investigation of their business methods.

The Employers' association through their chief counsel, Levy Mayer announced last night that they would do everything in their power to assist the committee appointed Saturday by Mayor Dunne to investigate the cause of the strike.

Shipwrecked.

Detroit, May 8.—After spending a night of terrible suffering, clinging to the masts of the sunken steamer J. E. Mills, which went down Thursday night in Lake Erie, off Middle Sister Islands, Captain Lanaway and his crew of five men were landed Saturday at Amherstberg, Ont.

The Mills, which is an old steamer, left Sandusky Thursday afternoon with a cargo of coal. Early in the evening she sprung a leak and took water so fast that the pumps had no effect. At 9 o'clock the steamer went down like a shot in thirty feet of water. Lanaway says the crew lashed themselves by their wrists to the masts of the steamer.

Captured.

Kansas City, Mo., May 8.—The "holding" and robbing Henry Kimbill, a farmer, and T. W. Shaw, a collector, on the Burlington railroad track near Harlem, two young men giving the names of Joe Marko and Charles Meyers, were chased three miles and captured by a posse.

Several shots were fired during the chase and Myers received the charge of a shotgun in his body. Doctors removed sixty-three shot from his body. The amount secured by the robbers was small.

Arrested.

El Paso, Texas, May 8.—E. O. Fellows, formerly manager of the Peavey Elevator company of Minneapolis, was arrested here by a deputy sheriff, alleged to be an embezzler from the firm for which he formerly worked to the extent of $6,000.

The arrest was made at the instance and on the identification of C. W. Vaughn, representing the National Surety company, in which company Fellows was bonded. Fellows registered in El Paso under his right name and says that he has been here about two weeks.

Sunk in Collision.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 8.—The Aransas, an ocean passenger steamer, was sunk in a collision with a barge near Pollock Rip lightship last night. One woman passenger was lost.

The survivors, sixty-five in number, reached this port in the life-boats of the steamer.

THE KOCH TRIAL.

The State Closes it's Case after Spirited Contest over the Question of Brooks' Testimony.

Mankato, Minn., May 3.—Important additions to the testimony which they gave at the first trial of Dr. Koch for the Gebhardt murder were made Tuesday by E. G. Hage, a banker of Hanska, and J. M. Thompson, Minneapolis & St. Louis station agent in that town.

The nub of Mr. Hage's testimony was that on Oct. 28, 1904, he saw Dr. Koch at the railway station in Hanska and at the same place a few minutes later he saw a package with a bunch of letters, which he said was similar in appearance to the poison package received by Dr. Gebhardt and exhibited in court.

Station Agent Thompson, on examination by General Childs, said that he remembered that a package was handed to him shortly after dinner some time before the murder of Dr. Gebhardt, but he did not remember the day and place exactly.

"To whom was it addressed?" General Childs asked.

"I remember it was marked 'Dr. L. A. Gebhardt, New Ulm, Minn.'"

He described the box and said that his brother had thrown it into the mail car.

Mankato, Minn., May 4.—Sparring over Asa P. Brooks began yesterday morning in the Koch trial. General Childs, council for the state, gave notice when Prof. C. Hubert C. Carel, chemist in the department of medicine at the university, was on the stand that the state had produced "one Asa P. Brooks," but that it would not call him as a witness. Counsel for the defense intimated its determination to compel the state to call Mr. Brooks.

The state laid the foundation for the handwriting expert, who will probably be introduced, as in the first trial, in rebuttal. J. H. Haenza, editor of the Hanska Herald, said that he had received letters from Dr. Koch and was familiar with his handwriting. When shown the word "Sample," which had been written on the label of the blue bottle sent to Dr. Gebhardt and asked whose writing that was, he said without hesitation: "It's Dr. Koch's."

On cross-examination, witness admitted that he had seen defendant but three or four times; that he had never seen him writing.

Mankato, Minn., May 5.—"Dr. Geo. R. Koch is not the man I saw," said Asa P. Brooks yesterday afternoon to the jury, and upon the faith put in those words by twelve good men rests the fate of the young man whose life is at stake in this bitter fight.

Will the jury believe the New Ulm editor? That is the question which 12,000 people in Mankato are asking, and that is the question which 500 who packed the court room yesterday, including the defendant himself, sought to read in the faces of the jurors as they sat in their box listening and pondering.

Will the jury believe Asa P. Brooks? He told his story simply, frankly, smoothly and without a hitch. He made a good witness, an excellent witness, in fact.

"Dr. Koch is not the man I saw." He did not hesitate but spoke the words with firmness and positiveness of one in whose mind there is no doubt.

The cross-examination was fierce but it did not bother Brooks one bit. Some of his testimony yesterday differed slightly from his former testimony at the last trial and before Justice Hennington, but he admitted it without an explanation and let it go at that.

The eyewitness was called by the defense and Mr. Somerville's preliminary question had the sole purpose of establishing Brooks' creditability with the jury.

Mankato, Minn., May 6.—Dr. Koch's attorneys began their assault yesterday afternoon on the strong chain of evidence, which the state has placed before the jury, and picked out an especially weak place to be attacked first, namely, the three of the state's star witnesses, Mrs. Caroline Dahms, Miss Lena Weiderman and Edgar Dingler.

Dingler they proved to be a boy whose reputation for truth and veracity in the whole town is bad and who went about before the first trial, according to the witnesses examined, boasting that there was money in it for him.

They were successful in casting about a portion of the hammer testimony and the story of the madly rushing footsteps had such an air of uncertainty as to rob them of a great deal of weight with the jury.

Miss Weidermann's story of seeing Koch in his office shortly before the murder, apparently placing something in his pocket, they proved improbable by men who had tried looking into the window from the woman's porch and who swore they couldn't recognize even a well known friend. The footsteps which Mrs. Dahms declares aroused her from her bed at 9:59 on the night of the homicide, they proved by reliable witnesses could not possibly have been heard.

The impeachment of witness Dingler is old, as it was enacted at the Brown county trial.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Defective Eyesight.

St. Paul.—Reports received by the state board of health indicate that there are 60,000 to 70,000 pupils in the public schools of Minnesota who have defective eyesight, and that less than 10 per cent of these wear glasses or are taking any treatment to improve their eyesight.

This condition is all the more remarkable when it is known that owing to the nature of the test applied by the teachers, only the more serious defects are discovered. If the pupils' eyes were examined by oculists the number showing defective eyesight, it is believed, would be much larger.

The reports received by the state board of health show that 10 to 15 per cent of the pupils examined have defective sight. In many cities the percentage is, much greater. For instance, in the public school at Tower, of 290 pupils examined, 86 had defect eyesight. In Sauk Rapids 43 had defective sight of of 260. In Red Wing the percentage of defective eyes was about 20, the figures being 106 and 927.

No More Mineral Leases.

No mining leases to operate in the beds of meandered lakes will be issued by State Auditor S. G. Iverson for at least two years. The recent legislature refused to pass a law expressly authorizing the state auditor to lease beds of lakes, and in the absence of authority from the legislature the state auditor will issue no such leases.

Scores of applications for leases covering the beds of most of the lakes in the vicinity of the iron range have been filed with the state auditor. Two years ago he issued prospecting leases on a portion of the bed of Long lake in St. Louis county, town 58, range 20, in accordance with an opinion filed by Former Attorney General W. B. Douglas, who held that the state owned the land and that it should exercise its ownership.

Irrigation.

Minnesota and North Dakota are taking steps to catch a good share of the immigration that is being directed toward the northwest province of Canada. The legislatures in both states appropriated large sums for the purpose of advertising their agricultural, commercial and educational advantages.

In Minnesota annual appropriation is $15,000, and will be expanded by State Auditor Iverson, who is ex-officio land commissioner. Mr. Iverson is given authority to advertise the advantages of Minnesota lands within and without the state and to prepare such literature and statistics explaining the resources of the state as he may deem advisable.

Sugar Factory Burns.

St. Louis Park.—The factory and sugar refining plant of the Minnesota Sugar company at St. Louis Park was totally destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $400,000, with insurance of $240,000.

Flames were first discovered by workmen in the roof of the laboratory and before the village volunteer fire department and the factory hands could get a stream of water playing upon the burning structure, the flames had spread to the entire roof and the building was doomed.

From the southwest end of the big building where the flames originated, they traversed the entire plant, comprising four buildings about 200 feet in length and nearly as wide. A telephone call was sent in to Chief Canterbury of the Minneapolis department, and he hurriedly dispatched District Chief Hernlund with three engines, three hose carts and a chemical to the scene, but when the local apparatus arrived the building, machinery and manufactured stocks had been destroyed.

Indian Allotment.

White Earth.—The reallotment of of additional land to Indians under the Steenerson land bill closed here. The allotment of land will resume again on Monday, May 15. About 1,000 allotments have been issued.

Most of the logging camp matters connected with the cutting of dead and fallen timber on the reservation during the last winter have been settled. The result to both loggers and purchasers was, on the average very satisfactory. A total of about $100,000 was paid out.

News Notes.

St. Paul.—The St. Paul club will join the Northwestern LaCrosse league.

St. Paul.—Attorney General Young says there is no ground for the fear that the omnibus bill is invalid.

Frazee.—The eighty-sixth anniversary of Oddfellowship was celebrated in the Methodist church here.

St. Peter.—Business men of Courtland have organized the State Bank of Courtland.

Rice.—The house and all the buildings of Lasper Jenskey, a farmer living near Rice, were destroyed by fire Monday morning, entailing a loss of $2,500.

Honors Easy.

People who were present smiled at the little passage of arms which took place between two young ladies at a luncheon recently. One of them, a bride, shaking hands in her characteristically cordial way, said to the other: "I'm so glad to meet you! You have afforded me so very much amusement just lately."

"Amusement?" said the other.

"Oh, yes," went on the bride. "I've been through my husband's desk and have read all his old love letters. I found several very affectionate letters from you, and I enjoyed reading them really ever so much."

"I'm so glad you enjoyed them," replied the other. "But do come and see me very soon. Here is my card. I have the answers to all those letters, and you might like to read them as well. Mr. X.'s letters are so much more affectionate than those I wrote to him. I know you'll enjoy reading them ever so much more than you did mine."

Ideas From Nature.

Walking on the outskirts of Bolton one autumn evening, a clever young man became interested in watching the seeds falling from a sycamore tree. He observed that they acquired a rotary motion before reaching the ground, and, inquiring into the cause, he found that the two wings were slightly turned in opposite directions, which caused them to revolve in falling. The idea of making a screw propeller on this principle at once occurred to him.

Galvani, a natural philosopher of Italy, was dissecting a dead frog one day while a pupil was making experiments in electricity by his side. He observed that the muscles of the frog, being exposed, gave signs of motion whenever the nerves came in contact with the scopel. Galvani discovered the existence of a new principle in this phenomenon and originated the fertile branch of physics known by the name of galvanism.

One Man's Idea of a Joke.

"This artificial limb business is getting to be something wonderful," said a Cleveland man. "When a man can wiggle the fingers of an artificial hand it is uncanny. Practical jokes of terrible effect are possible with the artificial limb, and the victim is such in the true sense of the word. I saw a man in Denver about three weeks ago who walked up to the hotel clerk and in a friendly way reached across the counter to shake hands. Then he wheeled away and left his hand in the grip of the clerk. The clerk fainted—actually fainted, although he realized, I believe, that the hand he held was but an artificial one. The man who wore it had devised a scheme by which he might throw it off by pressing a spring. The delight he took in the joke ceased when the victim collapsed."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Tallyho!

A very early equivalent of similar sound and purpose to the tallyho with which a huntsman now cheers on his hounds appears in a quaint old song printed in 1730 called "The Death of Reynard, the Fox," by Sir William Young:

He quickly found the cover
Too hot for him to stay,
And soon Ned Callet spied him
Stealing across the way.

"Tolle aux!" then Callet cried
And gave a gibbet shrill.
He tossed his brush as who should say,
"Come, kiss me if you will!"

Some, however, derive the cry when a fox breaks cover from "taillis hors," the French for "out of the coppice."—London Globe.

Taken Unawares.

"Well, I suppose we shouldn't be surprised. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

No human being, man or woman, can act up to a sublime standard without giving offense.—Channing.

Hindoo Nose Key.

"It is considered an insult and extremely indelicate in India to refer to a woman's nose ring, but so many ask me, 'What is that flower they hold in their mouth?' that I must tell what I shouldn't," says Edmund Russell. "It is the badge of wifehood, even more sacred than our wedding ring—set always with the costliest and most beautiful jewels a woman possesses and the last she will part with. A ruby with two pearls is the favorite, as symbolizing a heart between two guardians of purity.—This is somewhat going out of fashion under English influence. The Somaji ladies and Zoroastrian sisters do not wear them, but every orthodox Hindoo woman has her pak chabi, or 'nose key,' as it is also called, usually two, one of precious jewels and costly pearls; the other a little plain gold safety pin, which is slipped in just as the great circle is being drawn out, for the nose must never for a moment be left free."—Jewel Crafts of India.

Cold Blooded Man.

"Man is the coldest blooded animal there is," said a well known doctor. "Man's low temperature," the doctor went on, "is responsible for more than half his ailments. Your normal temperature is 98½ degrees F. It is only when you have a bad temperature that you get as warm as any of the lower animals—that is so say, when you are in a high fever, with a temperature of 102, you are at the normal heat of the cat, the dog, the ox, the rat, and so on. In the coolest of seas the porpoise is never cooler than 100 degrees. The bat, the rabbit, the guinea pig, the hare and the elephant likewise are all cool at 100 degrees. The hen has the highest temperature of all the lower creatures, and it is a good deal warmer, too, when a chicken. Its temperature then is as high as 111, but age and experience cool its blood by 3 degrees."—New York Globe.

The Old Japanese Mail.

In the days before the ports of Japan were opened to foreigners, before telegraphs, railroads and electricity had found their way into the island empire, the infrequent mails were carried by post runners, who wore the merest apology of a loin cloth and blue and white rags around their heads. They wore for the most part an elaborate suit of tattoo, with a red star on each shoulder, the mark of their calling. The letters were incased in a waterproof package and secured to the end of a bamboo pole. With this over his shoulder and a pair of fragile sandals on his feet the runner started on his long journey, making from 75 to 100 miles per day. The distance they covered seems incredible, but the men were trained to speed and had remarkable endurance.

Hill of the Poison Plant.

Close to the frontier of Nepal is the mountain of Sandook-Phu, which means in the Tibetan language "the hill of the poison plant," or aconite. This plant is so abundant and so deadly in its effects that all sheep and cattle passing over the mountain are muzzled by their drivers. An English traveler saw at its foot great heaps of discarded bamboo muzzles. Curiously enough, only those cattle that are newly imported from the plains are fatally affected. The natives believe that the sheep of the district learn to shun the youngest leaves, which are the most virulent. A more likely explanation is that they grow habituated to the drug by taking it in small quantities.

Royal Night Bodyguards.

For more than 400 years a body of men known as the Monteros de Espinosa have enjoyed the exclusive privilege of watching over the slumbers of the kings and queens of Spain. They are bound by tradition to be natives of Espinosa and to have served with distinction in the army. One of these is on guard at the door of the bedroom of each royal personage in the palace, and the others, armed with huge halberds and wearing felt soled shoes, tread silently all through the night along the corridors and halls. Their service begins at midnight and ceases at 7 in the morning.

Crass Ignorance.

An east side kindergartner was about to give her class a lesson, with "The Kitten" as the subject. She began by saying: "Our lesson this morning will be all about the kitten. Now, can any little boy or girl tell me which grows on the kitten, fur or feathers?"

A dead silence followed for a minute, when one little boy said in a loud voice: "G-o-o-d gracious! Hain't you never seen a kitten?"—Life.

An Exception.

A New York banker tells the story of two Irishmen who discussed the "nationality of the American states." Said Pat, "Faith an' be jabbers if this grate counthry ain't overrun wid th' Irish, an' yit out of all th' states in th' Union not wan has an Irish name." "Sure an' yer wrong," replied Mike. "What's the matter wid O'Regon?"

Ancestors.

"My ancestors," said the man whose name happened to be Endicott, "came over in the Mayflower."

"And mine," observed the man whose name was Adams, "were the original occupants of the garden of Eden."—Chicago Tribune.

Enthusiasm.

Nothing is so contagious as enthusiasm. It is the real allegory of the tale of Orpheus; it moves stones; it charms brutes. Enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it.—Bulwer.

To make knowledge valuable you must have the cheerfulness of wisdom.—Emerson.

The Verdict.

Records of the ancient city of Gorgeana, founded in 1640, better known at the present time as York Harbor, Me., contain many quaint and unusual stories of the early life of the town.

At the entrance to York harbor a bold promontory known as Stage neck extends some distance into the sea, from which formerly in stormy weather a temporary light in the form of a lantern hoisted upon an upright pole was displayed as a warning to mariners.

One dark winter night a sloop was wrecked on these rocks. A survivor on being questioned about the catastrophe said:

"The vessel struck, turned over on her side, and the skipper and another barrel of whisky rolled overboard."

The local coroner was summoned, and this somewhat startling verdict was returned:

"We find that the deceased fell from the masthead and was killed. He rolled overboard and was drowned. He floated ashore and froze to death, and the rats eat him up alive!"—Harper's Weekly.

Lobster Mortality High.

A lobster lays thousands of eggs, most of which hatch, but few ever live to grow up. This is not the fault of the mother, for she carries them about with her for nearly a year and with admirable instinct guards them as she does her own life. When the young are set free her duty is done, for they must then shift for themselves. Though hardly larger than mosquitoes, being about one-third of an inch long, the little ones leave their parents on the bottom and swim toward the light—to the surface, where from one to two months, if fortune favors them, they lead a free, roving life. The open sea is a poor nursery for such weaklings, which become the sport of every storm and the prey of numberless hungry mouths. Out of a brood of 10,000 it would be a rare chance for more than one or two lobsters to reach maturity or finally to end their career in the kitchen or the chafing dish.—St. Nicholas.

Imprisoned In the Wind.

Butterflies may be imprisoned and uninjured in the midst of a whirlwind. Gales in a genuine typhoon are so terrible that the stoutest ships can scarcely hope to weather them, but there is a spot at the very center of the storm where something like a dead calm prevails. From the outer edge of the disturbance, which may be 300 miles across, the wind velocity increases toward the center until within a few miles of that point there comes a sudden lull. There the rain ceases and the sky often clears. In this little calm area, which sailors call "the eye of the storm," a group of butterflies has frequently been imprisoned, and their dainty, delicate forms are as safe in this aerial cage as if hovering in sunny meadows, but as helpless as in a collector's bottle.

Coffee and Smoke In Spain.

Even of wine, so cheap and abundant in Spain, the natives seem to use very little. They are frightfully intemperate, however, in their use of tobacco and coffee. They drink coffee at all hours and apparently every hour. The clerk who takes his morning cup at 9 has another at his desk an hour later, purchased from a street vender. The business men passing through the streets pause while a fellow who carries hot coffee, hot milk, sugar and spoons harnessed upon him serves them on the sidewalk.

If the Spaniard does not smoke in his sleep it is his only respite from the habit.—Rosary Magazine.

Stale Bread Day.

A traveler says that a curious weakness of grownup Moors is the love of eating newly baked bread. The caid of Azemmoor, in Morocco, discovered that old bread was thrown away as waste. To waste food is a serious offense in the eyes of a Moslem. The caid of Azemmoor therefore issued a bylaw prohibiting the baking of bread upon one day in each week. The citizens, he declared, must eat up the bread already baked, and he fixed Wednesday as the "bitalah," or holiday.

The Longest Novel.

The "Story of the Eight Dogs" is the longest novel that has ever been published. Fortunately, perhaps, it is written in Japanese, so no one will set himself the task of reading it. It contains 106 volumes, several hundred characters and numerous dogs, all of which are successfully disposed of by the time the last chapter is reached. Just imagine reading through that—one book that would last a lifetime!

True Heroism.

The hero fears not that if he withhold the avowal of a just and brave act it will go unwitnessed and unloved. One knows it—himself—and is pledged by it to sweetness of peace and to nobleness of aim, which will prove in the end a better proclamation of it than the relating of the incident.—Emerson.

She Reasoned It Out.

Ethel—Mamma, if a little boy is a lad, why isn't a big boy a ladder? Mamma—For the same reason, I suppose, that, although a little doll is a doll, a big doll is not a dollar. Ethel (reflectively)—That's so. My big doll was $2.—Kansas City Journal.

His Hard Luck.

Benevolent Old Lady (to one of the unemployed)—Poor man! What have you done to your hand? Unemployed—Broke my knuckles, mum, knockin' at people's doors askin' for work.

In order to love mankind we must not expect too much of them.—Helvetius.

The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound and I feel much better in every way."

MERCILESS ITCHING.

Another Speedy Cure of an Itching Humor with Loss of Hair by the Cuticura Remedies.

"For two years my neck was covered with sores, the humor spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the soreness, inflammation, and merciless itching made me wild. Friends advised Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and after a few applications the torment subsided, to my great joy. The sores soon disappeared, and my hair grew again, as thick and healthy as ever. I shall always recommend the Cuticura Remedies. (Signed) Harry J. Spalding, 104 West 104th street, New York City."

Patent Medicines.

As a rule patent medicines are put up by laymen or self-styled doctors who have little or no knowledge of drugs, or the requirements of the human body. By advertising on a large scale, they often manage to dispose of lots of their ware. Pusheck's-Kuro is really not a patent medicine. It is prepared by Dr. Pusheck, a real physician, who has practiced in Chicago for about 25 years. Dr. Pusheck knows how good this remedy is, and that it can be depended on in all cases of Rheumatism, Weakness, Nervous Prostration and all Stomach and Bowel complaints. Dr. Pusheck gives all sufferers an opportunity to test his Kuro by offering to send a trial treatment to be paid for only when it cures. For more information write to Dr. Pusheck, Chicago, Ill. MOST PROFITABLE FARM INVESTMENT.

This is what the Cream Separator has proved to be. Twenty years of experience upon the part of hundreds of thousands of users in every country of the world bear witness to the fact. No one disputes it.

There never was a better time to make this all-important farm investment than the present. Butter is unprecedentedly high in price. It is most desirable that none be left go to waste, and that the quality be such as to command top prices.

If you have cream to separate you cannot afford to delay this investment a single day. If you haven't the ready cash the machine will earn its cost while you are paying for it.

TRUTHS BY GOVERNOR FOLK.

Good citizens make good laws, but no law can make good citizens.

The government never neglects the people unless the people first neglect the government.

No government, city, state or national, was ever better than the people made it, or worse than they suffered it to become.

Plenty of men will die for their country, but the man who will live for his city and state every day is the man the government needs.

Disregard of one law breeds disrespect for all law. In allowing some laws to go unenforced we reap a harvest in having all laws broken.

The patriotism of peace is just as necessary as the patriotism of war. The patriotism of the ballot is even more necessary in a free country than the patriotism of the bullet.

Good men will observe even bad laws, but bad men will break even good laws. It should be that all men, good and bad, be compelled to keep all law, good and bad, because it is the law.

Investigation of the Packers.

Very general interest has been manifested in the government investigation now in progress into the mode of conducting business by the large packers located in Chicago and elsewhere. Much has been written upon the alleged illegal and improper modes of business procedure connected with the packing industry; but it seems that so far no definite charge of any kind has been sustained and no proof of illegal or inequitable methods has been disclosed to the public. While a wave of severe criticism of this great industrial interest is now passing over the country, it might be well to remember that the packers have had as yet no opportunity to make specific denial, the many indefinite charges of wrong-doing having never been formulated so that a categorical answer could be made.

The recent report of Commissioner Garfield, which embodied the results of an official investigation undertaken by the department of commerce and labor of the United States, was a vindication of the western packers, but this result having been unexpected, attempts in many quarters to discredit it were made.

In view of the situation as it now stands, however, attention may properly be called to a few facts that owing to popular clamor are now being apparently overlooked. Fair treatment in this country has heretofore been accorded to all citizens whose affairs assume prominence in the public eye and some of the facts that bear upon the relation of the packers to the commerce of the country may at this time be briefly alluded to. It would be difficult to estimate the benefits gained by the farmers of the country resulting from the energetic enterprise of the packers, for whatever is of benefit to the farmer is a gain to the entire commerce of the country. And connected with their continuous aggressive work no feature perhaps has been more important than their efforts in seeking outlets all over the world for the surplus products of the farmer. Our total exports of agricultural products have gained but little in the past twenty years, and leaving out corn, the total of all other farm products was far less in 1903 than in 1891. But in packing house products there was considerable gain during this period, because an organized and powerful force has been behind them seeking new and broader markets.

Besides the benefits reaped by farmers on account of the enterprise and energy exercised by the packers in attaining commercial results by foreign trade, the great development in the manufacture of packing house by-products has added enormously to the value of all live stock raised in the United States. The waste material of twenty years ago, then an expense to the packer, is now converted into articles of great value, and, as an economic fact, this must correspondingly increase the value to the farmer of every head of cattle marketed at the numerous stock yards of the country. Let these facts be remembered while now it is so popular to regard the great packing industry as deserving of condemnation. At least it must be admitted that, so far, there is no adequate reason for the almost unanimous howl that may be heard everywhere in the face of the Garfield report above alluded to, which practically exonerates the packers from the obscure and indefinite charges that have been for some time past made the subject of popular comment.

Private Car Lines.

The railroads seem very willing to have the private car lines brought under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. A railroad president is authority for the statement that lines are paid mileage, without discrimination, and the question of excessive charges is a matter for the shipper to settle with the car lines, so long as there is no law to govern their rates. Car mileage paying has been decided to be as legal as the payment of rental for property.

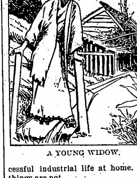
RESIDENTS OF COUNTRY FEEL SEVERE STRESS OF WAR.

All Classes Affected—Poorly-Paid Laborers Lack Usual Infinitesimal Wage—Report That Citizen and Soldier Ask for Peace.

I believe we generally have a more or less hazy picture of Japan; we imagine it in these days of soldiers off to the battlefield in thousands, pursuing a victorious way filled with cries of "Banzai," lighted with lanterns of rejoicing.

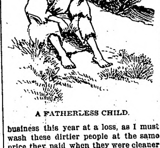
Of course there is jubilation over the successes the nation won, but the land does not present any Fourth of July picture, and the visitor fails to observe the continued prosperity vaunted by the newspapers, which have been attributing to Japan the miracle of carrying on successful war away from home and successful industrial life at home. Such things are not.



A YOUNG WIDOW.

The sojourner in the Land of the Rising Sun is impressed these days by the lack of money, the dullness of trade, the inability to get work. It affects different grades of society; the curio man goes to the steamer and shakes his head sorrowfully that no curio-hunting, curio-buying foreigners arrive; the chair men are out of employ, so few tourists; the venders of sweetmeats and fruits find none to buy their luxuries; even the lantern men, that in the early victories reaped such a harvest, now complain that people think it too costly to celebrate with the beautiful novelties.

One finds things amusing and much that is full of pathos in the present situation—as there seems to be in every situation in life. What strikes the foreigner as odd is the wail of the barbers and the bath house men. The former say that their best customers, the young men, who care so much for appearances, are off to the war and that the older men visit them but seldom. A correspondent to the San Francisco Argonaut thus describes the troubles of the bath house men: "But of all the tales of woe the enterprising reporter on the Dempo Shimbun gathered, the wail of the bath house man struck me as the oddest and the most Japanese. It seems that when you go to a public bath, you put all your clothes into an individual locker provided, and then enter another room. (Women and men are in separate places.) In this inner room is a large smoking tub sunk into the floor, and holding at least ten people for a soak. On the other side are two smaller tubs, one containing boiling water and the other cold. You are given a small pail, with which you can dip up from these water in temperature to suit your individual taste. And as you have brought your soap and towels from home, you are ready to wash and scrub yourself clean on a slightly inclined plane, from which the water runs off. A good scrub, and into the big tub to soak with your fellows. Another scrub, and if you are luxurious you have some one to scrub you, and you pay him for his services the magnificent sum of half a cent. A last soak, and off for home. 'But,' grumbles the bath house man, 'the people that used to come three times a week, since the war do not come twice, and so dirty are they that they use far more of my good water than if they came oftener. I am carrying on the business this year at a loss, as I must wash these dirtier people at the same price they paid when they were cleaner—one and a quarter cents a bath.'"



A FATHERLESS CHILD.

The people are economizing in every way; their old clothes are cleaned and turned; instead of buying fresh matting to cover the houses, the old is let serve; the weddings that were wont to give tradesmen good business are now wanting, instead of brides there are many young widows. In the country districts there is no little destitution. One missionary writes from the north: "There is indeed great suffering here among those left without support by the men at the front."

It is reported one hears expressions of disapproval of further continuance of the war; the campaigners are tired of the hardships, sick of the horrors; the stay-at-homes also want peace.

NO MORE HEADACHE

GENERAL WEAKNESS AND FEVER DISAPPEAR TOO.

How a Woman Was Freed from Troubles That Had Made Life Wretched for Many Years.

The immediate causes of headaches vary, but most of them come from poor or poisoned blood. In anæmia the blood is scanty or thin; the nerves are imperfectly nourished and pain is the way in which they express their weakness. In colds the blood absorbs poison from the mucous surfaces, and the poison irritates the nerves and produces pain. In rheumatism, malaria and the grip, the poison in the blood produces like discomfort. In indigestion the gases from the impure matter kept in the system affect the blood in the same way.

The ordinary headache-cures at best give only temporary relief. They deaden the pain but do not drive the poison out of the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on the contrary thoroughly renew the blood and the pain disappears permanently. Women in particular have found these pills an unfailing relief in headaches caused by anæmia.

Miss Stella Blocker recently said: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did me a great deal of good. I had headache nearly all the time. After I had taken three boxes of these pills I became entirely well."

"How long had you suffered?" she was asked.

"For several years. I can't tell the exact date when my illness began for it came on by slow degrees. I had been going down hill for many years."

"Did you have any other ailments?"

"I was very weak and sometimes I had fever. My liver and kidneys were affected as well as my head."

"How did you come to take the remedy that cured you?"

"I saw in a southern newspaper a statement of some person who was cured of a like trouble by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My physician hadn't done me any good, so I bought a box of these pills. After I had taken one box I felt so much better that I kept on until I became entirely well."

Miss Blocker's home is at Leander, Louisiana. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists. Besides headache they cure neuralgia, sciatica, nervous prostration, partial paralysis and rheumatism.

"I have looked the matter over with reasonable care," said the Prunytown Philosopher, with his usual acridity, "and I have reached the conclusion that it is not absolutely necessary to send boys to college in order to have 'em act the fool."—Tom Watson's Magazine.

"And you promised me you would never speculate again." "I know it, but it was such a temptation. I bought steel at 60 and sold at 68." "Oh, Algernon, how could you? It went to 73!"—Brooklyn Life.

A Tale of Suffering.

Oakley, Mich., May 8th.—(Special)—"I could not sleep or rest in any place," says Florence Capen, of this place, in a recent interview. "I had a pain in my back and hips. If I sat down I could not get up out of my chair. I was in pain all the time. I got poor, for I did not eat enough to keep a small child. I could not rest nights.

"Then I sent for a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and went to taking them, and what do you think, that very night I went to bed and I slept till morning. I got up and thanked God for the night's rest and Dodd's Kidney Pills. I know that Dodd's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed for them."

This is only one of the numerous experiences that show the way to build up run down people is to cure the kidneys. Thousands of people in every state bear witness to the fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure the kidneys.

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.

Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

3 DON'TS
Don't boil it too long.
Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving.
Don't use water that has been boiled before.

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st. With Eggs. Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.)
(Lion-head on every package.)

THE WAR IN THE FAR EAST

Progress of Hostilities Between Russia and Japan—Doings at Washington—Items of Interest from All Over the World.

THE CHICAGO STRIKE.

President Roosevelt received a labor committee in Chicago, read its appeal, not free from phrases of a revolutionary stamp, told the committee the law should be upheld, and regretted that the appeal made any reference to the federal army, which he had not been asked to send. He spoke for law and order in his address at the Iroquois club banquet in the Auditorium hotel.

A flour famine is threatened in Chicago because of a strike of 46 teamsters for the Wenig Teaming company, which does a large part of the hauling of flour in the city. The concern handles 2,000 barrels a day.

Testimony brought out before Master in Chancery Sherman in Chicago in the hearing on the federal injunction writs was to the effect that employers armed their men because the latter were beaten and shot.

Deputy Sheriff George Waldorn, in Chicago, jeered for deserting the union, shot and killed George Pierce, who jeered him.

WASHINGTON LETTER

PHILIPPINE PARTY DWINDLING CONSIDERABLY IN NUMBER.

EXPEDITION NOT A JUNKET

Senate in Recent Years Has Lost Many of Its Distinguished Old Men—Majority of Our Presidents Have Been Masons.

THE GOVT WILL NOT PAY ANY BILLS MADE BY COMMITTEE
U. S.
PHILIPPINES

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Taft has caused consternation among the congressmen who have been contemplating a trip with him to the Philippines. The congressmen had supposed that their expenses would be defrayed from some public fund or other and they are somewhat surprised to learn from a recent statement of the secretary that they will only be furnished with transportation. They will have to pay for their meals and Pullman fare to San Francisco; for their meals on board the transport across the Pacific and for their subsistence while in the Philippines. The secretary calculates that this means an outlay of about $500 per man.

As this trip was proposed for the purpose of enlightening the prominent statesmen on many questions affecting the Philippines and the general government, and the results of the expedition are to be shown in general legislation, a number of the congressmen cannot understand why they are called upon to give up good money of their own for the benefit of the Philippine government. Secretary Taft believes that every cent expended on this trip will be well invested, and also that all the expenses of the party should be defrayed either by the Philippine government or out of the United States government. He is restricted, however, in the extension of the hospitality of the Philippine government, as some very finnicky auditors of the treasury department might question the accounts, with bills to come in for feeding and otherwise entertaining the statesmen.

It now looks as though the party would be much smaller than at first anticipated. It is very doubtful if Speaker Cannon will be a member of it, although the declaration of Secretary Taft that the trip cannot in any way be regarded as a junket, removes a very serious objection that "Uncle Joe" had to it. The speaker is frequently a guest of the secretary of the navy on ocean trips, but he is always very careful to pay his full sharo of the mess on board a government vessel.

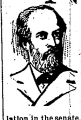
Senator Newlands.

IN THE hearings now in progress before the interstate commerce committee of the senate a pretty wide range of questions is permitted. This freedom is taken advantage of by Senator Newlands of Nevada, who is very fond of poking questions at high railway officials and securing all sorts of information. He does not always confine himself to the exact subject under consideration, but wanders a good deal into general fields of political economy. Mr. Newlands is a very strong advocate of granting charters by the national government to corporations doing an interstate business. In his cross-examination of railroad men before the committee he is sure to lead up to his hobby.

There has been a disposition on the part of Senator Elkins, chairman of the committee, to restrict cross-examination to the main subject under consideration, that of the government fixing railway freight rates. He has not, however, checked Mr. Newlands in the latter's inquiries, and the reason given is because the Nevada senator is "such a good fellow." Mr. Newlands is entitled to being termed a good fellow, as he is one of the most royal hosts in Washington. He lives in a century old mansion on the heights overlooking the northwest section of Washington, and the broad lawns and rambling rooms of this old home are ideal for the exhibition of whole-souled hospitality. The senator delights in entertaining here numbers of his colleagues, and no pleasanter evening can be spent than at his almost baronial dining table. The interstate commerce committee has had this pleasure more than once, and it is easily apparent why Mr. Newlands is given free rein in his line of questioning at the committee rooms.

Mr. Newlands has invested may millions of money in the development of Washington, and especially its suburbs. Through his wife much of the Sharon estate came to him, and he has invested it about the capital city where returns are reasonably certain.

The Late Senator Platt.



NO MAN will be more missed from the United States senate than Orville H. Platt," was the remark of Senator Spooner of Wisconsin when the news came of the Connecticut senator's death. Mr. Platt was one of a half dozen republican senators who virtually controlled all important legislation in the senate, and that meant its control in congress. Not one of that half dozen gave more time and thought to the country's interests than did Mr. Platt. His deep study of every question and his sound, common-sense judgment made him the most trusted of all the leaders.

There were many men more brilliant in the senate, but none more honest or able. Mr. Platt had no vanity, and he never tried to learn the tricks of an orator. He was somewhat ungainly in appearance, and when he arose to address the senate he seemed to get out of his seat in sections. He was very tall, and as he came up out of his chair slowly he seemed to unlimber a section at a time. He had a somewhat querulous voice and spoke in jerky fashion. His gestures were strained and awkward, but he was never at a loss to find the proper language in which to express his ideas, and they were always listened to with the closest attention.

Mr. Platt was very fond of out-door life, and not long before his death he remarked that in the previous 25 years he had probably lived five years out of doors. He had a lodge in the Adirondacks, being first attracted to those delightful surroundings by the talks and writings of the late Rev. W. H. H. Murry, who was for some years pastor of a Congregational church in Connecticut, of which Senator Platt was a deacon.

Some of the Older Men.

THE death of Senator Platt emphasizes the rapidity with which old and famous men are being taken out of the United States senate. One year ago there were 14 men of national reputation on the rolls of the senate who were above the scriptural limit of three score years and ten. To-day there are just nine senators who are over 70 years of age, over one-third of last year's number having crossed the Great Divide. Those who have passed away in the last 12 months are Senators Quay, Hoar, Bate, Hawley and Platt.

This mortality among the older statesmen inspires the question of "Who will be the next?" There are now serving in the senate at more than three score and ten years of age Senators Morgan and Petus of Alabama, Teller of Colorado, Cullom of Illinois, Allison of Iowa, Frye of Maine, Platt and Depew of New York, and Proctor of Vermont. The weight of increasing years is plainly visible on some of these noted statesmen. Senator Morgan of Alabama has aged very perceptibly in the last year. He has lost flesh and, although still able to make a prolonged speech, his voice has lost much of its fullness, and after an hour or two on the floor he is compelled to seek the indulgence of the senate while he sits down and rests in the course of his speech.

Senator Frye of Maine, president pro tem of the senate, is another who is showing the burden of years. Mr. Frye has had frequent weak spells in the last year or two and is not nearly so vigorous as some of his older colleagues. A long rest this summer, most of which he will spend at his lodge on the range of lakes in Maine, may restore much of his vitality, but his friends have been watching him with anxious eyes. Senator Platt of New York is probably the feeblest man in the senate, but as he has been in that condition for some years the chances are he may outlive many of the more robust senators. Teller of Colorado is becoming bent and stooped with his 75 years, and even the hard-working Allison is beginning to desire a little more rest.

Distinction of an American.

An American, J. G. Jenkins, who is relinquishing the premiership of South Australia in order to become the agent-general for that state in London, will enjoy the distinction of being the first man who was a born citizen of the United States to represent a British colony in London. He is a native of Susquehanna county, Pa., and is said to have arrived in Australia as a canvasser for an American publishing house. He liked the country, settled there, became a naturalized British subject, was returned to the South Australian parliament, filled various ministerial offices and ultimately reached the premiership.

Paid Him to Fail.

"Has he any failings?"

CHICAGO STRIKE GROWS SRERIOUS

CHICAGO TEAM OWNERS GIVE ULTIMATUM TO STRIKING TEAMSTERS.

Teamsters' Joint Council is not a Unit in Vote to Fight Owners. Unless Compromise is Reached Strike will Spread Widely.

Chicago, May 15.—Unless compromises are offered by the opposing interests in the strife between capital and labor now in progress in this city, the teamsters' strike will spread manyfold during the next 48 hours.

The refusal of the teamsters' joint council, representing 35,000 union drivers, to accede to the demands of the Chicago Teamowners' association to handle merchandise for all business houses having contracts with the members of the owners' organization has brought the controversy to a point where, lest a speedy settlement is made, one of the worst industrial upheavals in history will be the result.

Hopes that such a settlement will be effected are based on the decision of the Team Owners' association to give the teamsters' joint council more time to consider the proposition.

At first it was the intention of the owners to put their ulimatum into effect this morning, but, believeing that the teamsters could be induced to change their minds, they were given until Tuesday to make a final answer.

Information which the team owners say they received yesterday, that the teamsters' joint council was not a unit Saturday night in its determination to fight the owners was given by the owners as the reason for the postponement of the ultimatum until Tuesday.

One man was killed and another fatally injured yesterday.

CONVICT KILLED.

Harvey S. Rogers is Killed While Working at Machinery at Stillwater Prison.

Stillwater, Minn., May 14.—Harvey S. Rogers, a convict in the state prison, was killed while at work in the binding twine plant. His skull was crushed and he sustained ugly body bruises.

While at work in cleaning up in shop "B," where the twine spindles are numerous, shortly after three o'clock, Rogers was caught by a belt and hurled against a machine. His clothing was seized by the cogs and his body was mangled after his head had been crushed. The machinery was stopped in a few minutes, but the man was then nearly dead, and he expired while he was being carried to the hospital. The skull fracture was caused by being hurled against the machine.

His plight was discovered by a fellow prisoner who stopped the machine and carefully removed the mangled body of the young man.

Steamer Lost.

Superior, Wis., May 15.—No word has been received at the head of the Lakes as to the whereabouts of the steamer Rend, since Tuesday last, and local marine men and the agents for the boat fear that she has been wrecked off Manitou island, where she was stranded about a week ago. The latest reports from the boat were to the effect that she might possibly be saved if the weather remained calm off the island. During the last few days, however, a gale has been blowing, and the wind has at various times blown from every quarter with equal force.

Texas Tornado

Mount Pleasant, Texas, May 15.—One person was killed and fifteen injured, five fatally, due to a tornado which swept through this vicinity Saturday night. The tornado first struck the earth at a point southwest of this city, and for a few moments it appeared as if the town would be destroyed, but the twisting funnel turned in an almost easterly direction, and after proceeding a mile went northwest. The path of the tornado was half a mile wide.

Jessie Bartlett Davis is Dead.

Chicago, May 15.—Jessie Bartlett Davis the well known actress died suddenly at her home in this city yesterday.

The cause of her death was heart disease produced by nephritis.

She was taken ill on Friday and on Saturday became unconscious from which condition she never recovered.

She was 46 years old.

Many Drowned

A Joke on the "Prophet."

Some time in the thirties of the last entury Prophet Joseph Smith, Sr., the Mormon, and a party of his followers ere proselyting in Muskingum coun-, O. He appointed a certain day hen he would show the people his onderful powers and that he was a econd Christ by walking on the waers of Mud creek. The water was lways muddy. A day or two before e time set grandmother's brother obert and a couple of neighbor boys ere accidentally attracted to the Mormons working at the creek and, oncealing themselves, watched the Mormons put down stakes and put lanks on them from bank to bank, e plank resting about six inches uner water. After the Mormons left e boys went down and took out the enter plank, where the water was bout ten feet deep. The next day alaam Smith came down to the creek nd, after a long exhortation, started cross the creek. He was all right nd on top till he came to the center, here his "powers" seemed to leave im, and he went to the bottom. This as the end of Mormonism in that ounty.

Soldier's Sense of Humor.

A high naval official, now dead, often ted as an example of ghastly humor n incident that befell a young woman uring the civil war.

"She was good and kind," he would y, "and during the war she visited e hospitals daily, distributing fruits nd flowers and tracts.

"One morning on her rounds a young oldier, immediately after she had assed him, set up a loud laugh.

"She turned and looked at him in rprise. His seemed a pitiful case. othing of him but his face was visile on the little white bed, and this oung face was sadly thin and pale. evertheless he laughed like one posessed. His mirth resounded through e grewsome room.

"The visitor returned to him.

"'Will you tell me what amuses you?' he said.

"'Why, ma'am,' said he, 'here you ave given me a tract on the sin of ancing when I've got both legs shot f.'"—Baltimore Herald.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail n the press. It was stated the other ay that a man was "shot in the ticket ffice." Another paper says a man was shot in the suburbs," "He kissed her assionately upon her reappearance," She whipped him upon his return," He kissed her back," "Mr. Jones walk-d in upon her invitation," "She seated erself upon his entering," "We thought he sat down upon her being asked," She fainted upon his departure."

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through ll ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which hey may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian hants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.

A Ghastly Pavement.

Gwandu, a native town in Africa, contains between 10,000 and 15,000 inhabitants and is surrounded by a palisade of poles, the top of every pole being crowned with a human skull. There are six gates, and the approach to each gate is laid with a pavement of human skulls, the tops being the only parts that show above ground. More than 2,000 skulls are used in the pavement leading up to each gate. The pavement is of snowy whiteness, polished to the smoothness of ivory by the daily passage of hundreds of naked feet.

Words of Violence.

"Words of violence nearly always begin with 'sp,'" said a poet.

"How do you mean?"

"I mean that words of violence like spank begin with the same two letters, s and p. For example, besides spank, a clear word of violence, we have the sp beginning for such words as spurt, split, spring, splutter, spasm, speed, spill, spin, splinter, spurn, spar, spun, spike, spat, and so on."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Willie's Anguish.

"Say, ma," asked little Willie after he had been in conjunction with the paternal slipper, "did anybody besides pa ever ask you to be his wife?"

"Oh, yes. I had lots of proposals before your father came along."

"Well, do you think you gained anything by waiting?"

As He Saw It.

Charity.

It is simply wonderful the charity we would give and the sympathy we feel for suffering ones at a distance, but remain heedless of the wants of those who are our neighbors.—Concord Patriot.

The Early Use of Skates.

Holland is said to be the home and birthplace of skating, and without doubt skating was first practiced there and in the far north. In a country of lakes and canals the necessity of walking and running on ice must have been felt from the earliest days. In Holland they show the bone skates which were found in one of the mounds of which a Friesland village was built. The skates were fastened to the feet by straps passed through holes which were made in the bones. A Danish historian mentions the sport in 1134. The bone skates were also first used in England. A writer in his account of the amusements of the young people of London in the twelfth century mentions the fact that it was usual for them to fasten the leg bones of animals under the soles of their feet by tying them around their ankles; then, taking a pole shod with iron, they pushed themselves forward with great rapidity by striking this pole into the ice.

Aunt Chloe and the Dinner.

Mrs. McJarvis had invited a number of friends to dinner, but the cook left her on the morning of the appointed day without a moment's notice, says the Chicago Tribune.

In this emergency she hunted up an old friend of the family, Aunt Chloe, wife of Uncle Ephraim, and asked her to take the cook's place.

"I'll cook de dinnah, missis," said Aunt Chloe, "if you'll give me wot's left."

Mrs. McJarvis agreed, and within a few hours the dinner was well under way.

Later in the day she visited the kitchen.

"Why, Aunt Chloe," she said, "I have only five persons to entertain, and you are cooking everything there is in the house! What is that?"

"I want to make sho', missis," said auntie, "dat dere'll be sum'n lef'."

London's First Omnibus.

The first London omnibus was really much more gorgeous than its successor of today. It was an imposing vehicle, beautifully decorated and painted, with accommodation for twenty-two passengers inside, and was drawn by three handsome bays, driven by a smart coachman in livery, and its conductor was gay in a blue cloth uniform, like a midshipman. This conductor, by the way, was the son of a naval captain and spoke French so well that it was quite common for the poke bonneted young ladies from Paddington to ride as far as the city and back with the object of improving their French by chatting with him. The fare from the Yorkshire Stingo, at Paddington, to the Bank was a shilling; halfway, sixpence and newspapers and books were provided for the passengers.—London Globe.

Care of Harness.

Take the harness to a room where you can unbuckle it and separate the parts completely. Wash each part well in lukewarm water to which has been added a little potash. Scrub well with a brush until all the grease and dust have been removed. Work the pieces well under the hand until they become supple. It won't do to oil until it becomes so. Let the parts dry in a place where they will do so slowly. When just moist, oil. For this purpose use cod liver oil. It is the best for the purpose. Besides, if you were to use neatsfoot the rats and mice are your enemies at once, while they will not touch a harness oiled with cod liver oil. Give a good dose of oil to all parts, then hang up to dry. When dry, rub well with a soft rag.

A Russian Sentry.

In 1839 the Russian emperor saw a soldier in the middle of a grass plot in the palace grounds. Why was there a daily guard, relieved at stated intervals? No one knew. Curiosity was aroused, and at last a veteran was discovered who remembered hearing his father say that the Empress Catherine —she died in 1727—once saw a snowdrop in bloom at that point unusually early and asked that a guard be stationed there to protect it. And there a sentinel remained for at least 132 years; no one knew how much longer.

For Sore Throat.

Those subject to sore throat will find the following preparation simple, cheap and highly efficacious when used in the early stage: Pour a pint of boiling water on thirty leaves of the common sage and let the infusion stand for an hour; add vinegar sufficient to make it pleasantly acid and honey to taste. The mixture should be used as a gargle twice a day. There is no danger if some of it is swallowed.

Disappointment on Both Sides.

"You said the house was only five minutes' walk from the station," complained the victim. "To say the least, I'm disappointed in you."

"And I'm disappointed in you," replied the agent. "I thought you were a very rapid walker."—Philadelphia Press.

Setting Him Right.

"You think a good deal of your husband, don't you?" asked the visiting relative.

"You have the wrong preposition," answered Mr. Meekton's wife, with the cold tones of the superior woman. "I think for him."

The Backbone.

When asked by her teacher to describe the backbone a Norborne schoolgirl said, "The backbone is something that holds up the head and ribs and keeps one from having legs clear up to the neck."—Norborne Leader.

The coldest inhabited country is Werchojansk, in eastern Siberia. The daily mean temperature of the entire year is 2.74 degrees below zero.

A Bride's Misapprehension.

It was the first Sunday in their pretty new flat, and Mrs. G. determined to celebrate the joyous day with a dinner which would make her young husband think he had married not only "the sweetest girl in the world," but "the best cook." It was perfectly lovely to set the little round dining room table with the nicest presents, and the preparation of a tempting salad and dessert was not exactly a trying ordeal, but the roasting of the chicken made her a little nervous. After succeeding, with the assistance of a large oilcloth book, in getting the fowl into the oven she sang from sheer relief. A little later, when the music had ceased and the silence in the kitchen became suspicious, Mr. G. opened the door. Kneeling down before the oven, with flushed face and tearful eyes, was Mrs. G. On the floor beside her was the cookbook, and in one hand was a long needle with white thread. "Oh, dearie," she cried; "it is going to burn my hands just dreadfully to baste this chicken every fifteen minutes!"—What to Eat.

Sporting Repartee.

It is doubtful, said a biographer, if any repartee ever surpassed in delicacy the reply made by an East Indian servant of the late Lord Dufferin when he was viceroy of India.

"Well, what sort of sport has Lord —— had?" said the viceroy one day to his shikaree, or sporting servant, who had attended a young English lord on a shooting excursion.

"Oh," replied the scrupulously polite Hindoo, "the young sahib shot divinely, but Providence was very merciful to the birds!"

This story calls to mind one told by the writer of some reminiscences of Sydney Smith. On one occasion the celebrated physician, Sir Henry Holland, told the witty divine that he had failed to kill either one of a brace of pheasants that had risen within easy range near Smith's house.

"Why did you not prescribe for them?" came the quick reply.

The Weight of Hats.

"What do you suppose this hat weighs?" said the hatter, taking up a fine eight dollar top hat of silk.

"About a pound," the patron hazarded.

"Only a little over a quarter of a pound—five ounces, to be precise. No good hat," said the hatter, "runs over four or five ounces nowadays.

"This white felt hat—it is worth $25—weighs less than an ounce. This new five dollar derby hat weighs four ounces. Straw hats run from two to four ounces in weight.

"It pays a man to make the weight an important consideration in the choosing of a hat, for a light hat is a prevention of headache, and its injurious effect on the hair is reduced to a minimum."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Castor Oil Cocktail.

"Give me a castor oil cocktail," said the man at the drug store counter. The clerk poured a bottle of sarsaparilla into a glass, dashed a few drops of paregoric into it and then poured in some castor oil. The man drank it with a pleasant face and walked out as if he had drunk soda water instead of castor oil. "Yes, we have quite a call for castor oil cocktails," said the clerk. "If a man's system is a little out and he needs a dose of castor oil the only way to take it is in the cocktail form. You wouldn't know there was a drop of castor oil in it. If you've ever taken castor oil neat you will recognize the value of the cocktail."—Detroit News-Tribune.

The Hotel Brusher.

The position of brusher in the barber shop of a large hotel in New York is worth at least $30 a week if a young man attends to his business. Hotel patrons are liberal tippers. The brusher is expected to find seats for customers if the barbers' chairs are filled and to hand around the morning and illustrated papers. The boss barber pays them no salary. Permission to work in the shop is considered sufficient compensation. The hours are long, and in most cases brushers are allowed a boy as an assistant.

A Nocturne.

"You will have to accompany me," said the new and zealous officer of the law, laying a firm hand on the arm of the seedy young man who was making night hideous with a cornet.

"Certainly," said the musician, affectionately linking his arm in the policeman's. "What do you wish to sing and in what key?"

Kept Awake.

"How are you getting on with your music, my dear?" inquired a lady of her niece.

"Well, of course," replied the niece diffidently, "it wouldn't be proper for me to compliment myself, but some of the neighbors have told me they have stayed awake at night for hours listening to my playing."

The Cold in Alaska.

David T. Hanbury, writing of his first experiences in Alaska, said: "The cold could not be kept out of even the most palatial examples of domestic architecture which Dawson City could at that time boast, but the author stuck to the cult of the morning tub. After I had melted the pail of ice on the 'air tight' stove I poured some of the water two inches deep into the bathtub, which I had removed to the rear of the room, where there was no heat. Not two minutes had elapsed before I threw off my chamois pajamas in the front room and, opening the communicating door, stepped hurriedly into the bathtub, for I had no time to lose. Quick as I had been, the atmosphere had been quicker, and just as I stepped into the tub with both feet, wrenching with a great effort the soap from a beam hard by, I slipped on the newly frozen ice into the tub, and over we went, soap, tub and myself, all separated in different quarters of the room. Those two minutes had sufficed to transmute my water into smooth and glassy ice."

An Indian's Advice.

The following is a statement made by a full blood who is well posted on Indian affairs: "Government safeguards have been the bane of the Indian. Instead of being taught to rely upon himself he has been encouraged to be dependent. The government should have pushed him off to his own resources long ago, as a cow does her calf when it is old enough to rustle for itself. The government should have given the Indian 160 acres, together with a mule and a plow, in the beginning and enjoined him to 'root, hog, or die.' Turn him loose. Let him go and work out his own salvation. Sentiment and misguided philanthropy will never save him. He must save himself."—Kansas City Journal.

Gondola Willie.

When Emperor William was younger he used to sound alarms at odd hours and turn up all available army corps to march past or maneuver when they least expected it. On one such occasion the garrison included a detachment of submarine crews, and the emperor came along accoutered as an admiral.

He was standing among a group of shivering officers when one veteran took him for some other worthy sailor. He slapped him on the back. "I see that Gondola Willie has fished up the aquarium this morning," he observed pleasantly.

They attribute the cessation of sudden alarms to that incident.

Jupiter's Big Red Blotch.

In 1878 something happened on Jupiter which caused a red blotch to appear in his southern hemisphere near one of the great belts that cross his disk like huge bands of colored clouds. It was 30,000 miles long and 8,000 miles broad, yet, after all, only a little patch on the mighty disk! It has remained ever since, sometimes brightening to almost the crimson hue of fire and sometimes fading nearly to invisibility, yet always, even when faintest, certifying its presence and its power by keeping the area originally covered by it clear of all other objects.—Success.

Hours and Luck.

As strong as the superstition of Friday is that concerning certain hours in European and oriental countries.

In Paris the superstition is so prevalent that an enterprising business is that of selling cards on which are printed the hours that should be avoided.

The famous Gambetta consulted a reader of cards as to the auspicious day for embarking on any important enterprise.

President Carnot was skeptical of such things, and he chose an unlucky hour for his journey to Lyons, where he was assassinated.—American Queen.

How He Viewed It.

There was a carriage accident in a town in Scotland. A brougham containing two ladies was run away with down a steep hill. The noise and clatter of the horses' hoofs on the flags with which the town was paved were terrific. A Scotch farmer who was walking on the footpath turned to watch the carriage disappearing in the distance and said to his companion: "For us who see it, it is indeed a fearsome sight, but for those who are inside it must be a rich spiritual experience."—London Gentlewoman.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

PAINFUL SCIATICA

EVERY SUFFERER WANTS THE VERY QUICKEST CURE.

Mr. Donovan Thinks the Remedy Used by Him with Such Remarkable Success the Best—Cured by Five Boxes.

"Men who have to do difficult and dangerous work on electric lines at any hour of day or night, can't afford to have anything the matter with their health," said Mr. Donovan. You can imagine, therefore, how much I was alarmed one winter's day in 1902, when I was seized by a pain just behind my right hip that made it difficult for me to walk home. It was so bad by the time I reached the house that I was obliged to go straight to bed."

"Did that relieve you?"

"No, the pain grew more severe and kept extending downward along my leg. I sent for a physician, and he soon decided that I had sciatica. In a few days the whole nerve was affected, and the least movement brought on terrible agony."

"Did your condition improve under the doctor's treatment?"

"Quite the contrary. At the end of two months I wasn't a bit better, and at times I feared that I would never be able to leave my bed."

"How did you get out again?"

"When I was lying in bed, unable to move and wasting away in flesh, a friend visited me and told me about the wonderful cures brought about by a great blood and nerve remedy, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He strongly urged me to try them, and I luckily had sense enough to take his advice."

"Did you mend quickly?"

"Yes, that was the astonishing thing. I noticed a slight improvement before I had quite finished the first box of the pills, I could get out of bed while I was on the third box, and I was entirely cured by the time I had taken five boxes."

Mr. Joseph A. Donovan is living at Plaistow, New Hampshire, and is line inspector for the Haverhill, Newton and Plaistow Electric Street Railway. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the remedy to use when the blood is thin, as in anæmia; or impure, as in rheumatism; or when the nerves are weak, as in neuralgia; or lifeless, as in partial paralysis; or when the body as a whole is ill-nourished, as in general debility. They are sold by all druggists.

THE HABITUAL EXPRESSION.

Questions Which Many Persons in Exalted Business Positions Should Ask Themselves.

What kind of an expression do you wear habitually? asks Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine. Is it sour, morose, repellent? Is it a mean, stingy, contemptible, uncharitable, intolerant expression? Do you wear the expression of a bulldog, a grasping, greedy, hungry expression, which indicates an avaricious nature? Do you go about among employes with a thundercloud expression, with a melancholy, despondent, hopeless look on your face, or do you wear the sunshine expression which radiates good cheer and hope, which indicates a feeling of good will and of helpfulness? Do people smile and look happier when you approach them, or do they shrink from you, and feel a chilly goose-flesh sensation come over them as they see you approach?

It makes all the difference in the world to you and to those whom you influence what kind of an expression you wear.

EGG-O-SEE

EGG-O-SEE
Crisp and Delicious
Quincy, Illinois, U.S.A.
EGG-O-SEE

RIGHT LIVING MEANS HEALTH, ENERGY AND A CLEAR BRAIN.

EGG-O-SEE IS A FOOD ESPECIALLY ADAPTED TO PEOPLE LIVING IN THE SMALLER TOWNS AND COUNTRY DISTRICTS, BECAUSE OF THE ABUNDANCE OF RICH CREAM AT HAND.

The modern tendency is to take less medicine and pay more attention to the selection of proper food. All physicians and food experts agree that the whole wheat grain properly cooked is the most healthful and nourishing form of food known. Common flour loses some of the essential elements of right food. Other cereals heat blood and are indigestible. EGG-O-SEE is the ideal whole wheat food. It is scientifically steam cooked in airtight sanitary ovens, and its preparation returns all the elements of wheat necessary for health and strength.

EGG-O-SEE is not only healthful, but it is the daintiest and best flavored of all flaked wheat foods. It will please the discriminating taste.

There is only one way to know the real merits of EGG-O-SEE, and that is to eat it.

Were Good for Both.

Paulding, Miss., May 15th.—(Special)—In this neighborhood men and women alike are telling of the great benefit they have received from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills and it frequently happens they are the means of curing members of both sexes in the same family. Take the case of Mr. and Mrs. F. Erby. The latter voices the sentiment of both when she says:

"My lips cannot express too much praise for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I suffered with Backache and Female weakness for four or five years and I feel that I have been wonderfully helped by Dodd's Kidney Pills. My husband too was a sufferer for five years from a weak bladder and they also cured him."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys. Healthy kidneys mean pure blood and good health all over the body. No woman with healthy kidneys ever had female weakness.

Private Car Lines.

The railroads seem very willing to have the private car lines brought under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. A railroad president is authority for the statement that lines are paid mileage, without discrimination, and the question of excessive charges is a matter for the shipper to settle with the car lines, so long as there is no law to govern their rates. Car mileage paying has been decided to be as legal as the payment of rental for property.

"Though somewhat averse to patent medicines, and still more averse to becoming a professional affidavit man, it seems only a plain duty in the present instance to add my experience to the columns already written concerning the curative powers of Peruna.

"I have been particularly benefited by its use for colds in the head and throat. I have been able to fully cure myself of a most severe attack in forty-eight hours by its use according to directions. I use it as a preventive whenever threatened with an attack.

"Members of my family also use it for like ailments. We are recommending it to our friends."—C. W. Bowman.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

State Fair.

Hamline.—The state fair of 1905 will be held Sept. 4. to Sept. 9, inclusive, and will be the most comprehensive ever held in the United States. It will be much larger even than the great fair of 1904. No industry will be neglected. Each department will be in charge of a superintendent, selected because of his competency and experience in that particular line, and each part of the fair will be given well-balanced attention. The fair will not be strong in some particulars and weak in others. It will be strong in all.

For instance, the great sweepstakes prize for creamery butter, which has for several years past attracted an enormous display at the state fair is this year, increased from $800 to $1,000.

Another interesting prize and a new one, is that of $100 sweepstakes for exhibits of corn husked and in stalk to be shown on a table three by six feet with wall space. This suggests the developed importance of the corn growing industry of Minnesota. As last year, $2,000 goes to county exhibits and similar liberal appropriations are found all through the book.

The premium list is for free distribution. Anyone interested may obtain it by addressing Secretary E. W. Randall, State Fair Grounds, Minn.

Settled.

St. Paul.—Attorney General Young has made a settlement of the suit he commenced last January for the recovery of a half-section of timberland in the eastern part of Hubbard county.

It was set up that the land had been erroneously appraised in 1902 by three citizens of Hubbard county as being devoid of timber and had been sold in October, 1903, as agricultural land, at $5 an acre. The land was sold to S. W. Allen of Walker and later transferred to West & Bonness of Minneapolis. State Auditor Iverson found the land contained 1,500,000 feet of of white pine timber.

Indians.

White Earth.—Minnesota Indians will not be included in the enumeration of the residents of the state to be made under the direction of the state census department.

Superintendent George Wright stated that the enumerators would be instructed to count only Indians who were entitled to the rights of suffrage. In the Leech Lake reservation a large number of the Indians have participated in the allotments of government money, which gives them the right of citizenship.

The great majority of the Indians of the state, however, are still wards of the government and the Indian reservations will be practically free from the invasion of the census enumerator. The agents of all Indian reservations have been asked for a complete statement as to the number of Indians entitled to citizenship.

Life Insurance.

St. Paul.—Life insurance companies doing business in Minnesota had a remarkably good year in 1904, according to the preliminary life report of Insurance Commissioner T. D. O'Brien, which will be out in a few days. This report will show that the net earnings of the legal reserve companies admitted to Minnesota were $117,247,138.18 as compared with approximately $59,000,000 in 1903.

The Minnesota department is one of the few insurance departments in the United States that prepares a statement showing the exact profit of each company, and the annual report of the Minnesota commissioner for this season is much in demand among life underwriters of other states. The plan of preparing such a table was inaugurated by Former Insurance Commissioner E. H. Dearth and will be continued by Insurance Commissioner O'Brien.

Sugar Factory.

St. Louis Park.—Insurance adjusters are at work determining the loss of the Minnesota Sugar company. The only salvage will be the value of the old iron. The figures given out of the loss sustained—about $400,000—are unchanged. Fortunately for the beet growers, the efforts of the company to secure a market have been successful, and the Menominee Sugar company, of Michigan, will take over all the sugar beets contracted for by the Minnesota company.

News Notes.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota guardsmen may take part in the national rifle contest at Sea Girt, N. J.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota Historical society holds a memorial meeting in honor of Judge Greenleaf Clark.

Minneapolis.—It was discovered that someone had broken into the basement of the Portland Avenue Church of Christ, Portland avenue and Grant street, and stolen the children's birthday contributions, amounting in all to about $20, which were in a cabinet in the lecture-room.

Warsaw.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sweetser celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. Sweetser was once a member of the legislature.

Rochester.—The public library board was presented with a donation of $20,000 by Mrs. Walter Hurlbut, in memory of her late husband, who passed away in California.

St. Paul.—The state dairy and food department is to have a separate building for its laboratory, apart from the new state capitol, according to the plans of the capitol commission.

St. Peter.—The remains of Emil Lundberg, the state hospital nurse who disappeared on the morning of April 30, were found today in the Minnesota river about a mile below the trestle where he was last seen.

MOTHERHOOD

Actual Sterility in Women Is Very Rare—Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes.

MRS. MAE P. WHARRY
MRS. L. C. GLOVER

Many women long for a child to bless their homes, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the entire female organism, curing all displacements, ulceration and inflammation.

A woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution. Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for thirty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be a great decrease in miscarriages, in suffering, and in disappointments at birth.

The following letters to Mrs. Pinkham demonstrate the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in such cases.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice-President of Milwaukee Business Woman's Association, of 614 Grove Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was married for several years and no children blessed our home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. For months I took his medicines, trying in vain for a cure, but at last my husband became disgusted and suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; this I did, and I improved steadily in health, and in less than two years a beautiful child came to bless our home. Now we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Mae P. Wharry, Secretary of the North Shore Oratorical Society, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me, and I am so glad I took it, for it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy one within seven months. Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

(Save the Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

W. J. Hill, of Concord, N. C., Justice of the Peace, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I used them for disordered kidneys and backache, from which I had experienced a great deal of trouble and pain. The kidney secretions were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The Pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My health generally is improved a great deal."

Decoration Day.

June, rich with leaves and waving grass,
The winds across her verdure pass,
And sweep through spaces overhead
Arched blue above a Nation's dead.

Their graves unnumbered many be
Wide scattered all by land and sea,
The sun and shadows o'er them fall
And night shall answer as their pall.

By ridge and lowland sound they rest
Rocked on the broad earth's heaving breast;
Where high she pulses into hills
Or, sinking into valleys, stills.

For them nor banners nor the strife
Nor winding ways of sensate life,
But evermore the bonds of peace
Hands folded, and the soul's release.

For them their country mourns today
For gray and blue, for blue and gray,
For those who fell in fiery storm
Whatever was their uniform.

The scar is healed, from North to South
Fled are the signs of battle-drouth,
And journeying on from South to North
A flower message flashes forth

To tell in blossoms how the land
By the bright bow of love is spanned,
With many a pitying flower strewn
Grave-garnered at the gates of June.

CHICAGO CHRONICLE

For Those Who Died

By JENNIE E. T. DOWIE

"What' Memorial day for, anyway?" Sam Silsbee stood in his corn field leaning upon his hoe, the morning sun shining upon his shriveled face and lighting up the red bandana which he wore loosely knotted about his throat. He spit out a spear of grass from his mouth and went on talking to Jason Elkins, who, also hoe in hand, was planting corn in an adjoining field.

"You know, Jason, just as well as I do, 't is all foledrol about soldiers a-dying for their country! They just happened to die. They was just after chasing the almighty dollar, and as Sim Sikes said when he enlisted, 'twas a good chance to go south and see the country and get paid for it into the bargain."

"Well," replied Jason, poking round with his hoe in the black earth, "no doubt there was some scallawags in the army, just as there is everywhere, but there was lots of brave fellows. I wish I could have gone; I have always felt streakled to think I didn't, though how to get away at the time, I couldn't see."

"And suppose they did die for their country," said Sam, "though I don't believe hide nor hair of it, but suppose they did, is that any reason why folks that are alive to-day should make fools of themselves a-banging and tooting with a drum and fife and a-scattering flowers on graves? 'Tis enough to make a horse laugh to see the men a-starting out a-marching and carrying all sorts of greens! And then the time that is lost? Did you ever try to figure it out? Well, I've kinder sorter kept a run of it in my head, and if folks would work the time they spend a-fooling 'round on Memorial day, even at small wages, I believe 'twould clear wipe out the national debt!"

"Yes—yes!" answered Jason, shaking his gray head, "no doubt all you say may be true. But, after all, there is something beside money to be thought of. Anyway, you can't complain that this town has spent much a-celebrating. We haven't never had a sign of a celebration!"

"Gracious goodness, I should hope not!" said Sam. "I have tried to scrape too close to get forehanded to have my money thrown away for nothing. My wife was bound to go up to my brother-in-law's last year on Memorial day, you know it is quite a place where they live, and so to pacify her I went. You never see such fool nonsense! I stayed around till about ten o'clock in the forenoon and then I harnessed up and came home, for I couldn't stand it any longer! I thought I'd seen fools before, but I hadn't. What do you suppose—why they had wreaths made o' laurel, such as will p'sen sheep, and any old sort of trash like apple blossoms and such! And they put them on Rob Kendall's grave and sung some sort of a hymn over him. I guess he had never heard a hymn before."

"True, true," said Jason, "there was some poor trash among the soldiers, but even Rob is remembered for his one brave act, and I don't see what hurt that can do! Nobody had set him up for wrong, but because he did a worthy action!"

"I'm thankful," said Sam, "that we haven't any soldiers' graves in our town. I suppose if we had, somebody would try to make a splurge!"

"They want to celebrate this year," replied Jason. "The young folks think we ought to do something, and then there is Jerry Long; I know he feels the way we do. He lost his arm as a soldier, and the town don't care enough about him to even have the church bell rung on Decoration day."

"Jerry Long," answered Sam, striking out viciously with his hoe. "Jerry Long was another fool. He went and enlisted. I remember all about it, and he's been a cripple to pay for it, and had to sneak out a living as he could, selling things in his little store. Suppose I had enlisted and come back with one arm; why I should have had to shuck along just as he has. Though I suppose his pension comes in handy, though I don't believe in pensions, 't is a waste of good money. How much will he give for celebrating? Not much, I reckon!"

"I think he would do more than his share," replied Jason. "A man that would go for a soldier would not shirk much in anything."

"Well," answered Sam, "if Jerry is so mortal anxious to have a celebration, let him go ahead. I'll give as much as he will give—say, I'll give twice as much!"

"Do you mean that, Sam?" asked Jason.

Sam hesitated, not expecting his words to be taken in dead earnest. But there was a sturdy as well as a stingy vein in Sam; beside, he reasoned that Jerry had nothing to give, so he finally replied, after considerable scratching of his head: "Yes, I mean it; I'll give twice as much for a celebration as Jerry Long will give!"

Jason emphatically nodded his head and went to planting corn as if his life depended upon his speed. Sam also resumed planting, chuckling to himself: "They can't say much against me now; I've got them sure."

Fancy Sam's astonishment, as evening approached, and he seated in the barnyard milking his best Devon cow, was visited by Jason, who remarked: "Well, Sam, Jerry has come up to the scratch; he's given me a check for $500!"

"I don't believe he's got $500," answered Sam; "he's a-fooling you!"

"No," replied Jason; "it is all right. He says he's always thought of leaving what little he's saved, to have some sort of a memorial to the soldiers, and he thinks now you will help, that he will give his money while he is alive, and see it spent according to his notion, which is to have a monument or hall, or something worth looking at. And he's going to save something back as a nest egg to keep up a perpetual yearly celebration in town, that is some sort of a proper notice of the day."

Sam got upon his feet, kicked the milking stool against the frisky Devon, who in turn kicked Sam, though without any greater injury to him than a skinned shank, and then turning to Jason, he said, with the air of a man accustomed to give away a thousand dollars every day: "I said I would do it, and I declare that I will, even if it breaks me!"

And do it he did. The effect of this giving upon Sam was marvelous. He had always been so close that he had never possessed the remotest idea of the pleasure which generosity could afford.

He not only gave the thousand dollars, but was first and foremost on every Decoration day to see that a proper celebration was carried out.

A handsome little library was built with the main part of the money, and Sam as well as Jerry looked close to see that everything was done in the best manner and with the best material.

"I don't spend a thousand dollars every day," Sam had said, "and when I do, I calculate to look after it."

Sam, or 'Squire Sillsbee, as he is now called, has also been heard to say more than once, that when he is dead, he hopes somebody will remember to put a posy upon his grave.—Portland Transcript.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Invaded the Diamond.

Hutchinson.—Wrapped in an American flag and bearing a copy of the Minnesota statutes, Mrs. M. Lillie Slaight Sunday took up the crusade against Sunday baseball in Hutchinson and invaded the diamond in an attempt to prevent the game. The crusade was begun by the Hutchinson clergymen, but was dropped when the city authorities declined to act on their petition to suppress Sunday games. A game between Hutchinson and Cokato teams was announced.

When the crowd assembled for the game, placards were found declaring that "to molest the flag while it is floating in defense of law is high treason." When George P. Jones—"Jones of Rock"—as umpire, called "Play ball," Mrs. Slaight, flag-enwrapped, took a position between pitcher and catcher. Chadderdon, the pitcher, tried curving the ball around her. Then two batteries were put on the field, and Mrs. Slaight dodged about, endeavoring to prevent play. She succeeded in blocking fast play, and the crowd took up solution of the problem, gathering closely around her and moving off the field, Mrs. Slaight protesting vehemently. The ruse succeeded and the game was played.

State Fair.

Hamline.—In recognition of the great increase in attention to vegetables and grains the managers of the fair have this year added largely to the premiums offered in the agricultural division. Not only have the detailed premiums for single varieties been overhauled and brought up to date, but some fifteen "lots" have been added.

For instance, $70 is offered for the best collection of potatoes; $100 for the best collection of corn; and $60 for the best collection of small grains. These are all new offers. Last year's $100 offer for the best general collection of vegetables (with $25 extra to the three exhibitors standing first, second and third); the $2,000 for county exhibits; the $125 for farm exhibits; the $225 for market gardeners association exhibits, all these stand as before. The mushroom premium has been increased from $50 to $75.

Lewis & Clark Exposition.

It is a noteworthy fact that the Lewis and Clark exposition is the [illegible] world's fair to be held west of the Rocky mountains which has secured the aid of the government.

And it is also surprising what an interest is manifested in the exposition by the people of the east. They see in the exposition an opportunity to visit the Western country at a greatly reduced expenditure of money, and not only the exposition itself, but view the wonders of the Western scenery, and witness the great resources of the Northwest and the opportunities afforded. The Great Northern railway passenger department has been flooded with inquiries as to the exposition, and it augurs well for a big travel through the Northwest this year.

Smallpox.

St. Paul.—State board of health reports for the week ending May 8, indicate that smallpox is increasing. For that week 102 new cases were reported. In the previous week, but 56 cases were reported. Lake Crystal reports twenty-five new cases. New cases reported from [illegible] other towns throughout the state are a follows: Butternut Valley, three; Camden, one; Shafer, eight; Minneapolis, five; Minneota, one; Big Woods, five; Manger, two; Truman, nine; Collinwood, three; Elizabeth, one; St. Paul, three; Eveleth, two; St. Augusta, one; St. Cloud, two; St. Wendall, six; Sarah, seven; Owatonna, one; Stockholm, nine; Victor, seven.

Postoffice Robbed.

Stillwater.—The postoffice safe at St. Paul Park was blown open with dynamite at an early hour in the morning. The cracksmen secured $91.50. Two suspicious men were seen about the village two days before the robbery.

The postmaster is J. W. Trickey, who has conducted a general store for over fifteen years. The postoffice was adjacent to his store, with no interior communication. Mrs. William O'Brien is assistant to the postmaster and lives across the street from the postoffice. She heard a noise at 2 o'clock, but not knowing what caused it, did not give an alarm.

Revenue Fund.

The general revenue fund of the state shows a deficit of $19,000. This deficit seems bound to increase for months to come. The last legislature appropriated $645,000 to be available before July 31, but failed to make any provision for creating the sum. The monthly drafts on the general revenue fund are about $400,000, and all it can stand. The indications are that before many months the state will have to borrow considerable money.

Accepts Invitation.

Moorhead.— Superintendent R. E. Denfeld of Duluth has accepted the invitation extended to him to deliver the address before the graduation class of the Moorhead high school at the exercises on Friday, May 26.

Free grounds and Court house.

The people of Clearwater county, after three royal battles with ballots, against oppression, tyranny and personal abuse by a hand ful of would be politicians and dictators at the present county seat, have issued a call for a petition to change the present county seat of Clearwater County from Bagley, to Shevlin in aforesaid county. Three times by two-thirds majority have the people of the county turned down the enormous amount asked for a court house in a new and yet undeveloped county like Clearwater. when the "de gang" seen it was unable to manipulate the voters of the county, they resorted to the state legislature in session at St Paul, and induced the legistors from our district both upper and lower house to push a bill through the legislature giving the commissioners power to erect a court house for a certain supposed limited amount; but, logically speaking unlimited. Our representative upon calling for a standing upon the question by the people of the country, was given ahumbug petition containing some 700 petitioners(§)(claimed) containing therein names of minors, Canadians, besides hundreds of names stole from honest farmers upon false statements and misrepresentation made by canvassers from Bagley. When this bill became a law there was great rejoicing among the "trappers". They had now "fooled" the "foolish" farmers for a certainty. They had robbed them of tliere vote, the most sacred priviliege of an American citizen; trampled under foot their three former elections with one stroke of the Governor's pen, and that "peach" of a court house was to be built at Bagley at once. A special meeting of the commissioners was called in all secrecy, but the truth leaked out. The farmers at once organized and presented a remonstrance petition to the commissioners against issuing bonds under the present circumstances. The commisioners respected the people as their representatives and voted down bonds to "de gangs" deep chagrin. This "special court house bill for Bagley" aroused the farmers of the county to action. Bagley threw down the gauntlet the people accepted their challenge as a declaration of war, the the result which is to day the pending county seat fight between Bagley and Shevlin. Bagley has always opposed the wishes of the majoriy of the people in the county by everlastingly crying for high bonds, and with this special bonding law caped the climax. The people seen a ray of hope in the distance. Shevlin was still here; they offered them the county seat. Shevlin proved itself worthy for the occassion by offering to erect a courthouse at the cost of $5000.00 and grounds free to the county, because of their liberal offer. There is no question which the people are going to support. Bagley has asked from $60,000.00 to $15,000 00 in bonds all the time. while Shevlin proposes to erect one for $5000.00 and present it to the county Thus Clearwater county will be without dept on its public buildings. As a matter of distance to the proposed county seat it does not matter much to the farmers in the north part of the county. Roads to Shevlin are just as good if not better, and it takes two days to make the trip any way; expenses the same if not less. Besides husling for Shevlin the county will at least profit by a sum between $40,000.00 or $50.000. 00 in the next twenty years.

OHIO MARRIAGE LAW

DRUNKENNESS AN INSURMOUNTABLE BAR TO MARITAL UNION.

Buckeye State Purposes to See That Evolution of the Race in That Part of the World Is in the Right Direction—An Upright Judge.

If a man who drinks has a sweetheart in Ohio he should sober up thoroughly before applying to the state courts for a marriage license. If he is in the class known as "habitual drunkards" he should avoid the state entirely when he seeks to wed.

The action of Probate Judge Miller of Lima, O., in refusing a marriage license to an applicant because the applicant is a habitual drunkard brings knowledge to the rest of the world that Ohio has a new marriage license law, passed by the last legislature, which is far more stringent than any previous law on the subject.

In making application for a license in Ohio it is now necessary for the prospective bride and groom to appear before the probate court and swear to their answers to a long list of questions bearing on relationship extending back two generations and to certify to their own moral standing. They must be free from the whisky or drug habit, and this law especially prohibits the marriage of drunkards.

When asked his opinion of the new law the judge stated that in his opinion it is one of the best measures ever passed by any state legislature. If rigidly enforced by probate courts much future misery will be avoided, many women will be saved from the humiliation and shame, poverty and woe incident to marital relations with inebriates, and the streets and bawdy houses of the land will have far fewer recruits.

Not only all this, but the poorhouses insane asylums, epileptic asylums prisons and reformatories will have fewer inmates.

More than all this, the judge believes the new law will, when its workings are fully understood by the youth of the state, have a very great tendency to elevate the morals, cause less indulgence in drink and the many vices prevalent, the young knowing that if the law is properly enforced they must be clean morally, mentally and physically in order to enter into that state looked forward to by the great majority of the youth as the climax of happiness.

"It has been my observation," Judge Miller says, "that men seldom change their habits radically, at least for the better, after arriving at maturity, and for the influence of the new law upon the youth of the state I have the greatest anticipations."

Judge A. D. Miller is fifty years of age and has a large family of children, a daughter, Miss Freda, occupying the position of marriage license clerk in his office. He is serving his second term in the office and is one of the most popular officials in northwestern Ohio.

DRINK AND LONGEVITY.

What the Books of the Life Insurance Companies Show.

At the recent convention in Philadelphia of the actuaries of all the recognized life insurance companies of the United States and Canada J. G. Van Cise of the Equitable Life Assurance society of New York read a paper on "Effects of Total Abstinence on the Death Rate." He said that there was no doubt that total abstainers lived longer than persons who imbibed even moderately.

An address, entitled "A Graduation of Specialized Mortality Experience," by Arthur Hunter of the New York Life Insurance company contained some interesting statistics.

Mr. Hunter showed that persons who have slow pulses, say in the neighborhood of sixty beats to the minute, live longer than the average period, and in persons who have high or fast pulses the mortality is above the normal.

"Liquor dealers," he said, "even though they be total abstainers, are much above the normal in mortality, showing that their environment is unhealthful. Among those who have taken a cure for the liquor or drug habit the mortality is high."

Dress Clothes For Foreign Travels.

"Here's a tip for you," said the man who has traveled to the one, who is about starting for the other side. "Take your evening clothes, but if you are traveling light leave your frock coat suit at home. Even the Englishman of fashion no longer considers it absolutely necessary to appear in the daytime in his frock coat and silk beaver. For myself, a good serge is the thing in which to knock about the continent. The man who takes his frock and leaves his swallowtail at home is out of his reckoning. Over there at dinner, even in what we'd call a cheap lunch joint here, you'll find plenty of men carefully garbed in evening clothes. Dinner is a ceremony to dress for even though one be not rich." —Philadelphia Record.

Literature Versus Nature.

The essay naturalist observes and admires; the scientific naturalist collects. One brings home a bouquet from the woods; the other, specimens for his herbarium. The former would enlist your sympathies and arouse your enthusiasm; the latter would add to your store of exact knowledge. The one is just as shy of overcoloring or falsifying his facts as the other, only he gives more than facts; he gives impressions and analogies and as far as possible shows you the live bird on the bough.—John Burroughs in Atlantic.

The fellow who never has anything of importance to say always manages to say it.—Philadelphia Record.

HELPING THE ENEMY.

False to Say That the Reciprocity of Blaine Is Repudiated.

It is the Pittsburg Dispatch, professedly a Republican and not a Democratic newspaper, which says this:

"Mr. Littlefield's declaration that the Republican party is strictly in line with the Blaine-McKinley-Dingley view of protection evades the fact that reciprocity, which both Blaine and McKinley advocated, is now repudiated, and his citation of tin prices as a proof that tariff and trusts have no relations is unfortunate in omitting the prices since the combination in that industry was formed."

To say that the reciprocity which Blaine and McKinley advocated is now repudiated is to falsify the facts. Blaine was a lifelong opponent of reciprocity in competitive products, and McKinley, in the Buffalo speech that has been so distorted and perverted, was careful to stipulate that when trade treaties should be entered into they must be of a character "not to curtail domestic production" and "not to injure any domestic interest." As to tin plate prices, Congressman Littlefield did exactly what he set out to do —demonstrated beyond question that as the direct result of the development of that industry under the McKinley tariff an enormous reduction had taken place in the price paid by American consumers. From the tone of some of its editorials it would seem that the Dispatch thinks the Democratic party needs more support in Pittsburg.

A PERIOD OF MISERY.

Conditions That Existed Under the Last Democratic Tariff.

The conditions existing under the last Democratic tariff law have been described by no one better than by the president of the American Federation of Labor, a Democrat, who said, on Jan. 1, 1898, "That terrible period for the wage earners of the country which began in 1893 and which left behind it such a record of horror, hunger and misery practically ended with the dawn of the year 1897." That was the "dawn" of another Republican administration.

Shall we take any chance of returning to that condition? Are the people willing to elect a Democratic president or a Democratic house of representatives, relying solely on the continuation of a Republican senate (that may at any time and from many different causes become Democratic) to save the country from another period of "horror, hunger and misery" to American wage earners?—Jamestown (N. Y.) Post

How to Clean Silk Dresses.

A little ammonia in a few teaspoonfuls of alcohol is excellent to sponge silk dresses that have grown shiny or rusty, as well as to take out spots. A silk, particularly a black, becomes almost like new when so sponged.

Waiter Couldn't Help Them Out.

A [illegible] society man was once spending a few days with his wife at Atlantic City, and in connection with his visit he told the following story: When he seated himself in the dining room on the evening of his arrival he discovered that he could not read the menu, as he had left his glasses in his room, and his eyes were useless without them. When he passed it to his wife she exclaimed that she was in the same predicament. At a loss to know what to do, the gentleman called the waiter to him and, pointing to the menu, said:

"Read that to me and I will give you a dollar."

Quick as a flash the waiter replied:

"Scuse me, boss, but I ain't had much ejication maself!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Webster on Debt.

Once when Daniel Webster was riding along a New England road in a stagecoach, so the story runs, he was annoyed by the jolting and poked his head out of the window to yell at the driver: "Hey! Can't you drive a little slower?" "No," responded the coachman; "the horses are running away, sir." "Run 'em into a fence corner," advised Daniel. "Can't, sir," said the driver reluctantly and despairingly. "They've got the bit between their teeth, sir!" "Well, run them into debt then!" thundered Daniel. "That'll stop anything!"

A Poacher's Ruse.

A poacher, writing in the Country Gentleman of London, says: "When I left home at night to go poaching I always left an end of a candle burning in a saucer of water in my bedroom. This was arranged so that it would splutter out about 10 o'clock, just as if I had extinguished it and retired for the night. This I did because I discovered that the keepers were given to watching my house for signs of my leaving, and it was a long time before they found that a candle could go out without human agency."

The Yorkshireman's Coat of Arms.

Allow me to submit to you the Yorkshireman's coat of arms as it was given to me many years ago by a Yorkshireman. It runs thus: A flea, a fly, a magpie and a flitch of bacon—a flea, because he will bite his best friend; a fly because he will drink from anybody's cup; a magpie, because he will chatter with anybody; a flitch of bacon, because he is no good until he is hung.—London Spectator.

She Knew.

A certain old lady always knew everything before anybody else. One day her niece saw her passing the house and ran out to meet her. "Do come in, aunty," she begged, "and help us. We are making charades."

"Certainly I will," answered the old lady. "I knew you were making them because I smelled them as I came along."

Queen Bess' Wardrobe.

Royal annals have never recorded a more varied and extensive wardrobe than that which belonged to the "virgin queen." Even at the age of sixty-eight, when she might be supposed to have outlived her youthful vanity, she possessed 99 complete official costumes, 102 French gowns, 100 robes with trains and 67 without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 tunics, not to mention such trifles as 96 mantles, 85 dressing gowns and 27 fans.

It is possible that she had an ugly foot, for she possessed only nine pairs of shoes, which, considering her extravagances in other articles of apparel, must have some meaning. At her death 3,000 articles were found duly catalogued in her wardrobe which had adorned her proud person.

The following lines, found in an old book, improbable as they may seem on first reading, lose all their improbability by inserting semicolons after the words in italics:

I saw a cloud begirt with ivy round
I saw a sturdy oak creep on the ground
I saw an ant swallow up a whale
I saw the boiling sea brimful of ale
I saw a vial glass fifteen yards deep
I saw a well full of man's tears that weep
I saw a man's eyes all in a flame of fire
I saw a house high as the moon or higher
I saw the radiant sun even at midnight
I saw a man who saw this wondrous sight.

Novel Advertising.

A tailor at Boston, England, has thought out one of the most novel advertising schemes which have yet been brought to notice. He has placed ten turtles in his window, and on the back of each turtle is painted one letter of the tailor's name. He has offered a prize of $10 to any one who sees the turtles lined up so that the letters are in the order in which they appear in his name.

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Color Bearer of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, of 1628 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Colo., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.:
Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For five years I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and great mental depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope.

"I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief; but to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

"The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative powers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such trouble.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine:

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Health is too valuable to risk in experiments with unknown and untried medicines or methods of treatment. Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

BY MR. S. B. HEGE.

B. & O. R. R. Passenger Agent, Washington, D. C., Tells of Wonderful Cure of Eczema by Cuticura.

Mr. S. B. Hege, passenger agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in Washington, D. C., one of the well-known railroad men of the country, sends the following grateful letter in praise of the Cuticura Remedies:

"Thanks to the Cuticura Remedies, I am now rid of that fearful pest, weeping eczema, for the first time in three years. It first appeared on the back of my hand in the form of a little pimple, growing into several blotches, and then on my ears and ankles. They were exceedingly painful because of the itching and burning sensation, and always raw. After the first day's treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, there was very little of the burning and itching, and the cure now seems to be complete. I shall be glad to aid in relieving others suffering as I was, and you may use my letter as you wish. (Signed) S. B. Hege, Washington, D. C., June 9, '04."

Agricultural and Horticultural Colonies on the Kansas City Southern Railway.

Lockesburg Colony in Sevier County, Arkansas, containing about 30,000 acres, and Loring Colony in Sabine Parish, Louisiana, containing about 24,000 acres, are now open for settlement. Lands range in price from $7.00 to $15.00 per acre, and are sold on easy terms to actual settlers. Lockesburg Colony is well suited for General Farming, stock raising and commercial fruit growing. Loring Colony lies in a splendid fruit, truck and tobacco region, and is good for corn and cotton also. Both are situated in a beautiful country, with a healthy climate and excellent water. Conviction Follows Trial

When buying loose coffee or anything your grocer happens to have in his bin, how do you know what you are getting? Some queer stories about coffee that is sold in bulk, could be told, if the people who handle it (grocers), cared to speak out.

Could any amount of mere talk have persuaded millions of housekeepers to use

Lion Coffee,

the leader of all package coffees for over a quarter of a century, if they had not found it superior to all other brands in

This popular success of LION COFFEE can be due only to inherent merit. There is no stronger proof of merit than continued and increasing popularity.

If the verdict of MILLIONS OF HOUSEKEEPERS does not convince you of the merits of LION COFFEE, it costs you but a trifle to buy a package. It is the easiest way to convince yourself, and to make you a PERMANENT PURCHASER.

Back at Work Again.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 22nd.—(Special)—Crippled by Kidney Disease till he could not stand on his feet for the hours required at his trade, F. R. McLean, 90 East Ferry St., this city, had to quit work entirely. Now he's back at work again and he does not hesitate to give the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes," Mr. McLean says, "I was too bad, I had to quit. I could not stand on my feet for the necessary hours. It was Kidney Disease I had, and a friend advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I did so and after using six boxes am completely cured and am working as steadily as before I was sick. I recommend Dodd's Pills to anyone afflicted with Kidney trouble."

There is no form of Kidney Disease Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. They always cure Bright's Disease, the most advanced and deadly stage of Kidney Disease.

Railroads and Progress.

In his testimony before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce at Washington on May 4th, Prof. Hugo R. Meyer, of Chicago University, an expert on railroad management, made this statement:—

"Let us look at what might have happened if we had heeded the protests of the farmers of New York and Ohio and Pennsylvania (in the seventies when grain from the west began pouring to the Atlantic seaboard) and acted upon the doctrine which the Interstate Commerce Commission has enunciated time and again, that no man may be deprived of the advantages accruing to him by virtue of his geographical position. We could not have west of the Mississippi a population of millions of people who are prosperous and are great consumers. We never should have seen the years when we built 10,000 and 12,000 miles of railway, for there would have been no farmers west of the Mississippi River who could have used the land that would have been opened up by the building of those railways. And if we had not seen the years when we could build 10,000 and 12,000 miles of railway a year, we should not have to-day east of the Mississippi a steel and iron producing center which is at once the marvel and the despair of Europe, because we could not have built up a steel and iron industry if there had been no market for its product.

"We could not have in New England a great boot and shoe industry; we could not have in New England a great cotton milling industry; we could not have spread throughout New York and Pennsylvania and Ohio manufacturing industries of the most diversified kinds, because those industries would have no market among the farmers west of the Mississippi River.

"And while the progress of this country, while the development of the agricultural West of this country, did mean the impairment of the agricultural value east of the Mississippi River that ran up into hundreds of millions of dollars, it meant incidentally the building up of great manufacturing industries that added to the value of this land by thousands of millions of dollars. And, gentlemen, those things were not foreseen in the seventies. The statesmen and the public men of this country did not see what part the agricultural development of the West was going to play in the industrial development of the East. And you may read the decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission from the first to the last, and what is one of the greatest characteristics of those decisions? The continued inability to see the question in this large way.
